Senators Slash Funds Of Nonwar Agencies

Mellett's OGR Is Among Hardest Hit, Taking $406,270 Cut; Few Escape

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Senate Appropriations Committee, after weeks of belt-tightening advice to nonwar agencies, yesterday let fly with both barrels of an economy shotgun at more than a score of bureaus, boards, offices and commissions in the Independent Offices Bill.

When the smoke had cleared, Lowell Mellett's Office of Government Reports had taken a cut of $406,270, the National Resources Planning Board had been nicked for $868,845 and operating funds of the Export-Import Bank had been eliminated.

It was the Senate committee's first thoroughgoing pruning of a bill since Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, "served notice" and reflected the combined influence of the Tydings and Byrd economy inquiries.

Few Agencies Escape

Few of the many agencies escaped pruning, with mileage and traveling allowances especially singled out for cuts ranging from 10 to 33 1-3 per cent. The Tennessee Valley Authority was taken off a revolving fund basis and required to turn its power sale receipts into the Treasury. Hereafter it would operate on funds directly appropriated by Congress.

One of the severest cuts was taken by the Office of Government Reports. The House appropriation of $1,500,000 for the next fiscal year's operations was slashed to $1,093,730, the amount allowed Mellett for the current year. In addition, the President was restricted from allotting the office more than $500,000 additional. This year the President has allotted the office an extra $800,000 from blank-check appropriations.

Senator McKellar said the appropriation would not prevent the OGR from moving into "Mellett's Madhouse," its new building hastily completed at Fourteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, "but they haven't enough funds to occupy but a part of the building."

No Room for Frills

"They will have to economize sharply, and they can't use the very large staff they had planned, but we have allowed them enough money to do a real job of information if it is properly spent. We haven't allowed enough for any frills."

The other White House agency to take a going-over was the National Resources Planning Board, headed by Frederic A. Delano, an uncle of the President. The committee elimi-

Eviction Because Tenants Had Child Denied Landlord

Judge James R. Duncan of Alexandria Civil Court yesterday dismissed an eviction suit against a young couple who became parents after movng into an apartment house catering to adults only.

The suit was filed by Newman H. Raymond, owner of the apartment house, against Mr. and Mrs. James A. Jones of 1801 DeWitt Avenue, Alexandria, charging that the birth of a baby daughter, Barbara Lee, six months ago, violated the terms of the lease.

The judge, in dismissing the case, found that the lease contained restrictive provisions concerning the number of adults and pets per apartment, but no reference to children.

Prelude to All-Out Rationing

OPA's New Price Ceilings To Cover Nearly Everything

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Office of Price Administration officials were ironing out last-minute problems and administrative procedure yesterday on an over-all price-fixing order expected to be issued Wednesday and to become effective at once.

The order, it was learned, will not be a "freezing" instruction, but rather will fix ceiling prices at manufacturing, wholesale and retail levels as of a date some time last month. All commodities will be covered except certain agricultural items where the Price Control Act's authority does not extend, seasonal fruits and vegetables, where administrative difficulties make ceilings impractical; items already subject to detailed price schedules set by OPA and a few other minor items.

The order is expected to be followed within a few weeks by a sharp step-up in the rationing program, extending to many items of food and clothing.

The rationing plan, devised in part to ease the pressure exerted by excess purchasing power against general price ceilings will probably be similar to the British group and "point" system, with a specified number of points given each consumer. These authorize him to buy from among a group of related items, such as clothing. Each item in the group would have a value of a given number of points, such as 10 for a pair of socks, 200 for an overcoat, and so on.

The rationing system, the OPA feels, is one of several steps that must be taken to relieve what would otherwise be irresistible pressure to break through the price ceilings. The other measures, expected to be announced by President Roosevelt Monday, are virtually confiscatory corporation taxes above a specified margin of profit, wage rise limitations and an intensified campaign for savings by the threat of compulsory savings if the voluntary plan is not effective.

The OPA fears, however, that there will still be a "gap" between the Nation's greatly expanded purchasing power and the drastically constricted number of articles which consumers can buy. By rationing many consumer items the effect of this excess money is in part sterilized, according to the

Social Justice Probers Call 10 New Witnesses

Coughlin's Employes Also Are Summoned By Grand Jury Here

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Ten more witnesses were subpenaed yesterday by the special grand jury on Axis agents which is investigating charges of sedition against the weekly magazine, Social Justice.

The new witnesses were ordered to appear Tuesday.

From Social Justice:

Mary May Shulle, circulation and office manager; Mrs. Virginia Robinson Palmer, manager for bulk sales; Cora Quinlan, secretary-treasurer of Social Justice Publishing Co.; Bernard O'Connor, editorial writer; Letty Faber, clerk; Frank Traynick, office worker, and Miss Gwynetta Chappelle, writer.

From the offices of Charles E. Coughlin:

Eugenia Burke, private secretary; Marie Rhodes and Bernice Marks, office employes.

Summonses for the latter three were addressed to Twelve Mile Road and Woodward Avenue, Royal Oak, Mich. This is the address of the Church of the Little Flower, where Father Coughlin is pastor and has his offices.

Neither Hickey nor Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and John T. M. Reddan would discuss the subpenas, so that it was not clear why Coughlin's employes were being summoned.

Coughlin Issues Challenge

Coughlin started Social Justice in 1938, after winning a following as a radio rabble rouser. His agitation was firmly disavowed by Catholic prelates and in 1940 Coughlin declared that he had no further responsibility for the magazine.

Nevertheless when Attorney General Biddle called Social Justice "clearly seditious" and ordered the grand jury investigation, Coughlin challenged the Department of Justice to call him to Washington.

When this was ignored, Coughlin announced that he assumed "full

'Sensation' Due in Patent Probe Today

Inquiry to Get Data On Invention Kept From Arms Makers

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The Senate Patents Committee is scheduled today to hear how a monopoly in an American patent is responsible for a continuing shutdown of production facilities in an important war industry.

The nature of the patent, the article patented and the industry affected were carefully guarded secrets last night, but Creekmore Fath, committee counsel, asserted that "practically every member of the industry has asked for a license to manufacture under the patent and has been denied that right."

A committee survey of the industry yesterday, he stated, disclosed that machine shops all over the country are idle because manufacture cannot be continued without the patented product.

Documentary evidence establishing the sensational nature of the disclosure has been gathered by Department of Justice investigators. Some of the evidence was obtained yesterday afternoon. Notified that the department would be able to present a complete story of the monopoly, Chairman Bone (Democrat) of Washington, decided that his committee would hear the evidence in a session at 10 o'clock this morning, rather than take a weekend recess.

Declaring the evidence to be "the biggest thing we've hit yet," Fath predicted that the disclosure would be the "smash story" of two weeks of hearing during which the committee received charges that American-German patent-pooling arrangements have restricted production essential to the Nation's rearmament.

Fath emphasized that today's hearing would concern a patent owned wholly in the United States. President Roosevelt's order this week, he pointed out, was aimed solely at seizure of alien or alien-American patents under the Alien Property Act. The present patent may be reached, he stated, by a new seizure order expected to be issued under the President's war powers.

Unless monopolistic practices are restrained, the Government "runs

And You Don't Have to Take It

Specific Cure for Head Colds Promised by Humble Carrot

(New Medicine Discovered in Haystacks Dissolves Blood Clots. Page 5.)

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, April 24.—The common head cold, a baneful puzzle to doctors as long as the medical profession has existed, may join the list of conquered diseases, and through the agency of the humble carrot.

After seven years of research, a group of scientists believe—guardly—that they have developed a specific remedy for the malady which annually takes a greater toll of man-hours in industry than any other ailment, which costs the American people millions of dollars each year, and which, incidentally, is a miserable thing to suffer.

The answer, they believe, is carotene, a creamy white derivative of the common carrot. Or rather, it's a new substance, provitamin A factor 3, extracted from carotene. And you don't swallow it, or have it injected into you—you just rub it on yourself.

The material was developed by the Llewellyn Biological Institute of West Los Angeles, of which Dr. R. L. Cunningham is director. Already it has been tried on 150 patients with what he describes as effective results.

"It is in the hands of a number of physicians at present," said Dr. Cunninham, "and as soon as we test it on 5000 more patients we will know definitely what we have. Al-

Arms Output Beyond Goal; Sights Lifted

Estimate of Spending For Next Fiscal Year Is Moved Up From 56 to 70 Billions

The Administration's revised estimates for the 1943 fiscal year war spending yesterday shot upward from 56 billion to 70 billion dollars as the President hinted at further expansion of America's already astronomical war production goals.

The President's report of extremely good progress in producing the tools of war, and indications of an enlarged program to come, was followed by Budget Director Harold Smith's sharp upward revision of war spending estimates.

Contrasting with Hitler's reported purge of German industrial leaders because of failure to stay ahead in the armament race, the budget revision showed America's weekly war spending up 70 per cent since Pearl Harbor, and two billion more added to 26 billion dollar estimate of fiscal 1942 war outlays, made in January.

Expansion Outdoes Hopes

Smith attributed this and a 14 billion dollar mark-up in the next fiscal year's now estimated 70 billion dollar war spending level to more rapid than expected expansion of war production and conversion.

Total Government expenditures of all kinds during the 1943 fiscal year starting July 1 were raised to $77,500,000,000 compared with $63,300,000,000 over-all spending estimate in January, Smith said.

The House Ways and Means Committee, writing a war tax measure to foot the bill, meanwhile received the revised budget estimates from

Output Off, Nazi Plane Maker Jailed

London, April 24 (U.P.).—Heinrich Koppenberg, manager of Germany's Junkers Aircraft Works, has been imprisoned by Adolf Hitler, who is "purging" the chiefs of Germany's war industries for failing to match the rising output of American factories, informed sources said tonight.

Koppenberg was reported sent to the dreaded Dachau concentration camp.

Unions Propose Lund to Head WPB Labor Division

By the Associated Press

Wendell Lund, executive director of the Michigan Unemployment Compensation Commission, is the choice of an A. F. L.-C. I. O. committee to head the new Labor Production Division in the War Production Board, informed sources disclosed last night.

Representatives of the two labor organizations submitted Lund's name to President Roosevelt yesterday at a White House meeting. If appointed, Lund would direct a reorganized version of the labor division which Sidney Hillman headed. The old labor division was abolished when the President created the Man Power Mobilization Commission a week ago.

General Motors, U.A.W. Deadlocked In Contract Talks

By the United Press

Detroit, April 24.—Federal Conciliator James F. Dewey tonight reported a deadlock between representatives of the General Motors Corporation and the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.) seeking renewal of a labor contract covering approximately 150,000 hourly paid workers in 32 General Motors plants throughout the country.

Dewey said he would leave for Washington tonight to confer with Secretary of Labor Perkins regarding certification of the dispute to the War Labor Board.

Dewey said the union and company were hopelessly deadlocked on five major union demands.

Funds at Stake

Hearings Near End, Roosevelt Plans for NYA, CCC Still Untold

A House Appropriations Subcommittee yesterday awaited word from President Roosevelt on plans for the future of the National Youth Administration and the Civilian Conservation Corps after completing hearings on all major items in the Labor-Federal Security appropriation bill which normally carries funds for the two agencies.

Unless estimates for the agencies, whose contribution to the war effort has long been the subject of public controversy, reach the Capitol next week, it is possible that the bill may go to the House without funds to carry CCC and NYA beyond the close of this fiscal year on June 30.

Representative Hare (Democrat) of South Carolina, subcommittee chairman, said it is expected that the hearings will close Tuesday after additional testimony is taken on minor matters.

Hare stated that CCC and NYA appropriation estimates have yet to be submitted by the Budget Bureau, while from another source it was learned that members of the subcommittee have been given no indication of the form in which the President expects to continue the agencies.

Inquiry at the Budget Bureau was answered by reference to the President's budget message last January, when Mr. Roosevelt informed Congress that he was "postponing until next spring presentation of specific recommendations as to youth aid."

Because of wartime employment opportunities, the President said, it was "possible to make a considerable reduction in the programs of the CCC and NYA." Mr. Roosevelt proposed a 150 million dollar appropriation for the agencies, including 50 millions for training for war industries, but stated that the total amount probably would not be needed.

Controversy over continuation of the agencies has centered in the Senate Labor Committee in weeks of hearings on legislation sponsored by Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, who favors abolition of CCC and NYA, except for certain of their war functions, which he would transfer to other agencies.

U. S. Atlantic Convoy Routs 9 Subs, Saving Great Liner; R. A. F. Shifts Fury to Holland

British Blast Foe In Dutch Port of Flushing; Big Baltic Plane Plant Smashed

By the Associated Press

London, April 24.—The largest force of R. A. F. fighters ever sent against a single objective escorted bombers attacking the Netherlands port of Flushing by daylight today, following up a predawn assault on the Heinkel aircraft factories and the German Baltic port of Rostock in which, the air ministry said, massed bombers loosed the "greatest weight of bombs" in the service's history.

In saying the fighter group was the largest ever employed, the air ministry declined to disclose the actual number.

Nine fighters were lost in the Flushing raid and in sweeps over northern France, while five Nazi planes were destroyed. One of these was a Junkers 52 troop transport, shot down in flames by two American Eagle pilot officers, Arnold Skinner, of Webb City, Mo., and William Daley, of Amarillo, Tex.

But it was the Rostock attack which dominated the R. A. F.'s operations of the last 24 hours.

Rostock Fires Visible 90 Miles

The air ministry said the hour-long raid on Rostock and the Heinkel works, which cost four planes, started gigantic fires visible more than 90 miles at sea

The "very heavy" explosive bombs set the town and harbor ablaze in an attack officially said to have been as "effective as that on Luebeck."

The tremendous attack of March 28 on Luebeck, 60 miles southwest of Rostock, was a landmark in the campaign to sap the power of the German offensive preparations in the east and north by wrecking industrial areas. British authorities say 40 per cent of Luebeck's main area was destroyed, on the basis of photographic evidence.

Surprise Attack Near Leningrad

Reds Strike Through Forest To 'Pulverize' Nazi Bastions

By the United Press

London, April 24.—Gen. K. A. Meretskov's Red army of the north, striking unexpectedly through 45 miles of forests and bogs, pulverized a section of the German front line below Leningrad and drove 1 to 2 miles deep into the enemy fortifications, a Kuibyshev dispatch said tonight.

Tank units led Meretskov's foray through the wilderness for the surprise attack in which 120 German strongholds were destroyed and 130 mine throwers and quantities of other equipment captured, the report said.

The assault was climaxed by a violent battle in the forest, where the first German resistance was encountered. More than 600 German troops were slain and the way cleared for the Russian advance.

Caught off guard, the Germans were easy prey for the Soviet force, apparently having depended heavily for protection on the "inaccessible terrain" through which Meretskov's men struck.

Crimea Stronghold Of Nazis Recaptured

Kuibyshev, April 24 (AP).—Recapture of the "Golden Range," a German stronghold in the Crimea, was announced today by the Russians, who said the advance of spring was improving conditions for increasing the Red army's counteroffensive.

The "Golden Range" was not specifically located in the account by Red Star, official army newspaper, but its reduction was declared to have followed four days of bitter fighting in which the Germans once routed the Russians, but finally withdrew or surrendered.

Some indication of the size of action was given in the announce-

6000 Jap Casualties

By the Associated Press

New Delhi, India, April 24.—Mechanized Japanese vanguards have reached the Taunggyi area within 100 miles of vital Mandalay in a thrust of nearly 80 miles northward from the region of fallen Loikaw, a Chinese communique disclosed tonight.

This force was located at the town of Hopong, 10 miles east of Taunggyi, in confirmation of a previous announcement from British headquarters that the Chinese were locked in violent combat with the invader in that region.

The Chinese announcement stated that 40 enemy aircraft had been continuously bombing the Chinese positions, which are at the left of the Allied Burma line, and that there were heavy casualties on both sides in continuing fighting.

6000 Japanese Casualties

On the Toungoo front, far to the southwest of this action, Chungking's communique reported the Japanese had suffered 3000 casualties in a week's fighting between the Swa River and the town of Pyinmana, and that in four days about Pyinmana itself 3000 invaders had been killed or wounded against Chinese losses of 1000 killed or wounded.

Fighting on that front was said now to be centered about Tatkon, which is 30 miles north of Pyinmana.

Hitler Moves To Forestall French Revolt

Orders Drastic Action To Stem Rising Tide of Resistance

By Ralph Heinzen
United Press Staff Writer

Vichy, April 24.—Hitler has ordered merciless repression of terrorism in occupied France, entrusting it to Prince Josias of Waldeck-Pyrmont, old-line Nazi, it was learned today as the wave of incidents started by Pierre Laval's return to power spread to the unoccupied zone with two bomb explosions at Montpellier.

(The London radio, heard in New York, said the Germans reportedly had made 100 arrests in Boulogne and taken disciplinary action against the local authorities, including police and military, because of alleged help to the British given by inhabitants in the commando raid there Wednesday. After the commando raid on St. Nazaire, it said, the Germans were understood to have killed 500 Frenchmen.)

Supersedes Other Authorities

Handpicked by Hitler for the task of stamping out attacks on German soldiers and sabotage against the German war effort, Prince Josias was accompanied to Paris as commander of German police activities in France by a strong force of storm troopers. These Germans hold posts of priority over French police and the German military and civil authorities in all police matters and repression.

Housed in mansions or luxurious apartment houses at the edges of the city, they have at their disposal more than 400 tanks parked at strategic points along a 25-mile circle around Paris.

Prince Josias has the title of Fuehrer over his storm troop force, but in reality his post is that of police gauleiter, with absolute power in all police matters.

The terroristic bomb explosions at Montpellier came as Laval, new chief of government, sped reorganization of his own police network. The bombs at Montpellier were

Report on Marie

Quin's Leg, Once Treated With Radium, Is 'Wasting'

By the Associated Press

Toronto, April 24.—Marie Dionne, smallest of the quintuplets, has a definite wasting of the right thigh and calf, but there is conclusive evidence that no organic nervous lesion is present, three physicians reported today following an examination at Toronto Hospital for sick children.

Marie came here yesterday to be examined for a suspected muscular atrophy of her right leg, from which a tumor was removed by radium treatment when she was nine weeks old. The quintuplets will be 8 years old May 28.

Two Toronto specialists, Dr. George F. Boyer, senior member of the hospital staff, and Dr. John Laing McDonald, and the quintuplets' own physician, Dr. I. Joyal, issued a joint statement as follows:

"This child has definite wasting of the right thigh and calf. It is not, according to previous examination, associated with changes that indicate any abnormality of the nerves of the thigh, leg and foot. Under electrical stimulation the muscles of the thigh, leg and foot react in a normal way and equal with those of the same muscles on the left side. This is conclusive evidence of no organic nervous lesion."

Marie was to return by automobile to her Callander home today. Oliva Dionne, the quintuplets' father, was in the party that brought Marie to Toronto.

'Blast Those—'

By John A. Moroso 3d
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the Atlantic Fleet, April 23 (delayed).—An Axis submarine ambush to destroy a group of American naval vessels and the huge prize they convoyed recently was frustrated by cool, skillful daring as one of the most exciting voyages ever taken by Uncle Sam's bluejackets neared a highly successful ending.

This thrill-packed venture saw one of our destroyers rescue the survivors of two ships sunk near us. It saw our planes rout a U-boat engaged in a predawn gun battle with a Norwegian tanker, and it saw our beautiful ships confuse the undersea raiders with an adroit series of maneuvers.

No less than nine submarines were reported along our course. The first contact with one of them came in the icy darkness at 5:45 a. m. shortly after I had climbed to the navigation bridge to pay my respects to the captain.

Suddenly a Shot

Suddenly a shot rang across the calm waters from our port quarter. Roars and flashes of flame spat angrily into the sky and in the dim distance we could see that two vessels were pouring it on—gun for gun.

Our radio told us that one was an armed Norwegian tanker—the other a U-boat.

The captain barked an order for two planes and a destroyer to go into action.

"Tell them to double that up on the planes as fast as God will let them," he said.

"Blast those —— to hell," he roared as the catapults sent the planes away.

(We learned later that the planes scared the submarine off and that the doughty tanker, her guns still smoking, had escaped with minor damage.)

Periscope Sighted

We were watching the gun flashes at 6:45 a. m. when a periscope was sighted less than 600 yards from our convoy—one of the world's largest ships and a sweet prize for the wolfpack around us.

The captain ordered the ships hard right and the vessels listed sharply as they danced around in

Standley Seeks Instructions on Interned Raiders

Kuibyshev, April 24 (AP).—United States Ambassador William H. Standley asked Washington today for instructions as to procedure on the case of five United States airmen interned in Khabarovsk, Siberia, after they had raided Japan. This indicated that the case has not been completely closed by the Soviet Union's strict application of international law.

Japanese Ambassador Naotake was also busy. This morning he called at the Foreign Commissariat.

The American airmen were declared to be "well and in good spirits."

The Soviet's prompt action in interning the airmen indicated strict observance of the Russian-Japanese neutrality pact.

(Official Washington declined comment, although President Roosevelt at his press conference yesterday said he had been informed of the internment.)

U. S. Ship Gamely Tries to Ram Attacking U-Boat, But Is Sunk by Shellfire

Skipper Loses Life in Effort To Battle Sub

By the United Press

Norfolk, Va., April 24.—A small American merchant ship made a valiant but vain effort to ram and sink an attacking submarine and finally went to the bottom herself under a deadly barrage of shells, survivors revealed today.

The futile maneuver cost the life of the ship's skipper—Capt. S. L. Cobb, of Staten Island, N. Y.—who fell mortally wounded on the ship's bridge after he had given his helmsman the order to ram the sub.

The fusillade of some 50 shells fired by the submarine from a distance of 250 yards also fatally wounded a crew member and injured another. Seven more are missing.

The remainder of the 34-man crew was rescued and put ashore here.

Credit for bringing one of the two lifeboats safely through the ordeal went to Waldemar Semenov, known affectionally to his fellow crewmembers as "The Mad Russian." Mates said he earned that sobriquet when, in the midst of the attack, he went below, where he got several loaves of bread, put on his best clothes, calmly brushed his teeth, borrowed $2 from a crew member and took along a book to read in the lifeboat.

Sub Circles Prey

Cobb's futile effort to ram the submarine was related by Second Officer Gerard J. Costello, who said that after the submersible fired its first shell the skipper ordered the helmsman to throw the wheel hard to starboard.

But the submarine averted a collision by circling its prey and then it pumped a round of shells into the ship. One shell which struck near the bridge injured Cobb fatally. He was buried at sea two days later.

Turns Samaritan

New York, April 24 (AP).—The commander of an Axis submarine, after sending two torpedoes into a Panamanian tanker without warning, turned sympathetic and acted to protect the survivors in their two lifeboats, members of the crew said in an interview authorized today by Third Naval District headquarters.

Only one of the crew of 39, the quartermaster, died from the attack, which occurred off Trinidad March 13.

The master and officers of the ship were from Nazi-occupied countries and asked that their names be withheld.

The master said that after the men left the ship in the lifeboats the submarine's commander maneuvered his craft so as to make a lee for them and protect them from swamping by the seas of burning oil. The commander also offered medical supplies and other assistance to the men, the master said.

Mexico City, April 24 (AP).—The Mexican government newspaper Nacional published today a report by the crewmen of a Mexican tanker that they had rescued 29 men from a torpedoed United States freighter off the Middle Atlantic Coast last week and that the tanker may have rammed and sunk an Axis submarine lurking near the scene.

The story came out of Tampico, where crewmen filed a sworn report with port authorities. They said that except for one of the rescued freighter crewmen who died of his injuries, the survivors were landed safely at a United States Atlantic port.

Nacional's story said the tanker, Faja de Oro, the former Italian ship Genoano which was appropriated by the Mexican government last year, bore the marks of the collision on her hull. She had been shaken from stem to stern but was undamaged.

The third engineer, who was on deck, said: "I saw the periscope of a submarine shrouded in spray just after we struck."

Survivors Land

Caracas, Venezuela, April 24 (AP).—Dispatches from Cumana said 15 survivors of the torpedoed Panamanian tanker Henry von Reidemann arrived there today from the Island of La Blanquilla.

Capt. Andrew Weiller said his 12,097-ton ship was en route from Trinidad to Aruba when attacked and sunk April 17 near La Blanqhilla, northwest of the Venezuelan island, Margarita. Twenty-nine crew members perished.

ment that 300 Germans were killed.

In that far southern sector and on the northwest, around Leningrad and the Kalinin front, minor but bitter fighting continued.

The main areas of the central front still were clogged with slush and mud, but Pravda, the Communist Party paper, said these conditions were clearing up and "the Red army, which beat the enemy in winter, will beat him in the spring and summer."

Pravda declared, "We have considerably more tanks than we had before, and their quality is universally recognized as considerably better than that of the Germans.

"The Soviet air force has increased in numbers and strength . . . Our command continues to hold the initiative firmly despite the immense difficulties involved in our winter counterattacks — difficulties unprecedented in the history of warfare."

Japs Nearer Mandalay

CHINESE FIGHT FIERCELY—Chinese defenders of Burma were fighting near (1) Taunggyi and Shwenyaung after withdrawal from Loikaw, putting Japs 100 miles from Mandalay, the British said yesterday. Whether Japs came from the south or from Thai was not certain. On the central Burma front (2) British forces withdrew further from Taungdwingyi to straighten their lines. were developing in the east front vicinity of Shwenyaung and Taunggyi. Reports of both actions were meager but matters appear to be developing satisfactorily."

These Chinese troops are under command of American Lieu. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell.

On the Allied right, held by Chinese and British, no action of consequence was reported and at the center the British forces, which previously had made a slight withdrawal to a point just above the town of Taungdwingyi, apparently were consolidating their positions.

The enemy was throwing up defensive positions below Yenangyaung, in the middle of the ruined oil fields.

The British command announced that Mandalay and vicinity had again been bombed, but that there were no particulars of casualties or damage.

Chinese Urge Blow To Knock Out Japan

Chungking, April 24 (AP).—The Chinese foreign office spokesman urged today intensification of offensive action against the Japanese, "who can easily be licked by a timely and effective blow."

While it is "only natural" that Britain and Russia should place the defeat of Germany above all else, he said, "it is equally natural that China, the United States and other Pacific nations regard the defeat of Japan as their most important role and the logical requirement of the entire strategy of the United Nations."

In Europe, he said, the British-Russian combination has "succeeded in wresting the initiative from the enemy, whereas on the Asiatic mainland China has been fighting almost single-handedly.

"True, a second front now exists in Burma but the burden of the Chinese forces has not been anywise lessened by it. Contrariwise, our burden has correspondingly increased."

He said that Japan's lengthening lines of defense and communication, dispersion of her forces, shortage of transport and other difficulties "all go to prove that Japan is more stupid and brittle than Germany."

a synchronized manner pretty to see.

The periscope seemed to submerge slowly and deliberately and I gulped as I took down notes with numbed fingers.

I glanced hurriedly around me at the calm-faced officers and ratings, looking eagerly at their faces, trying to read their thoughts. Not a sign of fear was observable.

A kid from Montana who had been sweeping down the deck when the alarm sounded was busy at work. He hadn't even batted an eyelash.

"He was too close to fire. He was right on top of the . . ." the captain said.

Then followed a series of zigzagging with the captain coolly remembering each turn.

(His memory was so good that when we made the final zig we were back on our course—an amazing feat in the heat of battle.)

Several more contacts—none of them definite—and we twisted like an adagio dancer, spoiling the enemy's aim.

Danger lurked all around us but the skipper found time to tell that Montana boy to shorten the handle of his broom. He had jabbed several passersby.

Torpedo Coming!

More planes went aloft and at 7:40 a lookout shouted "torpedo wake heading for our bow."

We had just zigged and the lookouts said the deadly missile went by 200 yards off the target.

Behind us raced the mighty merchantman, her stacks defiantly belching columns of smoke.

Another periscope—distinct and ominous—appeared low in the water just abaft the port beam.

"We are in a nest of cobras," the captain said as he gave the order to change course again.

It was broad daylight then and another radio report told us that a ship was afire 40 miles to the south. A ship of another command took care of that one. We were rather busy.

A few hours later our navigator put us right on the buoy he had aimed for before the attack. Marvelous work.

The captain had brought us through. This strong-jawed little man with the bouncing gait would have had an easier time if he had not mercifully dispatched two of our protecting destroyers to the aid of merchantmen.

The morning before a lifeboat from a medium-sized American ship had radioed that the ship had been sunk and that women and children were floating at sea.

From a realistic point of view the captain knew that the value of our ships outweighed the lives of a few people and that detaching a destroyer from the escort would endanger our chances of getting through. He made his decision in a flash.

The warship sent to their relief picked up six lifeboats while repelling a submarine attack and counter-attacking. Then, heading for port, she picked up 18 survivors of another medium-sized American vessel.

They had gone down less than 40 miles from our position and right near the course we had traversed.

In the first sign of moderation in German policy toward France since Laval returned to power, the newspaper Petit Parisien reported today that several trains would be sent to Compiegne for 6000 sick French war prisoners being repatriated.

(The German-controlled Amsterdam radio, heard in New York, said the prisoners would be freed April 28 and 29.)

Beaverbrook Talk Sharpens Invasion Issue

By the Associated Press

London, April 24.—The issue of an Allied invasion of Europe was sharpened today by Lord Beaverbrook's militant demand for a second front and by the suggestive information that President Roosevelt had notified Prime Minister Churchill he agreed with all conclusions reached by Gen. George C. Marshall, United States Chief of Staff, who recently visited Britain.

Mr. Roosevelt was said to have sent a message to that effect to Churchill today.

(The nature of Gen. Marshall's conclusions was not disclosed, but in Britain he said "the time for action is near," and that Americans "inevitably soon will join the commandos.")

Lord Beaverbrook's New York speech last night emphasized the British public's concern over what the government will do with the largest Army ever assembled in this country.

Action Now Held Essential

An army of between one million and two million, equipped with tank and mechanized weapons, is cooperating with the largest air force in Europe and is a formidable fighting machine, according to its own commanders and visiting American officers.

Its employment in a great European campaign this summer is an urgent necessity, according to a section of the public clamoring for action now.

Lord Beaevrbrook's catalogue of the British power for "directing such an attack against Germany" has had an admittedly "profound effect" on those who believed Britain lacked the munitions and equipment.

Advocates of continental invasion realize the risks. Beaverbrook's own Evening Standard said today:

"It will not be easy. There will be difficulties and hazards and pitfalls. It will mean heavy sacrifices."

Developments in the past two months have noticeably diminished these risks in the minds of many Britons, however.

Commando Raids Show Way

Success of the commando raids at Bruneval, St. Nazaire and Boulogne, in German-occupied France, have demonstrated what can be accomplished by daring men with the right equipment.

The growing force of the R. A. F. offensives also has demonstrated that Britain has enough planes to protect a large landing force within fighter-plane range.

Unrest in occupied countries and evident Nazi uneasiness about the political and military defenses in the west are facts "unquestionably favorable to attack in Europe," experts say.

The recent commando raids were declared to have shown weaknesses in German defense areas which were thought to have been formidable, particularly on the "invasion coast."

Experts traced an all-around slackness in the German army of occupation to two years of comparatively peaceful living in conquered territory. They said that an "especially significant" item in the Boulogne raid was the failure of the Germans to throw against the commandos even one of the vaunted armored columns which are supposed to be the foundation of German anti-invasion precautions.

In any event, Lieut. Col. L. S. Amery, secretary of state for India and Burma, told an audience at Birmingham tonight that the next few weeks "may be more fateful for the future of the world than any since Dunkerque."

Allied Airmen Pound Rabaul in New Raids

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters, Australia, April 24.—Allied airmen, bolstered by an ever-increasing flow of American craft of all kinds, pounded the Japanese yesterday with another raid on the invader's insecure foothold at Rabaul, New Britain.

Allied headquarters announced the raiders bombed shipping, barracks and warehouses and machine-gunned Japanese ground forces there. Four Japanese Zero fighters challenged the attackers but were easily fended off.

The Japanese sent bombers and fighters against Port Moresby, New Guinea, in three raids yesterday but General MacArthur's headquarters said damage was negligible.

In the Philippines artillery and tank reinforced Japanese infantry made new landings in the Iloilo, Capiz and Antique areas of Panay Island where American and Philippine forces are continuing stubborn delaying action.

Corregidor Fortress was being subjected to intermittent fire from Japanese batteries and its own big guns were replying in kind, while in Mindanao sporadic patrol action was reported continuing.

A high United States air authority disclosed that the nucleus of a well-balanced striking force has been built up in Australia with reinforcements of American planes, including both medium and heavy bombers, fighters, transports, photographic and observation craft.

This source described the ground crew situation as satisfactory and added that great strides have been made in airdrome construction.

2000 Civilian Fliers Needed to Train Pilots for Army

The Army air forces called yesterday for 2000 civilian pilots to serve as flight instructors in expanding Army flying schools within the next 60 days.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration was asked to supply the need, and the War Department said it was expected many of the instructors would come from CAA civilian pilot training program.

To provide for replacements, CAA was given a special two-million-dollar fund to train fliers in aviation instruction technique. Candidates for this instruction, it was said, were expected to be found among more than 83,000 holders of private pilot licenses who for financial or other reasons have been unable to acquire sufficient flying time to qualify as instructors.

Candidates for instructor training must be citizens between 21 and 42 who are able to meet physical standards for a commercial pilot certificate and have logged at least 140 solo hours.

50% Slash Is Urged In Gasoline Sales

Oilmen, Transportation and Political Leaders Forecast Serious Disruptions

A drastic, 50 per cent reduction in delivery of gasoline to the Eastern seaboard service stations was urged yesterday by the petroleum industry leaders.

The reduced delivery—already down to two-thirds of normal—would become effective May 1, accordng to the recommendations given Petroleum Coordinator Ickes.

A cut of 50 per cent would still leave the average motorist better than five gallons a week, it was said, and approximate Ickes' prediction that rationing of gas, scheduled to begin May 15, would give the average motorist 25 gallons a month. The Office of Price Administration has suggested as little as 2½ gallons per week under the rationng system.

An investigation of the OPA was proposed to the House Banking Committee by Representative Leon Sacks (Democrat), Pennsylvania, who complained of the confusion created in the public mind by the diversion of opinion on the necessity and extent of gasoline and sugar rationing. His request for a subcommittee to investigate the Henderson organization, however, was "sidetracked."

Loss in Revenue Seen

Spokesmen for State governments pointed out that aside from the inconvenience to motorists, the more serious loss in revenue to State and Federal treasuries will create problems in financing. While most of the States devote such funds to highways (of which none but those essential to defense are being built), some depend upon the gas tax for as much as 50 per cent of their entire revenue.

District Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent reported that the District, which usually collects about $3,500,000 from gas tax, had expected to get an additional $1,500,000 this year from the penny increase in the tax put into effect January 1.

Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst said that while the reduction of funds which the rationing would effect in his department might eliminate some of the construction planned for 1943, all of the work now in progress was financed and would be completed. This includes the Maine Avenue - Fourteenth Street grade separation, the extension of Independance Avenue and the widening of Twenty-third Street—all designed to facilitate the flow of traffic to the bridges serving the new War Department Building in Arlington.

Too Much Gas on Hand

To add to the national paradox of the gas rationing program, Wright W. Gary, of the petroleum coordinator's office, told a Senate Agriculture Subcommittee that oil refineries have so much gasoline on hand that "we're trying to find new uses for it in the war effort rather than burn it to get rid of it or put it back in the ground."

Not only is the lack of transportation facilities to the East causing the gasoline to back up in the refineries, but the decreased use of automobiles throughout the country caused by tire shortage is creating a surplus problem to oil producers.

Ralph K. Davies, assistant deputy oil coordinator, said that in six months or so alternative methods of transporting oil to the East could be worked out—provided that steel would be made available for this use.

War agencies controlling the allocation of available steel have twice rejected proposals from Ickes for a pipeline to bring fuel from the Southwest oil fields to the Eastern markets.

In the last week, railroads delivered 600,000 barrels of oil daily into the East, while pipelines and barges brought in 160,000 more. The bulk of the East's daily oil requirement of 1,300,000 barrels was transported in coastwise tankers before the war.

Arkansas moved last night to speed up truck delivery of gasoline to the East by easing its tax regulations, and ordering its revenue collectors to stay on 24-hour call to accelerate clearance of gas-laden trucks headed for the East.

State Revenue Commissioner Joe Hardin said that no Arkansas tax would be collected on interstate shipments of gasoline, but that permits must be obtained and bonds posted at ports of entry.

District gas dealers had little comment to make on the expected effect the rationing would have on their business. Most said they had no way of forecasting the future until some agreement was reached as to the actual quota to be established.

M. E. Edlavitch, manager of the Atlantic Gas & Service Co., operating six stations, was very optimistic about the rationing. "I'm sure something will be worked out to bring in the oil, even if it's something like a miracle," he said. "I don't mind the quota cuts at all, since the tire rationing is keeping motorists from buying as much as they used to anyway. The whole thing balances."

He Has Surplus Now

Edlavitch said that he had a surplus left from his March quota, and expected to have even a larger one left from his April supply.

Washington dealers in general, however, used nearly all of their March quota, and expect to "spread it thin" in order to make out through April, according to Harry Wainwright, of the Washington Retail Gas Dealers.

Repercussions along the Atlantic Coast ranged from bitter invective to optimism, the latter on the part of a spokesman for New York State resorts who predicted boom trade because these hotels are accessible from most cities by direct train route.

Walter S. Hallanan, president of the Plymouth Oil Co., and member of the petroleum industry's war council, branded Henderson's rationing plan as "half-baked, ill-advised, hit-or-miss," and "indicative of the lack of intelligent understanding which that Government agency has shown in dealing with a problem so vital to the people."

Hallanan denied that gasoline stocks were limited enough to warrent the 2½ to 5 gallon weekly limit, and implied that the question of gas rationing should have been left up to Ickes.

Resort States Protest

The great resort states, North Carolina, Maine, and Virginia, bitterly protested the loss of vacation trade. Georgia, South Carolina and New Jersey demanded that the rationing be Nation-wide instead of restricted to one area.

Reports from West Virginia, Massachussetts, Maryland and Pennsylvania predicted that over half of the gasoline dealers, especially the small filling station proprietors would be forced out of business by the proposed rationing.

Americans facing the restricting of gasoline to 25 gallons a month were reminded that in the Axis and Axis-occupied countries, no gasoline was allowed at all except on special military allowances.

Canadians were rationed to between 30 and 38 gallons per month, beginning April 1; Cuba has been held down to one-half of normal and in England drivers are allowed enough to go 120 miles a month through June, after which they can get only enough "for genuine need."

Auto Dealers To Get Help

By the Associated Press

The House Banking Committee approved legislation yesterday to authorize the Reconstruction Finance Corp. to make loans to dealers in products affected by ration orders and to purchase any unsold products after 18 months.

Intended primarily for the relief of automobile dealers, the bill would be applicable also to dealers in any products the sale of which has been restricted by rationing. It is similar to a bill approved earlier this week by a Senate committee, and provides that there may be no deficiency judgments against borrowers.

Before approving the legislation after almost a week of hearings, the committee heard an explanation of the automobile rationing program from Zenas L. Potter, a member of the OPA Industry Council.

Potter told the committee OPA Administrator Leon Henderson was anxious to expedite the movement of new cars to persons eligible to buy them under rationing orders. Revised rationing regulations, he said, are being drafted to assure that all cars in the rationed group will be disposed of within one year.

To date, Potter said, some 41,000 cars have been sold under rationing, with approximately 359,000 still on hand.

While Potter did not disclose the nature of the revised rationing order, Representative Thomas Ford (Democrat), California said the order probably would make eligible for new cars everyone "directly or indirectly" connected with the war effort and having a car of 1939 or earlier make having been run at least 40,000 miles.

Miserable Failure

Detroit, April 24 (AP).—Ward's Automotive Reports in its issue this week will say:

"The rationing program for automobile sales has been a miserable failure. Dealers have been driven from business or bankrupted and manufacturers have been forced to carry heavy loads of finished car inventory. And in the face of these situations, people who need transportation have been unable to draw on the stockpiles. An unnecessary wall has been built between supply and demand.

"This whole program cries for correction."

The trade publication refers to the bill recently introduced by Senator Downey (Democrat), California, to make possible Federal seizure of automobiles, and asks:

"Who will buy a car when he fears that it may be taken from him by law?"

Tire Quotas Up for May

The Office of Price Admintration announced yesterday that a total of 633,665 new and recapped tires would be made available for rationing next month to passenger car owners.

The allotment compared with an April quota of about 572,000 tires.

The quotas for the District of Columbia are:

Passenger cars, 380 new tires and 2452 recaps, 1408 new tubes.

Trucks, buses, etc., 1078 new tires and 1719 recaps, 1490 new tubes.

The May quota, for the first time since rationing began, makes recapping certificates available to "List A" passenger cars and motorcycles. This is in line with provisions of a pending amendment to tire rationing regulations which will require that, after May 1, passenger car eligibles on "List A" must have their tires repaired if possible before being allowed to purchase new ones.

"List A" includes vehicles used in services deemed most essential in the Nation's economy. A secondary list of eligibles, known as "List B," includes all persons eligible to receive recapped tires.

Only 55,573 new tires are allotted next month to "List AA" passenger cars. These eligibles, however, will have first call on the 578,092 recapped tires offered during the month with the remainder of the recaps going to "List B" eligibles.

The May quota provides 238,259 new tires and 379,060 recapped tires for trucks, buses and other farm and commercial vehicles eligible under the rationing plan.

In connection with the recaps to be sold under the ration plan, Price Administrator Leon Henderson reiterated that the recapping material now being used is made almost entirely of reclaimed rubber and that recapped tires should be driven at speeds under 40 miles an hour. Drivers should be careful to avoid fast starts and quick stops, he cautioned.

Meanwhile, Senator Herring (Democrat), Iowa, told the Associated Press that "it is difficult for me to understand why the War Department needs 600,000 or 700,000 tons of rubber next year when they're running all over the earth now on not more than 200,000 tons."

The Iowan, who spent 30 years in the automobile business, said he was very optimistic of an improvement in the civilian rubber supply within a year.

"I have faith in American ingenuity," he said, and cited experiments now under way by various manufacturers to develop tires using little or no rubber.

Bob Hope Packs for Performance in Capital

Col. Lombard Joins Parade To Free French

The procession of French diplomats in Washington to the Free French camp of Gen. Charles de Gaulle was joined yesterday by Col. Emmanuel E. Lombard, former military attache of the embassy here, after what he described as a vain attempt to remain loyal to Marshal Petain.

Petain's recall of Pierre Laval to take over the French government "shattered my illusions" about the former French leader, Lombard said in announcing that he had cabled Gen. de Gaulle in London "asking the honor of serving under your command."

Thus the 58-year-old Lombard, who was assistant military attache at the Washington Embassy from 1919 until 1928 and military attache from 1933 until 1940, followed the lead of five members of the embassy who joined the de Gaulle forces earlier this week.

Calls on Boegner

Yesterday afternoon Col. Lombard called on Etienne Boegner, acting chief of the Free French delegation in Washington, to inform him of his action.

"I have placed myself at Gen. de-Gaulle's command and await his orders, whatever they may be," he said on emerging from Free French headquarters at 729 Fifteenth Street Northwest. "It is my duty now to go with those who represent France and the French spirit."

Col. Lombard related with feeling how he had tried vainly for two years to maintain the belief that it was his duty to remain loyal to Marshal Petain, his former chief, whom he had considered "the highest military character of World War I."

This in spite of the fact that his departure from the French Embassy November 1, 1940, resulted from age-limitation regulations instituted by the then newly-formed Petain regime.

Writes For Syndicate

Since then he has been writing for a newspaper syndicate and doing work for an American Government agency.

Col. Lombard is one of the few French officers to hold the American Distinguished Service Medal. It was awarded to him for his World War I service as chief instructor of American artillery officers at Valdahon, France. He also holds the Croix de Guerre with two citations and is an officer in the Legion of Honor.

He lives in Washington at 3006 Thirty-second Street Northwest with his American-born wife and their 11-year-old son, a student at the Friends School. Mrs. Lombard is the former Helen Carusi, daughter of the late Charles Francis Carusi, once president of the District Board of Education. They were married in 1928.

Guilt in Tire Sales Denied By Hundley

Hiram Ben Hundley, prominent Washington tire merchant, pleaded not guilty in District Court yesterday to charges that he violated tire and tube rationing rules of the Office of Price Administration.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts granted Defense Attorneys Louis Ottenberg and H. M. Ammerman ten days in which to study the indictment against Hundley, to determine whether they will enter a demurrer to the document or take other action.

Prosecutor John L. Laskey urged that the case be brought to trial as soon as possible because of its importance to the "public interest."

Hundley, who operates his business as Ben Hundley with headquarters at 3446 Fourteenth Street Northwest, was indicted on 12 counts by a special grand jury after a two-month investigation by OPA and FBI agents.

He is accused of having:

(1.) Falsified reports to the District OPA administration concerning the number of tires and tubes he had in stock.

(2.) Marked a number of new tires as used, in order to make them salable under OPA regulatoins, and asserted that the marking was done by a Federal inspector.

(3.) Sold many new tires and tubes to the Evening Star Publishing Co., Diamond Service Co. and the Premier Purchasing Co., but represented them as used tires on his records.

Maximum penalty for the offense, should he be convicted, is ten years imprisonment, or a $10,000 fine, or both.

Victory Show for Services' Benefit Opens Here Thursday

$1,000,000 Made Available to Families Of Fighting Men

To meet the needs of families of soldiers and sailors of the United States who are fighting the battle for democracy in every part of the world, the Army Emergency Relief has made available one million dollars.

This was announced yesterday by Maj. Gen. William N. Haskell, executive director of the A. E. R., which was incorporated in Washington recently to collect and hold funds to relieve distress of personnel of the Army of the United States and their dependents.

The announcement was made as the Capital was completing plans for a gala performance by the Hollywood Victory Caravan to be staged next Thursday night at the Capitol Theater for the benefit of the combined Army Emergency Relief and Navy Relief Funds.

In explaining the allocation of the first million dollars by the A. E. R., General Haskell revealed that this organization has set up branches, headed by Army officers, in all corps areas and department headquarters. Sections, likewise headed by officers, have been organized at all camps, posts and stations.

$770,000 to Corps Areas

All that is necessary for soldiers' or sailors' dependents involved in emergency financial distress is that they communicate with the nearest A. E. R. branch or section for assistance, which will be forthcoming as soon as the necessity is verified.

In allocating the first million dollars, General Haskell explained, $770,000 has been assigned to the nine corps areas in the continental United States, with the commanding general of each corps area reallocating a share to each section under his command. The allocations have been made on the ratio of soldier population to civilian population.

Of the remainder of the first million dollars, General Haskell said, the Army Air Force has been allocated $220,000; the Puerto Rico A. E. R. branch, $5000; the A. E. R. branch in Hawaii, $3500, the War Department A. E. R. branch, $1000, and the West Point A. E. R. branch, $500.

100 Hollywood Stars

Further allocations will be made as additional funds are received by the A. E. R. To meet the need of the families of the soldiers and sailors who are giving their all for the Nation, more than 100 of Hollywood's outstanding stars have volunteered their services and formed the Victory Caravan which will tour the Nation after its gala inauguration here next Thursday night.

Seats for this gala show range from $5 to $20 in price and are well worth the money. This will not be a mere personal appearance of these stars, but each one will appear on the stage in an especially written act to display the talents that have carried them to stardom.

Those in the cast are serving without remuneration. They are giving their time and their services without cost so that every dollar received may go to the combined Army and Navy relief funds in order that the families, the wives and children of the soldiers and sailors who are fighting for democracy may not suffer.

Bins Full, U. S. May Order Cut In Wheat Crop

By Ovid A. Martin
Associated Press Staff Writer

Although much of the world is starving war curtailment of foreign trade and a record surplus of wheat in this country soon will lead Secretary of Agriculture Wickard to advise American farmers that they must reduce production further or be content with lower prices.

The forthcoming bread-grain crop and the carryover from previous years are expected to provide a supply greater than this country's transportation and storage facilities can handle. Officials predict that the supply will be sufficient to meet the normal needs of the country for two years.

On the other hand, virtually the whole of Europe—particularly German-occupied Belgium, France, the Netherlands, Greece and the Balkans, as well as Italy and unoccupied France, and Spain—are on short bread rations. Germany itself is running short of supplies. Europe normally depends upon overseas sources for much of its wheat.

U. S. Lacks Storage Space

Because storage facilities are already crowded with surplus wheat, corn and other grains from previous crops, the department expects an acute problem to develop when the new wheat crop starts moving to harvest in the Southwest in June. Estimates have been made that upwards of 75 million bushels may have to be piled in fields or placed in improvised bins on farms.

The Agriculture Department set this year's wheat production goal at the lowest point permitted under the Crop Control Act, which may not be less than 55 million acres. In the past as much as 80 million acres have been seeded.

Wickard is expected to ask Congress to amend the law to permit a planting goal of 50 million acres or less next year. His plans in this conection may be announced in a speech he is scheduled to make before a meeting of wheat farmers at Enid, Okla., on April 28.

Because of shortages of farm labor, machinery and equipment, and the strain being placed on transportation facilities by the war program, aides said Wickard believed it was not in the public interest for farmers to continue the production of more wheat than could be disposed of.

Foreign Markets Virtually closed

Although half the world is hungry for bread, the war has virtually eliminated foreign markets for American grain. Great Britain is obtaining supplies from Canada.

The Secretary is expected to tell the Enid meeting that the Government no longer feels it to be good public policy to maintain programs designed to provide farmers with parity price returns from the production of 55 million acres of wheat. They are assured such a return this year, providing they approve rigid marketing quotas at a Nation-wide referendum to be held on May 2.

A Government loan program is supporting wheat prices in this country considerably above world levels. The loan rate is 85 per cent of parity. Benefit payments are expected to make up the 15 per cent difference between the loan supported price and full parity.

Wickard may also tell the Enid meeting that plans of the department to relieve congested terminals and warehouses by moving surplus wheat into livestock areas for use as feed are being held up by a legislative proposal pending in Congress. That proposal, already approved by the House, would bar sale of Government-owned wheat at less than parity. Wheat at parity prices is said to be too high to compete with corn and other grains as livestock feed.

Auto Tag Revenue Drops in Maryland

Annapolis, Md., April 24 (AP).—Maryland's automobile titling tax revenue has dropped $327,838 since January 1 and it will continue to decline, Sate Comptroller J. Millard Tawes said today.

From October 1 to December 31, tax receipts about paralled those for a similar period in the previous fiscal year, Tawes said, adding the Federal ban on the sale of new cars didn't affect the revenue until January 1.

"We expect to get very little from the tax from now until the end of the fiscal year," the State comptroller declared.

Last year from January 1 to April 23, the levy yielded $596,329.84 while so far this year receipts have been only $268,491.83.

2 Drivers Testify On Truck 'Racket'

Virginia Brothers Tell House Unit of Unloading Fee Gouge

By Eugene Rachlis
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

"We ain't agoin' there no more."

So saying, two Virginia truck drivers today washed their hands of all big cities, labor unions and/or racketeers who insist on unloading their produce trucks for a fee.

Neither W. L. nor H. E. Wood were sure that the men who leaped on their trucks as they entered New York, Philadelphia and Scranton with their loads of apples, were union members, they told the House Judiciary Committee, which is studying measures to put an end to work stoppages. But they are sure that the men were racketeers.

Receipts they received for the unloading fees forced from them were signed on scraps of paper, some on margins of newspapers, others on brown wrapping stock, they said. One receipt was signed with an "X." They showed the receipts to the committee, which had them placed in the record.

Last fall, while entering Philadelphia with a truckload of apples from Virginia, W. L. Wood was set upon by four men who refused to alow him to unload and insisted on a fee for doing it themselves, he related.

The same thing happened in New York, Wood said. Men demanded $1.35 an hour to unload 200 bushels, a job which he himself usually did in half an hour. In this case, the manager of the New York store told him that he would have to let the "union men" unload for him.

They Took Too Long

H. E. Wood's experience in Scranton, where men wanted $5.50 to unload, is unforgettable to him.

With vehemence, he declared:

"If it's worth that much to unload, the load itself is worth $100. If I got $5.50 every time I unloaded, I'd be a millionaire."

He also stated he didn't need any help for this work. The men who did it took three hours. "It takes me 40 minutes," he declared.

Another of the brothers' complaints against the "racketeers" was the fact that they took so long in unloading.

"You come into New York," E. H. said, "and they take their time. They charge $3. If you get in at 3 a. m., you're lucky if you get away by next afternoon."

One time when he outfoxed them brought a grain of satisfaction to E. H. Wood. He slipped into Philadelphia one night, unloaded by himself in 35 or 40 minutes and "was on my way before these union guys knew anything."

Dr. E. L. Nixon, of the Pennsylvania Cooperative Potato Growers Association, related similar experiences but said he "did not know whether these men who jump on trucks are in the union or not."

He did say, though, that "their services are unnecessary and unwanted and if they are justified, the fees are extravagant."

He submitted about 1000 receipts for unloading charges in various cities which he described as "racket fees."

Winchester Collects 65,000 Lbs. of Scrap

Winchester, Va., April 24.—Sixty-five thousand pounds of usable scrap material were secured in the first city collection conducted by the Junior Board of trade and other organizations.

So successful was the effort that it was stated today the collections will be made monthly for the duration with crews and trucks making their rounds on the third Saturday of each month.

War Sidelights

Navy Winning U-Boat War, James Hints

Hamilton, Bermuda, April 24 (AP).—Vive Admiral Jules James, commandant of the United States Naval base here, told a St. George's Day dinner here that "very hard" and "successful" fighting was taking place now from the Bermuda base.

Replying to the toast to "our Allies" at an overseas league dinner, James said:

"I came down here to build a base. I came down here also to fight a base after we build it. Lots of people around here do not know how hard our combined Navies and Armies are fighting now from this base.

"I can assure you it is very hard. It is hard and it is successful. I am sorry I cannot tell you more about it."

(The Admiral apparently was referring to actions against submarine forays in Atlantic waters.)

Great Battle Predicted

New York, April 24 (AP).—The British radio's mysterious "Colonel Britton" told his "V-for-Victory" army in German-occupied Europe tonight to make ready for large-scale sabotage, for "within six weeks from now there may open what may prove to be the greatest battle in the history of the world."

"To win this great battle the Germans must make the greatest effort they've ever made," he said in a broadcast heard here by C. B. S.

"The Nazis intend to strike, as I said, within the next six weeks. It may be delayed, but I don't think for long, because the longer it is delayed the less chance for success it has . . . But we, too, will attack and the Russians will attack and you in Europe will attack.

"But you must not be deluded that all these attacks will not necessarily occur at the same moment. And you will be given due warning."

Nazis Boast New Plane

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), April 24 (AP).—A new German fighter plane, the Focke Wulfe 190, was described tonight by Voelkischer Beobachter as "the fastest in the world," the German radio said.

Few details were given, but the announcer said the plane, powered by a 14-cylinder motor and equipped with a broad retractable landing gear to facilitate quick take-offs, was designed by Kurt Tank, who originated the long-range Condor bomber.

Note on 'Kultur'

Stockholm, April 24 (AP).—The Oslo correspondent of the newspaper Social Demokraten reported today that 500 Norwegian school teachers, jammed below decks on a small steamer designed to accommodate half that number, had been shipped to a Nazi work camp in the Arctic zone under circumstances so bad that some became insane.

The correspondent estimated 1100 teachers have been arrested for their revolt against the Nazi-sponsored regime of Prime Minister Maj. Vidkun Quisling and shipped to labor camps.

OPA's Ceiling To Fix Prices Of Everything

theory, and the impulse to bid prices up is constrained.

Nevertheless, price officials admit the possibility of "black markets" arising and plan a tremendous enforcement staff to prevent breakthroughs in the ceiling.

"The price ceiling must stick," one high official declared with vehemence.

Details of the enforcement machinery have not been worked out yet, it was learned. It is known, however, that while the OPA is counting on "industry watching" to perform an important role, the Canadian system of "housewife policing" will not be followed.

Accompanying the order, it is expected, will be further restrictions on installment credit. Present requirements on the percentage of down payments may be increasd in certain instances, and the period over which an installment purchase may run will be cut back from the present 15 and 18 months to a maximum of about one year.

Date Presents Problem

Details of the price order still being worked over, it was reported, include the problem of hardship that will fall on certain dealers by reason of the choice of a date as the basis for the price ceiling.

For example, some firms may have been selling stocks out of inventories on the day picked as the price base date at a lower price than they can now replace them. Unless some adjustment is made these firms will be penalized for what was essentially an economic and patriotic practice, while other concerns, which had already raised prices by the base date, will be in a more favorable position.

Top officials were agreed that there has been an almost utter lack of realization of the terrific impact on the American economy which the order will have.

They pointed out that for centuries, the price factor has served as an automatic market adjustor. With prices limited, some other form of controls must take their place. These controls, by and large, must necessarily be Government orders.

Production Orders Seen

For example, if the Government wishes to stimulate the manufacture of coarse grades of cloth when present prices make finer grades of cloth more profitable to the mills, the price incentive to effect the switch can no longer be used when ceilings are fixed. The alternative is for the Government to order the mills to produce the desired article.

Thus, officials admitted, there will be increasing instances of factories working under "forced draft," the forcing coming from the Government.

The emergence of a group rationtion system, as contrasted with the present procedure of individual rationing on such items as autos, tires, sugar, gasoline, etc. will come through reasons of administrative economy and simplicity, officials explained.

Rather than one ration card and quota for coffee, another for tea, another for cocoa, or one for each spice or canned food or dairy product, similar items will be lumped, a point value given to each, and cards issued for the whole group with consumers given the option to use all their points on one item, or to divide them up among the group.

Durable Goods Unrationed

The remaining supplies of consumers' durable goods—vacuum cleaners, radios, electrical appliances, and such items, the manufacture of which will soon be endod—will not be rationed, although some attempt may be made to limit dealers' sales to a specified amount each month, in order to make the remaining supplies last longer.

There may be a rationing of some hardware items, but the major fields for rationing, it is now clear, are food and clothing. It is almost certain that many food items will not be rationed for a long time to come, if at all. There is serious question, however, of whether it is possible to ration any clothing items without rationing all.

Finns Not Joining Nazis, Says Envoy

Finnish Minister Hjalmar Procope last night denied press reports from Russia asserting that Finnish troops have moved south to join hard pressed German divisions on the Kalinin front.

Describing the report as "misleading," Procope said all Finnish troops are engaged on fronts "not far from the territorial boundaries of Finland."

Any Finns who may be serving with the Germans voluntarily, he said, "cannot be termed Finnish troops as they do not stand under the command of Finnish authorities and have entered in foreign service on their own responsibility."

Flood Waters Sweeping On Denver Lowlands

Denver, April 24 (AP).—A warning that flood waters are sweeping down upon Denver lowlands and areas along the South Platte River in which thousands of persons live was issued today by the Weather Bureau.

The high water will overflow probably tomorrow from the mouth of Platte Canyon about 20 miles south of Denver, and inundate all lowlands below 7000 feet, the Weather Bureau predicted.

The river flows through the center of Denver, only a few blocks from the downtown business section.

Memories of Singapore Cloud Fun of Her Shopping Tour

SAFE AND HAPPY—Mrs. William Nicholas and her three children, Wilfred, 12; Richard, 8, and Eleanor, 5, are in a happy mood after their safe journey from Singapore with just what they have on their backs

A young woman in slacks strode through some downtown stores yesterday, trying to see the newest clothes through eyes that for three months had been too full of other things.

The woman, Mrs. W. A. Nicholas, three months out of Singapore, was remembering Japanese dive bombers that fell from the sky like rocks over Penang last December 8, and a good strong ship which, bringing her and her three children home to safety, was blasted apart by bombs, burned and beached.

But she got back here, in her slacks nd with a dress a Dutch woman gave her in Sumatra. In the ship bombing she had lost all she had but her children, the slacks and her wedding ring.

The adventure began December 8. Mrs. Nicholas, daughter of the late Dr. William E. Pairo of Washington, and sister-in-law of Col. John W. Oehmann, U. S. A., former District Building Inspector, had lived in the Orient with her husband, a British health officer, for 13 years. When the Jap bombers came over Penang, the family set out "up country" and then to Singapore on a British Army train. She did not believe the great bastion could fall.

But Left in Time

In the general anxieties however, she decided to bring the children, Wilfred, 12, Richard, 8, and Eleanor, 4, to Washington, which she hadn't seen since 1933. Passage became available and they departed on January 3 (the city fell to the Japanese on February 15). Every night during her 144-day stay in Singapore bombs had fallen. She had grabbed up nothing in the hurry of leaving Penang but a handkerchief. In Singapore everything was getting scarce but she managed to buy a few dresses.

Then, in late January, the ship brought her and the children to Sumatra and bombings began again. Everything in the harbor lay under the blastings and the ship captain told the passengers they had better go ashore. Mrs. Nicholas led her children up a hill overlooking the waterfront. There, from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. they looked down, while bombs ripped the water and tore docks and shipping apart. She couldn't take her eyes off the ship that had brought her across so much imperiled water out of Singapore. She saw it finally struck, the last one hit in the harbor.

Manage to Escape

Nuns and Catholic brothers gave them shelter and some clothes. After a week there, they took a train to Osterhaven. 'And then we crept out one night aboard a small coastal vessel for Merak." From there they went to Batavia, stayed there a week and went to Sourabaya. Then they took a liner, bound for Australia, New Zealand and the United States.

They had just stepped aboard it when Japanese planes appeared again. About all Mrs. Nicholas recalls of that scene is one of the planes, the rising sun on its wings, crashing down in smoke.

The liner got away, but there was little rest.

"Every time we saw anything on the horizon, the ship would turn and make off another way," she remembered. "It was impossible to keep the movement of time in mind."

She left her husband, whom she had met while he was engaged in research at Johns Hopkins University, on the dock in Singapore. No word has come from him. Richard and Wilfred will be put in school here, and live with their mother at their grandmother's home, 31 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest.

Nonwar Agency Funds Slashed

nated all of the $400,000 allowed by the House for the board's national defense activities and cut $268,000 from its regular appropriation. During the hearings, Senator McKellar told Planning Board members that "I don't say yours is the most useless (agency), but I think it is one that can be postponed in part while we are in a death struggle with the powers now confronting us."

Later Mr. McKellar told reporters he wasn't singling out the independent offices for special treatment—"we are going to cut out as many unnecessary expenditures as possible on all of the bills. We may have to fight it out on the Senate floor, but we have done a careful job. We are trying to provide enough money to run essential nonwar agencies and no more."

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, whose special Senate war economy committe will complete its survey of nonessential activities and personnel next week, was a member of the Appropriations Committee voting for the cuts. Tydings said he was receiving "a patriotic response" from bureau heads.

"It has been encouraging for me to find many department chiefs voluntarily making economies and actual sacrifices where their work isn't vital to the war," he said.

Although the life of the Export-Import Bank had been extended to 1947, the Senate committee eliminated the entire $270,533 allowed by the House for running expenses of that agency.

"We're not in the export-import business anymore," commented Senator McKellar. "The lend-lease establishment can handle that work."

In the case of the Tennessee Valley Authority, a direct $36,120,112 appropriation was included in the bill, replacing the revolving fund revenue, which will go into the Treasury. This resulted technically in an increase in the total of the bill over House figures, although the net result of all cuts was a saving of more than 13 million dollars.

In administrative expenses of the Home Owners Loan Corp., a cut of $3,153,712 was ordered, with a proviso that the 12 million-dollar balance be spread over 12 months, and that none of the money be used to continue HOLC regional offices.

The Federal Housing Administration took a $419,844 cut, including $180,000 eliminated by forbidding continuance of the FHA Public Relations and Education division. Another $189,844 in FHA travel expenses was cut.

The Federal Works Agency took a $8,026,540 cut, including a $5,300,000 slash in the 22-million-dollar appropriation for elimination of grade crossings and elimination of $500,000 for public land highways.

The District's Alley Dwelling Authority also was hit. The Senate committee denied the ADA authority to use next year the unexpended balance of existing appropriations or receipts from housing developments to meet administrative expenses after June 30. The House gave the agency this authority, so the issue will go to conference.

Other reductions made in the bill:

Civil Service Commission, $907,307; Federal Communications Commission, $312,460; Federal Loan Agency, $8,425; Electric Home and Farm Authority, $50,000; Federal Home Loan Bank board, $250,938; Federal Savings & Loan Corporation, $50,443; RFC, $24,500; Federal Trade Commission, $252,224; General Accounting Office, $16,205; Interstate Commerce Commission, $81,545; Securities and Exchange Commission, $530,000; National Archives, $101,600; and Tariff Commission, $1800.

though I hesitate to say it, it looks as if it is a specific for the head cold."

Using it is simplicity itself. The best method is to massage about 15 drops into the skin of each inner thigh. Or 30 drops can be rubbed into the abdomen. The main thing is to rub it into a 10 inch area through which absorption can occur.

Of the 150 patients in the early stages of colds, said Dr. Cunningham, 109 recovered quickly. Marked improvement was noted in 23 cases, while in only 18 instances did improvement fail to occur.

Arms Goals Exceeded, Sights Are Raised

Randolph Paul, tax adviser to the Secretary of the Treasury.

The committee was concerned with the revenue side of the picture, also included in the revision. This indicated a probable deficit of 49 billion dollars in the next fiscal year.

Payment Formula Reversed

In the current fiscal year ending June 30, receipts will meet 36 per cent of expenditures, but in the next fiscal year revenues will fall off to 31 per cent of enlarged outlays, even if Congress raises the entire 7 billion dollars asked by the President. This means less than a third of next year's war cost would be met by taxes, and the balance must be met by Treasury financing, the reverse of the Treasury's original goal of two-thirds taxes and one-third financing.

Immediate issue before the Ways and Means Committee was how much of the new seven-billion-dollar tax load to take from corporations. At morning and afternoon sessions, Paul explained the Treasury plan to collect three billion dollars from corporations through an excess-profits tax ranging up to 75 per cent, and combined normal and war surtaxes of 55 per cent on the balance.

Against the Treasury plan, the committee is weighing an alternative program presented Thursday by Colin F. Stam, congressional staff expert on internal revenue. Stam proposed excess profits taxes ranging up to 85 per cent, and combined normal and war surtaxes totaling 40 per cent.

Following Paul's testimony, the committee took a recess until Tuesday, the day following the President's anti-inflation message, expected to include steep excess-profits recommendations. Chairman Doughton predicted the committee would reach a tentative vote on corporation taxes "around midweek." He said the committee will then pass on to consideration of individual income taxes. His plan is to dispose of taxes in each field tentatively, "raising as much as we can," before a final round-up on the bill.

In reporting to newsmen that America was progressing extremely well toward the 1942-43 production goals, termed "fantastic" when he outlined them on January 6, the President acknowledged a temporary lag in shipbuilding. The January 6 goals for the two years called for 185,000 planes, 120,000 tanks, 55,000 antiaircraft guns and 18,000,000 deadweight tons of shipping.

Steel Plate Output Lagging

The President was asked if he thought steel plants now being built would raise capacity to meet all requirements. He said he couldn't say as to that because there might be another program by the time expansions and new plants are completed.

Mr. Roosevelt said he thought shortage of steel mainly was the reason for the lag in ship construction, and this was partly because of an excessive diversion of steel to civilian needs. As to assertions by Chairman Emory Land of the Maritime Commission, that there was "loafing" in the shipyards, he remarked that that was a good burr under the tail of both labor and management.

He was asked if anything is being done to "revitalize" the steel industry, and he said that many minds were now working on that problem. He said ship plate is not coming through nearly as fast as it should. To meet needs, he said, many plants are being expanded, some new ones built and others converted. Referring to the steel factor, he said you can't make bread without flour.

He told reporters he did not believe there was any serious shortage in steel scrap, and indicated efforts should be made to uncover it. He pointed to great quantities of steel rail and abandoned farm machinery which could be turned up if necessary. A reporter suggested that WPA labor might be employed in salvaging old steel and the President said he would pass the idea along.

Japan's Course Long Foretold, Dr. Walsh Says

Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University, said in an address last night in Memorial Constitution Hall that the Japanese conquest of the Philippines was part of a maneuver prophesied as far back as 1909.

Dr. Walsh said Homer Lea, the hunchback from California, wrote a book 23 years ago outlining all that has transpired since.

Dr. Walsh said the Tanaka memorial also outlines the progressive steps by which Japan would advance to complete domination of the Far East and eventually of wider areas of the world.

"It is a complete blueprint," he said, "of world domination, beginning with the conquest of Manchuria and mentioning the necessity of eventual conflict with both the United States and Russia."

Register Early If Your Name Is in 'A to P'

An appeal for men whose names begin with letters from A through P to appear at enrollment centers between 7 a. m. and 2 p. m. for Monday's fourth Selective Service registration was made yesterday by District Selective Service headquarters.

Although not mandatory, this would make for a more even flow of registration since an estimated 2500 voluntary school teacher registrars will be on duty during these hours while only 1500 are scheduled to serve between 2 and 9 p. m., a Selective Service spokesman explained.

If the suggestion is followed generally, it was said, there should be few waiting lines at the public schools where an estimated 80,000 men in the 45-64 age group will sign up.

Avoidance of such lines, it was recalled, was urged by National Selective Service headquarters recently as a special consideration which should be made for "elderly registrants."

Term Is Unpopular

But mention of "elderly registrants"—the same group which President Roosevelt referred to as "oldsters"—was lacking in yesterday's appeal by District headquarters. Jocosely indignant members of the 45-64 age group, many of whom served in the first World War and are able and willing to do their part in this one, have made such references unpopular through public and private protests.

District Selective Service Director William E. Leahy meanwhile pointed out that while aliens not actually residents of the United States are not required to register, they must obtain a ruling on their status by the local selective board in whose area they are residing temporarily.

The policy applies principally to several thousand youths who have come to this country for the sole purpose of studying, Leahy said.

Applications "for determination of residence" must be made before May 16 by all those who entered this country prior to February 16 and not later that three months after their entry by others.

Pupils Get Holiday

As on previous registration days, District school children will get a holiday Monday since all school employes and most of the buildings are to be utilized in the enrollment.

While registration here will be confined to the one day, enrollments in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties, Md., will begin today and continue through Monday. Alexandria, Va., residents unable to register Monday will be allowed to sign up tomorrow at the Alexandria Post Office.

Delinquency Rise Feared Due to War

War is exerting a definitely harmful influence on children 14 years old and younger and remedial action by society is essential if a wave of juvenile delinquency is to be avoided, according to Dr. James A. Nolan, director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association.

He addressed the Virginia Conference on Social Work at Richmond, Va., yesterday.

Since Pearl Harbor there has been a 25 per cent increase in criminal offenses by youths throughout the country, he asserted, quoting Children's Bureau figures.

"The absence of parental control, since one or both parents may be engaged in defense work, or may be in industry to combat higher costs of living, results in a relaxation of discipline, as well as a freedom and liberality of action not usually available," he said.

Boys and girls in their teens are going to work earlier in wartime and more women are taking over the jobs of men called into military service, he added. Thus, he continued, they are exposed "to opportunities that increase the possibility of committing crime."

Dr. Nolan, who is an associate in sociology at George Washington University, called for continued support of child welfare agencies and boys' clubs. He urged parents and teachers to foster participation of youngsters in the war effort—to keep them busy—through sales of war savings stamps, collection of newspapers, tin and other needed materials and by mustering their services as junior air-raid wardens.

Scouts to Open Drive on Traffic Fatalities Today

Washington's concerted campaign against the rising tide of traffic fatalities will be launched at 11 a. m. today when 100 Boy Scouts start distribution of 100,000 handbills at 25 major intersections in the downtown area.

The pamphlets, prepared by the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, call attention to the fact that traffic deaths are soaring to an all-time record and must be stopped through public action. The handbill reads:

"Stop it! The lives of our citizens are being snuffed out at an appalling rate on the streets of Washington. Traffic accidents have doubled the death toll for this time last year. You are a part of the biggest and busiest Capital in the world. We are 'all out' for victory. You must be 'all out' for safety. Don't take chances. Drive and walk with the greatest care and help to . . . Stop it!"

Forty persons have been killed in traffic accidents here since January 1. The toll this time last year was 27.

Providence District Women Install Chief

Mrs. Ralph Bryant of Idylwood, Va., was installed as president of the Providence District Woman's Club last night at the home of Mrs. F. L. Huesmann.

P. O. Space For Telegraph Offices Asked

By the Associated Press

A proposal by President Roosevelt to locate telegraph offices in postoffice buildings throughout the country was submitted to a Senate Interstate Commerce subcommittee yesterday by Secretary of Commerce Jones.

Testifying in support of legislation to authorize consolidation of telegraph companies into single domestic and single international systems, Jones said the President had requested him to ask for a provision in the bill authorizing postoffices to rent space, where available, for telegraph offices.

Jones told the committee that the President believed there were hundreds if not thousands of places in the United States where such an arrangement could provide economy for the Government as well as the telegraph service and would mean a convenience for the public.

Protection for Displaced Labor

Saying that he was authorized to quote the President as favoring the principles of the merger legislation, Jones added that "naturally the President would want proper protection in the bill for displaced labor."

The Commerce Secretary declared that need for speedy enactment of the legislation was urgent and that otherwise the Postal Telegraph Co. obviously cannot survive without a Government subsidy."

"The fewer things we subsidize out of the Government," Jones added, "the better we will all be."

The Secretary asserted that there could be "no reasonable objection" to the merger on grounds of monopoly.

Calls It Natural Monopoly

"The telegraph business," he said, "is as much a natural monopoly as the telephone business, or, you might say, the postoffice. Rates are fixed by a governmental authority so that there can be no question of profiteering by reason of having no actual competition in telegraph."

Jones said the Reconstruction Finance Corporation had loaned five million dollars to Postal several years ago to keep it out of bankruptcy proceedings and had authorized an additional $1,500,000, of which about one million dollars had been drawn, to tide it over until an effort could be made to obtain merger legislation.

Brig. Gen. Frank E. Stoner of the Army Signal Corps also asked swift enactment of the legislation as a means of making more efficient use of existing communications equipment.

"The interests of the war effort will best be served," he declared, "if this consolidation is effected without delay."

Hearing on Ewing Plea for New Trial Continues Today

The extended hearings on Orman W. Ewing's motion for a new trial were continued again until 10 a. m. today, after three and a half hours of further testimony yesterday.

A number of witnesses, including the 55-year-old defendant himself, were placed on the stand and two more affidavits introduced to support Ewing's contention that he was not properly represented by counsel at his trial.

Those who testified, beside Ewing, were Dr. Edward Vedder, George Washington University medical professor; Hester C. Chamberlain, Ewing's business partner and star defense witness, and Phyllis Ewing, the defendant's daughter.

Ewing was convicted of rape in February.

V. P. S. Receives Tax Refunds

The Bureau of Internal Revenue yesterday reported overassessments of income tax of the Virginia Public Service Co., Alexandria, totaling $61,865.78 for 1937 and $18,334.14 for 1939. Of the 1937 overassessment, $11,249.25 was refunded and the remainder credited. The 1939 overassessment was refunded.

The bureau said of the 1937 overassessment, $50,772.92 represented allowance of an additional deduction for a debt ascertained to be worthless. Allowance of additional deductions for depreciation for both years totaled $18,533.94. The 1939 overassessment included $5637.57 additional allowance for dividends paid, $4015.42 additional deductions for ordinary and necessary business expense, and $1040.07 additional deduction for taxes.

Arson Is Charged In Timberland Blazes in Virginia

Scores of woods fires were raging fiercely last night in southern Maryland and members of the Washington Fire Department joined hundreds of volunteer firemen in fighting blazes at Forestville, Clinton and Oxon Hill.

The worst fires were reported to be concentrated in the southern counties, but woodlands were ablaze in other sections of the State, with at least one fire near Towson, north of Baltimore, out of control.

Reports from Radio Dispatcher Douglas M. Parr at the district forester's office, indicated that 2000 acres had been laid waste in more than 30 fires.

Five Other States Hit

Forest fires were raging in five other Eastern States, spreading over more than 35,000 acres of timberland.

The States affected were Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, Kentucky and Georgia. Some of the areas affected were in national parks.

State Conservation Commissioner N. Clarence Smith in Richmond, Va., said that he had evidence that some of the fires were of "incendiary origin."

Commenting on Smith's report, Gov. Colgate W. Darden, jr., said last night that he was "going to do everything I can to convict" those responsible for setting the blazes.

Power Lines Menaced

Smith said that most of the fires in southwest Virginia were under control except one on Rich Mountain and another at Ceres, both in Bland County. The fire on Rich Mountain, he added, was spreading into Tazewell County. In eastern Virginia, six fires were reported in Henrico County and one in Chesterfield.

More than a score of fires were reported last night in Buchanan County. In the path of one of them are the electrical lines of the Appalachian Power Co. Game Warden Henry Ratliff said he feared that most of the game in Buchanan County would be destroyed.

2 Farm Houses Burned

In Maryland, two farm houses were destroyed yesterday near Meadows, on the Marlboro Pike, and an uncontrolled fire was raging in Charles County and another in St. Marys County.

The Naval Academy's dairy reservation was hit by a 300-acre blaze and soldiers from Fort Meade were sent to fight the fire. Conscientious objectors from the Patapsco camp were helping fight the Baltimore County fire.

In nearby Virginia firemen from Annandale, Fairfax and Vienna fought a fire near Burke. They were assisted by more than 300 volunteers of the town.

In Washington the Fire Department responded to 16 local alarms of fire caused by brush blazes.

Senate Committee Cuts Playground Fund by $700,000

The Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday sliced from the independent offices appropriations bill $700,000 slated for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to be used in purchasing lands for playgrounds in the District.

The House had approved $900,000 for the Planning Commission. By its action the Senate Committee reduced the amount to $200,000.

Officials of the agency told the House Appropriations Committee that the $700,000 was needed to provide playgrounds for areas where the population has greatly increased. The amount would have had to be repaid by the District government to the Federal Government.

Price Praises Radio, Press On Censorship

By the Associated Press

Byron Price, director of censorship, said last night that "the heart of the whole censorship system" was the splendid voluntary cooperation of press and radio in withholding information of value to the enemy.

"Once a story is printed widely in American newspapers, it is difficult to keep it from being broadcast," he said. "Once it is broadcast, it will be heard abroad. Once it is heard abroad the enemy knows it and there is not much logic in trying to censor that information from letters and cablegrams."

Price discussed censorship in a radio interview in the "What Price Victory" series over the Mutual Broadcasting System.

"Newspapers and radio stations are asked, not ordered, to avoid use of such material," the censorship chief said in a reference to codes listing material which should not be made public. "The cooperation has been splendid. No one has tried to sabotage this voluntary experiment in self-discipline.

"There have been mistakes, of course, but the majority of the editors and broadcasters have played ball exceedingly well. They realize that on their cooperation may depend the security of thousands of American troops or their own cities and homes.

"Each editor and each broadcaster is his own censor. It is his responsibility to see that his newspaper or his radio station does not carry anything which might provide the enemy with valuable information."

He said the Office of Censorship now has more than 6000 employes and that eventually the staff would be double that number. This force censors communications which cross the borders of the United States.

Grand Jury Quizzes Flynn

By the Associated Press

New York, April 24.—Democratic National Chairman Edward J. Flynn spent 40 minutes today before a special Bronx County grand jury investigating charges that city equipment, labor and material were used in building an antique Belgian courtyard at his Lake Mahopac, N. Y., estate.

"I have no comment," Flynn said as he left the jury room.

He also refused comment on charges by William B. Herlands, city commissioner of investigation, that city-owned automobiles and city-employed drivers were supplied "improperly" to Flynn, Bronx Democratic leader, by the Bronx borough president's office.

Herlands submitted a 20-page report to Mayor F. H. La Guardia last night.

Flynn was the last important witness to be called in the grand jury investigation. Mayor La Guardia and Paul J. Kern, ousted head of the Municipal Civil Service Commission, testified previously.

Kern charged, after his ouster, that some 8000 city-owned paving blocks had been installed by city employes in the courtyard of Flynn's estate.

New Drug, Found in Haystack, Reduces Peril of Blood Clots

By the Associated Press

St. Paul, April 24.—Dicoumarin, a medicine literally discovered in American haystacks, in its first year of use is already saving lives of people threatened with blood clots and with the pneumonia which happens after surgical operations.

The pioneer work was reported to the American College of Physicians today by several physicians including Dr. Edgar V. Allen and Dr. Nelson W. Barker of the Mayo Clinic and the University of Minnesota.

Unsuspected by scientists, haystacks have been manufacturing this dangerous but life-saving drug for countless centuries. It is a product of chemical changes occurring in sweet clover during faulty curing. It makes blood so watery as to leak out of veins. When that happens the clover kills livestock.

Result of Long Effort

It took 19 years to learn all this, and a veterinarian first started the work, but the main credit goes to Prof. Karl Paul Link of the Wisconsin Agricultural Experiment Station. He found dicoumarin, and a year ago chemists synthesized it in crystalline form for medical use.

Dicoumarin does nothing to clots after they have formed. But it seems able to prevent them under all circumstances. Clots in lungs are often fatal, and when a person has survived one, Dr. Allen said, others are likely. However, not a person given dicoumarin at the Mayo Clinic has yet developed a second clot.

The drug is also useful to prevent clots in the calves of the leg, the main base where they are made and whence they move around the body to cause sudden death.

Price to Be Low

In surgery one of the unconquered risks has been postoperative pneumonia. In the cases reported today dicoumarin is credited with completely preventing this pneumonia.

The dicoumarin to save a life is expected to be cheap, probably $1 to $1.50 a day being enough. Heparin, another new drug which thins blood the same way, Dr. Allen said, costs 10 times as much.

Dr. Irving S. Wright, New York City, told of dangers from dicomarin. He said blood may escape from the veins so freely that it fills pouches of other kinds of tissue, and one of these pouches may get as big as a football.

theory, and the impulse to bid prices up is constrained.

Nevertheless, price officials admit the possibility of "black markets" arising and plan a tremendous enforcement staff to prevent breakthroughs in the ceiling.

"The price ceiling must stick," one high official declared with vehemence.

Details of the enforcement machinery have not been worked out yet, it was learned. It is known, however, that while the OPA is counting on "industry watching" to perform an important role, the Canadian system of "housewife policing" will not be followed.

Accompanying the order, it is expected, will be further restrictions on installment credit. Present requirements on the percentage of down payments may be increasd in certain instances, and the period over which an installment purchase may run will be cut back from the present 15 and 18 months to a maximum of about one year.

Date Presents Problem

Details of the price order still being worked over, it was reported, include the problem of hardship that will fall on certain dealers by reason of the choice of a date as the basis for the price ceiling.

For example, some firms may have been selling stocks out of inventories on the day picked as the price base date at a lower price than they can now replace them. Unless some adjustment is made these firms will be penalized for what was essentially an economic and patriotic practice, while other concerns, which had already raised prices by the base date, will be in a more favorable position.

Top officials were agreed that there has been an almost utter lack of realization of the terrific impact on the American economy which the order will have.

They pointed out that for centuries, the price factor has served as an automatic market adjustor. With prices limited, some other form of controls must take their place. These controls, by and large, must necessarily be Government orders.

Production Orders Seen

For example, if the Government wishes to stimulate the manufacture of coarse grades of cloth when present prices make finer grades of cloth more profitable to the mills, the price incentive to effect the switch can no longer be used when ceilings are fixed. The alternative is for the Government to order the mills to produce the desired article.

Thus, officials admitted, there will be increasing instances of factories working under "forced draft," the forcing coming from the Government.

The emergence of a group rationtion system, as contrasted with the present procedure of individual rationing on such items as autos, tires, sugar, gasoline, etc. will come through reasons of administrative economy and simplicity, officials explained.

Rather than one ration card and quota for coffee, another for tea, another for cocoa, or one for each spice or canned food or dairy product, similar items will be lumped, a point value given to each, and cards issued for the whole group with consumers given the option to use all their points on one item, or to divide them up among the group.

Durable Goods Unrationed

The remaining supplies of consumers' durable goods—vacuum cleaners, radios, electrical appliances, and such items, the manufacture of which will soon be ended—will not be rationed, although some attempt may be made to limit dealers' sales to a specified amount each month, in order to make the remaining supplies last longer.

There may be a rationing of some hardware items, but the major fields for rationing, it is now clear, are food and clothing. It is almost certain that many food items will not be rationed for a long time to come, if at all. There is serious question, however, of whether it is possible to ration any clothing items without rationing all.

Finns Not Joining Nazis, Says Envoy

Finnish Minister Hjalmar Procope last night denied press reports from Russia asserting that Finnish troops have moved south to join hard pressed German divisions on the Kalinin front.

Describing the report as "misleading," Procope said all Finnish troops are engaged on fronts "not far from the territorial boundaries of Finland."

Any Finns who may be serving with the Germans voluntarily, he said, "cannot be termed Finnish troops as they do not stand under the command of Finnish authorities and have entered in foreign service on their own responsibility."

Flood Waters Sweeping On Denver Lowlands

Denver, April 24 (AP).—A warning that flood waters are sweeping down upon Denver lowlands and areas along the South Platte River in which thousands of persons live was issued today by the Weather Bureau.

The high water will overflow probably tomorrow from the mouth of Platte Canyon about 20 miles south of Denver, and inundate all lowlands below 7000 feet, the Weather Bureau predicted.

The river flows through the center of Denver, only a few blocks from the downtown business section.

Memories of Singapore Cloud Fun of Her Shopping Tour

SAFE AND HAPPY—Mrs. William Nicholas and her three children, Wilfred, 12; Richard, 8, and Eleanor, 5, are in a happy mood after their safe journey from Singapore with just what they have on their backs

A young woman in slacks strode through some downtown stores yesterday, trying to see the newest clothes through eyes that for three months had been too full of other things.

The woman, Mrs. W. A. Nicholas, three months out of Singapore, was remembering Japanese dive bombers that fell from the sky like rocks over Penang last December 8, and a good strong ship which, bringing her and her three children home to safety, was blasted apart by bombs, burned and beached.

But she got back here, in her slacks nd with a dress a Dutch woman gave her in Sumatra. In the ship bombing she had lost all she had but her children, the slacks and her wedding ring.

The adventure began December 8. Mrs. Nicholas, daughter of the late Dr. William E. Pairo of Washington, and sister-in-law of Col. John W. Oehmann, U. S. A., former District Building Inspector, had lived in the Orient with her husband, a British health officer, for 13 years. When the Jap bombers came over Penang, the family set out "up country" and then to Singapore on a British Army train. She did not believe the great bastion could fall.

But Left in Time

In the general anxieties however, she decided to bring the children, Wilfred, 12, Richard, 8, and Eleanor, 4, to Washington, which she hadn't seen since 1933. Passage became available and they departed on January 3 (the city fell to the Japanese on February 15). Every night during her 144-day stay in Singapore bombs had fallen. She had grabbed up nothing in the hurry of leaving Penang but a handkerchief. In Singapore everything was getting scarce but she managed to buy a few dresses.

Then, in late January, the ship brought her and the children to Sumatra and bombings began again. Everything in the harbor lay under the blastings and the ship captain told the passengers they had better go ashore. Mrs. Nicholas led her children up a hill overlooking the waterfront. There, from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. they looked down, while bombs ripped the water and tore docks and shipping apart. She couldn't take her eyes off the ship that had brought her across so much imperiled water out of Singapore. She saw it finally struck, the last one hit in the harbor.

Manage to Escape

Nuns and Catholic brothers gave them shelter and some clothes. After a week there, they took a train to Osterhaven. 'And then we crept out one night aboard a small coastal vessel for Merak." From there they went to Batavia, stayed there a week and went to Sourabaya. Then they took a liner, bound for Australia, New Zealand and the United States.

They had just stepped aboard it when Japanese planes appeared again. About all Mrs. Nicholas recalls of that scene is one of the planes, the rising sun on its wings, crashing down in smoke.

The liner got away, but there was little rest.

"Every time we saw anything on the horizon, the ship would turn and make off another way," she remembered. "It was impossible to keep the movement of time in mind."

She left her husband, whom she had met while he was engaged in research at Johns Hopkins University, on the dock in Singapore. No word has come from him. Richard and Wilfred will be put in school here, and live with their mother at their grandmother's home, 31 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest.

nated all of the $400,000 allowed by the House for the board's national defense activities and cut $268,000 from its regular appropriation. During the hearings, Senator McKellar told Planning Board members that "I don't say yours is the most useless (agency), but I think it is one that can be postponed in part while we are in a death struggle with the powers now confronting us."

Later Mr. McKellar told reporters he wasn't singling out the independent offices for special treatment—"we are going to cut out as many unnecessary expenditures as possible on all of the bills. We may have to fight it out on the Senate floor, but we have done a careful job. We are trying to provide enough money to run essential nonwar agencies and no more."

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, whose special Senate war economy committe will complete its survey of nonessential activities and personnel next week, was a member of the Appropriations Committee voting for the cuts. Tydings said he was receiving "a patriotic response" from bureau heads.

"It has been encouraging for me to find many department chiefs voluntarily making economies and actual sacrifices where their work isn't vital to the war," he said.

Although the life of the Export-Import Bank had been extended to 1947, the Senate committee eliminated the entire $270,533 allowed by the House for running expenses of that agency.

"We're not in the export-import business anymore," commented Senator McKellar. "The lend-lease establishment can handle that work."

In the case of the Tennessee Valley Authority, a direct $36,120,112 appropriation was included in the bill, replacing the revolving fund revenue, which will go into the Treasury. This resulted technically in an increase in the total of the bill over House figures, although the net result of all cuts was a saving of more than 13 million dollars.

In administrative expenses of the Home Owners Loan Corp., a cut of $3,153,712 was ordered, with a proviso that the 12 million-dollar balance be spread over 12 months, and that none of the money be used to continue HOLC regional offices.

The Federal Housing Administration took a $419,844 cut, including $180,000 eliminated by forbidding continuance of the FHA Public Relations and Education division. Another $189,844 in FHA travel expenses was cut.

The Federal Works Agency took a $8,026,540 cut, including a $5,300,000 slash in the 22-million-dollar appropriation for elimination of grade crossings and elimination of $500,000 for public land highways.

The District's Alley Dwelling Authority also was hit. The Senate committee denied the ADA authority to use next year the unexpended balance of existing appropriations or receipts from housing developments to meet administrative expenses after June 30. The House gave the agency this authority, so the issue will go to conference.

Other reductions made in the bill:

Civil Service Commission, $907,307; Federal Communications Commission, $312,460; Federal Loan Agency, $8,425; Electric Home and Farm Authority, $50,000; Federal Home Loan Bank board, $250,938; Federal Savings & Loan Corporation, $50,443; RFC, $24,500; Federal Trade Commission, $252,224; General Accounting Office, $16,205; Interstate Commerce Commission, $81,545; Securities and Exchange Commission, $530,000; National Archives, $101,600; and Tariff Commission, $1800.

though I hesitate to say it, it looks as if it is a specific for the head cold."

Using it is simplicity itself. The best method is to massage about 15 drops into the skin of each inner thigh. Or 30 drops can be rubbed into the abdomen. The main thing is to rub it into a 10 inch area through which absorption can occur.

Of the 150 patients in the early stages of colds, said Dr. Cunningham, 109 recovered quickly. Marked improvement was noted in 23 cases, while in only 18 instances did improvement fail to occur.

Arms Goals Exceeded, Sights Are Raised

Randolph Paul, tax adviser to the Secretary of the Treasury.

The committee was concerned with the revenue side of the picture, also included in the revision. This indicated a probable deficit of 49 billion dollars in the next fiscal year.

Payment Formula Reversed

In the current fiscal year ending June 30, receipts will meet 36 per cent of expenditures, but in the next fiscal year revenues will fall off to 31 per cent of enlarged outlays, even if Congress raises the entire 7 billion dollars asked by the President. This means less than a third of next year's war cost would be met by taxes, and the balance must be met by Treasury financing, the reverse of the Treasury's original goal of two-thirds taxes and one-third financing.

Immediate issue before the Ways and Means Committee was how much of the new seven-billion-dollar tax load to take from corporations. At morning and afternoon sessions, Paul explained the Treasury plan to collect three billion dollars from corporations through an excess-profits tax ranging up to 75 per cent, and combined normal and war surtaxes of 55 per cent on the balance.

Against the Treasury plan, the committee is weighing an alternative program presented Thursday by Colin F. Stam, congressional staff expert on internal revenue. Stam proposed excess profits taxes ranging up to 85 per cent, and combined normal and war surtaxes totaling 40 per cent.

Following Paul's testimony, the committee took a recess until Tuesday, the day following the President's anti-inflation message, expected to include steep excess-profits recommendations. Chairman Doughton predicted the committee would reach a tentative vote on corporation taxes "around midweek." He said the committee will then pass on to consideration of individual income taxes. His plan is to dispose of taxes in each field tentatively, "raising as much as we can," before a final round-up on the bill.

In reporting to newsmen that America was progressing extremely well toward the 1942-43 production goals, termed "fantastic" when he outlined them on January 6, the President acknowledged a temporary lag in shipbuilding. The January 6 goals for the two years called for 185,000 planes, 120,000 tanks, 55,000 antiaircraft guns and 18,000,000 deadweight tons of shipping.

Steel Plate Output Lagging

The President was asked if he thought steel plants now being built would raise capacity to meet all requirements. He said he couldn't say as to that because there might be another program by the time expansions and new plants are completed.

Mr. Roosevelt said he thought shortage of steel mainly was the reason for the lag in ship construction, and this was partly because of an excessive diversion of steel to civilian needs. As to assertions by Chairman Emory Land of the Maritime Commission, that there was "loafing" in the shipyards, he remarked that that was a good burr under the tail of both labor and management.

He was asked if anything is being done to "revitalize" the steel industry, and he said that many minds were now working on that problem. He said ship plate is not coming through nearly as fast as it should. To meet needs, he said, many plants are being expanded, some new ones built and others converted. Referring to the steel factor, he said you can't make bread without flour.

He told reporters he did not believe there was any serious shortage in steel scrap, and indicated efforts should be made to uncover it. He pointed to great quantities of steel rail and abandoned farm machinery which could be turned up if necessary. A reporter suggested that WPA labor might be employed in salvaging old steel and the President said he would pass the idea along.

Property rights and custody of a child were settled by an out-of-court agreement.

Japan's Course Long Foretold, Dr. Walsh Says

Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University, said in an address last night in Memorial Constitution Hall that the Japanese conquest of the Philippines was part of a maneuver prophesied as far back as 1909.

Dr. Walsh said Homer Lea, the hunchback from California, wrote a book 23 years ago outlining all that has transpired since.

Dr. Walsh said the Tanaka memorial also outlines the progressive steps by which Japan would advance to complete domination of the Far East and eventually of wider areas of the world.

"It is a complete blueprint," he said, "of world domination, beginning with the conquest of Manchuria and mentioning the necessity of eventual conflict with both the United States and Russia."

Register Early If Your Name Is in 'A to P'

An appeal for men whose names begin with letters from A through P to appear at enrollment centers between 7 a. m. and 2 p. m. for Monday's fourth Selective Service registration was made yesterday by District Selective Service headquarters.

Although not mandatory, this would make for a more even flow of registration since an estimated 2500 voluntary school teacher registrars will be on duty during these hours while only 1500 are scheduled to serve between 2 and 9 p. m., a Selective Service spokesman explained.

If the suggestion is followed generally, it was said, there should be few waiting lines at the public schools where an estimated 80,000 men in the 45-64 age group will sign up.

Avoidance of such lines, it was recalled, was urged by National Selective Service headquarters recently as a special consideration which should be made for "elderly registrants."

Term Is Unpopular

But mention of "elderly registrants"—the same group which President Roosevelt referred to as "oldsters"—was lacking in yesterday's appeal by District headquarters. Jocosely indignant members of the 45-64 age group, many of whom served in the first World War and are able and willing to do their part in this one, have made such references unpopular through public and private protests.

District Selective Service Director William E. Leahy meanwhile pointed out that while aliens not actually residents of the United States are not required to register, they must obtain a ruling on their status by the local selective board in whose area they are residing temporarily.

The policy applies principally to several thousand youths who have come to this country for the sole purpose of studying, Leahy said.

Applications "for determination of residence" must be made before May 16 by all those who entered this country prior to February 16 and not later that three months after their entry by others.

Pupils Get Holiday

As on previous registration days, District school children will get a holiday Monday since all school employes and most of the buildings are to be utilized in the enrollment.

While registration here will be confined to the one day, enrollments in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties, Md., will begin today and continue through Monday. Alexandria, Va., residents unable to register Monday will be allowed to sign up tomorrow at the Alexandria Post Office.

Delinquency Rise Feared Due to War

War is exerting a definitely harmful influence on children 14 years old and younger and remedial action by society is essential if a wave of juvenile delinquency is to be avoided, according to Dr. James A. Nolan, director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association.

He addressed the Virginia Conference on Social Work at Richmond, Va., yesterday.

Since Pearl Harbor there has been a 25 per cent increase in criminal offenses by youths throughout the country, he asserted, quoting Children's Bureau figures.

The absence of parental control, since one or both parents may be engaged in defense work, or may be in industry to combat higher costs of living, results in a relaxation of discipline, as well as a freedom and liberality of action not usually available," he said.

Boys and girls in their teens are going to work earlier in wartime and more women are taking over the jobs of men called into military service, he added. Thus, he continued, they are exposed "to opportunities that increase the possibility of committing crime."

Dr. Nolan, who is an associate in sociology at George Washington University, called for continued support of child welfare agencies and boys' clubs. He urged parents and teachers to foster participation of youngsters in the war effort—to keep them busy—through sales of war savings stamps, collection of newspapers, tin and other needed materials and by mustering their services as junior air-raid wardens.

Scouts to Open Drive on Traffic Fatalities Today

Washington's concerted campaign against the rising tide of traffic fatalities will be launched at 11 a. m. today when 100 Boy Scouts start distribution of 100,000 handbills at 25 major intersections in the downtown area.

The pamphlets, prepared by the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, call attention to the fact that traffic deaths are soaring to an all-time record and must be stopped through public action. The handbill reads:

"Stop it! The lives of our citizens are being snuffed out at an appalling rate on the streets of Washington. Traffic accidents have doubled the death toll for this time last year. You are a part of the biggest and busiest Capital in the world. We are 'all out' for victory. You must be 'all out' for safety. Don't take chances. Drive and walk with the greatest care and help to . . . Stop it!"

Forty persons have been killed in traffic accidents here since January 1. The toll this time last year was 27.

P. O. Space For Telegraph Offices Asked

By the Associated Press

A proposal by President Roosevelt to locate telegraph offices in postoffice buildings throughout the country was submitted to a Senate Interstate Commerce subcommittee yesterday by Secretary of Commerce Jones.

Testifying in support of legislation to authorize consolidation of telegraph companies into single domestic and single international systems, Jones said the President had requested him to ask for a provision in the bill authorizing postoffices to rent space, where available, for telegraph offices.

Jones told the committee that the President believed there were hundreds if not thousands of places in the United States where such an arrangement could provide economy for the Government as well as the telegraph service and would mean a convenience for the public.

Protection for Displaced Labor

Saying that he was authorized to quote the President as favoring the principles of the merger legislation, Jones added that "naturally the President would want proper protection in the bill for displaced labor."

The Commerce Secretary declared that need for speedy enactment of the legislation was urgent and that otherwise the Postal Telegraph Co. obviously cannot survive without a Government subsidy."

"The fewer things we subsidize out of the Government," Jones added, "the better we will all be."

The Secretary asserted that there could be "no reasonable objection" to the merger on grounds of monopoly.

Calls It Natural Monopoly

"The telegraph business," he said, "is as much a natural monopoly as the telephone business, or, you might say, the postoffice. Rates are fixed by a governmental authority so that there can be no question of profiteering by reason of having no actual competition in telegraph."

Jones said the Reconstruction Finance Corporation had loaned five million dollars to Postal several years ago to keep it out of bankruptcy proceedings and had authorized an additional $1,500,000, of which about one million dollars had been drawn, to tide it over until an effort could be made to obtain merger legislation.

Brig. Gen. Frank E. Stoner of the Army Signal Corps also asked swift enactment of the legislation as a means of making more efficient use of existing communications equipment.

"The interests of the war effort will best be served," he declared, "if this consolidation is effected without delay."

Hearing on Ewing Plea for New Trial Continues Today

The extended hearings on Orman W. Ewing's motion for a new trial were continued again until 10 a. m. today, after three and a half hours of further testimony yesterday.

A number of witnesses, including the 55-year-old defendant himself, were placed on the stand and two more affidavits introduced to support Ewing's contention that he was not properly represented by counsel at his trial.

Those who testified, beside Ewing, were Dr. Edward Vedder, George Washington University medical professor; Hester C. Chamberlain, Ewing's business partner and star defense witness, and Phyllis Ewing, the defendant's daughter.

Ewing was convicted of rape in February.

V. P. S. Receives Tax Refunds

The Bureau of Internal Revenue yesterday reported overassessments of income tax of the Virginia Public Service Co., Alexandria, totaling $61,865.78 for 1937 and $18,334.14 for 1939. Of the 1937 overassessment, $11,249.25 was refunded and the remainder credited. The 1939 overassessment was refunded.

The bureau said of the 1937 overassessment, $50,772.92 represented allowance of an additional deduction for a debt ascertained to be worthless. Allowance of additional deductions for depreciation for both years totaled $18,533.94. The 1939 overassessment included $5637.57 additional allowance for dividends paid, $4015.42 additional deductions for ordinary and necessary business expense, and $1040.07 additional deduction for taxes.

Arson Is Charged In Timberland Blazes in Virginia

Scores of woods fires were raging fiercely last night in southern Maryland and members of the Washington Fire Department joined hundreds of volunteer firemen in fighting blazes at Forestville, Clinton and Oxon Hill.

The worst fires were reported to be concentrated in the southern counties, but woodlands were ablaze in other sections of the State, with at least one fire near Towson, north of Baltimore, out of control.

Reports from Radio Dispatcher Douglas M. Parr at the district forester's office, indicated that 2000 acres had been laid waste in more than 30 fires.

Five Other States Hit

Forest fires were raging in five other Eastern States, spreading over more than 35,000 acres of timberland.

The States affected were Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, Kentucky and Georgia. Some of the areas affected were in national parks.

State Conservation Commissioner N. Clarence Smith in Richmond, Va., said that he had evidence that some of the fires were of "incendiary origin."

Commenting on Smith's report, Gov. Colgate W. Darden, jr., said last night that he was "going to do everything I can to convict" those responsible for setting the blazes.

Power Lines Menaced

Smith said that most of the fires in southwest Virginia were under control except one on Rich Mountain and another at Ceres, both in Bland County. The fire on Rich Mountain, he added, was spreading into Tazewell County. In eastern Virginia, six fires were reported in Henrico County and one in Chesterfield.

More than a score of fires were reported last night in Buchanan County. In the path of one of them are the electrical lines of the Appalachian Power Co. Game Warden Henry Ratliff said he feared that most of the game in Buchanan County would be destroyed.

2 Farm Houses Burned

In Maryland, two farm houses were destroyed yesterday near Meadows, on the Marlboro Pike, and an uncontrolled fire was raging in Charles County and another in St. Marys County.

The Naval Academy's dairy reservation was hit by a 300-acre blaze and soldiers from Fort Meade were sent to fight the fire. Conscientious objectors from the Patapsco camp were helping fight the Baltimore County fire.

In nearby Virginia firemen from Annandale, Fairfax and Vienna fought a fire near Burke. They were assisted by more than 300 volunteers of the town.

In Washington the Fire Department responded to 16 local alarms of fire caused by brush blazes.

Senate Committee Cuts Playground Fund by $700,000

The Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday sliced from the independent offices appropriations bill $700,000 slated for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to be used in purchasing lands for playgrounds in the District.

The House had approved $900,000 for the Planning Commission. By its action the Senate Committee reduced the amount to $200,000.

Officials of the agency told the House Appropriations Committee that the $700,000 was needed to provide playgrounds for areas where the population has greatly increased. The amount would have had to be repaid by the District government to the Federal Government.

Price Praises Radio, Press On Censorship

By the Associated Press

Byron Price, director of censorship, said last night that "the heart of the whole censorship system" was the splendid voluntary cooperation of press and radio in withholding information of value to the enemy.

"Once a story is printed widely in American newspapers, it is difficult to keep it from being broadcast," he said. "Once it is broadcast, it will be heard abroad. Once it is heard abroad the enemy knows it and there is not much logic in trying to censor that information from letters and cablegrams."

Price discussed censorship in a radio interview in the "What Price Victory" series over the Mutual Broadcasting System.

"Newspapers and radio stations are asked, not ordered, to avoid use of such material," the censorship chief said in a reference to codes listing material which should not be made public. "The cooperation has been splendid. No one has tried to sabotage this voluntary experiment in self-discipline.

"There have been mistakes, of course, but the majority of the editors and broadcasters have played ball exceedingly well. They realize that on their cooperation may depend the security of thousands of American troops or their own cities and homes.

"Each editor and each broadcaster is his own censor. It is his responsibility to see that his newspaper or his radio station does not carry anything which might provide the enemy with valuable information."

He said the Office of Censorship now has more than 6000 employes and that eventually the staff would be double that number. This force censors communications which cross the borders of the United States.

Grand Jury Quizzes Flynn

By the Associated Press

New York, April 24.—Democratic National Chairman Edward J. Flynn spent 40 minutes today before a special Bronx County grand jury investigating charges that city equipment, labor and material were used in building an antique Belgian courtyard at his Lake Mahopac, N. Y., estate.

"I have no comment," Flynn said as he left the jury room.

He also refused comment on charges by William B. Herlands, city commissioner of investigation, that city-owned automobiles and city-employed drivers were supplied "improperly" to Flynn, Bronx Democratic leader, by the Bronx borough president's office.

Herlands submitted a 20-page report to Mayor F. H. La Guardia last night.

Flynn was the last important witness to be called in the grand jury investigation. Mayor La Guardia and Paul J. Kern, ousted head of the Municipal Civil Service Commission, testified previously.

Kern charged, after his ouster, that some 8000 city-owned paving blocks had been installed by city employes in the courtyard of Flynn's estate.

By the Associated Press

St. Paul, April 24.—Dicoumarin, a medicine literally discovered in American haystacks, in its first year of use is already saving lives of people threatened with blood clots and with the pneumonia which happens after surgical operations.

The pioneer work was reported to the American College of Physicians today by several physicians including Dr. Edgar V. Allen and Dr. Nelson W. Barker of the Mayo Clinic and the University of Minnesota.

Unsuspected by scientists, haystacks have been manufacturing this dangerous but life-saving drug for countless centuries. It is a product of chemical changes occurring in sweet clover during faulty curing. It makes blood so watery as to leak out of veins. When that happens the clover kills livestock.

Result of Long Effort

It took 19 years to learn all this, and a veterinarian first started the work, but the main credit goes to Prof. Karl Paul Link of the Wisconsin Agricultural Experiment Station. He found dicoumarin, and a year ago chemists synthesized it in crystalline form for medical use.

Dicoumarin does nothing to clots after they have formed. But it seems able to prevent them under all circumstances. Clots in lungs are often fatal, and when a person has survived one, Dr. Allen said, others are likely. However, not a person given dicoumarin at the Mayo Clinic has yet developed a second clot.

The drug is also useful to prevent clots in the calves of the leg, the main base where they are made and whence they move around the body to cause sudden death.

Price to Be Low

In surgery one of the unconquered risks has been postoperative pneumonia. In the cases reported today dicoumarin is credited with completely preventing this pneumonia.

The dicoumarin to save a life is expected to be cheap, probably $1 to $1.50 a day being enough. Heparin, another new drug which thins blood the same way, Dr. Allen said, costs 10 times as much.

Dr. Irving S. Wright, New York City, told of dangers from dicoumarin. He said blood may escape from the veins so freely that it fills pouches of other kinds of tissue, and one of these pouches may get as big as a football.

'Sensation' Promised in Patents Probe Today

into the possibility of having to draft industry," Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold told the committee at a hearing yesterday morning.

"All wars bring out profiteers," he said. "Big corporations are like political organizations. They have their minority groups with a short-term viewpoint who want to exploit all they can. Effectively exercised curbs keep these groups out of control."

Edward H. Levi, one of Arnold's assistants in the antitrust division of the Justice Department, stated that recent consent decrees—by which large corporations, under antitrust indictment, have assented to freeing patents in basic war materials—have been less satisfactory than earlier decrees, from the department's viewpoint.

Levi referred to Arnold's earlier testimony for an explanation of the alleged deterioration of decrees. Arnold intimated that the department that antitrust prosecutions by President Roosevelt's announcement that anti-trust prosecutions would be deferred for the duration where it appeared they would impede war production by keeping busy corporation officials away from their factories.

"The first thing we run into (in bringing antitrust action) is a lecture on interference with the war program," said Levi.

"This argument is getting a little tiresome," interposed Arnold, who told the committee that officials of one large company found it possible to give their time to court action from which they hoped to benefit, but sought to delay litigation against them.

In the recent decrees by which the Aluminum Co. of America and the Dow Chemical Co. agreed to release patents covering production and fabrication of magnesium, a metal lighter than aluminum and used in war plane production, the companies declined, Arnold said, specifically to make available to other manufacturers the technical knowledge essential to use of the patents.

The companies, said Levi, insisted that compulsory release of "know-how" would be like compelling them to work for somebody else, a situation amounting to "involuntary servitude." The defendants contended, Arnold explained, that full use of patents was insured by law.

Senator Bone declared that "people, under the protection of the flag, holding back vital information when this country is fighting a war for survival, have no business living in this country."

While admitting that he was not satisfied with the decree, Arnold maintained that it would accomplish the main purpose of freeing vital patents.

"I disagree with both of you fellows on this decree," Senator La Follette (Progressive) of Wisconsin, told Arnold and Levi. "Confidentially, it stinks."

R. A. F. Turns Fury on Nazis In Holland

3500 feet and did not release a bomb until the center of the factory area was in the bomb sights.

Preliminary reports of the Rostock raid said there were widespread fires and heavy damage—at the cost of only four R. A. F. bombers. German accounts, which have admitted severe damage at Luebeck, minimized the Rostock raid, but they did disclose that one of the attackers approached Berlin.

Rostock, a city of 90,000 on the Warnow estuary, is a key base for seaborne supply of Nazi armies in Norway, Finland and north Russia.

Canadians Man Planes

Canadians were in the bombers which blasted Rostock. The weather was good and they saw a spectacle of flame which lit sky and sea as they roared homeward.

"The flashes of our bombs were outlined for a few seconds in the flames," said Sergt. R. J. Heather of Toronto. "Then they were swallowed up in great fires."

Authorities said the Rostock attack was part of a new British bombing strategy of concentrating the bulk of aircraft in an operation on one town; thus to wipe out at least for the time being one target from the list of objectives.

That is what happened at Luebeck and the British hope reconnaissance will show that it happened at Rostock, too.

New air ministry figures, released tonight, said that in addition to power stations, docks and factories, 2000 homes and apartment houses were razed in Luebeck, a city of 150,000 and that photographs showed an area three-quarters of a mile long and from 200 to 600 yards wide was almost completely devastated in the center of the town.

Photographs taken two weeks after the attack disclosed some streets still choked with debris and impassable.

Nazi Raiders Strike Singly at England

London, Saturday, April 25 (AP).—German air raiders inflicted casualties and damage in attacks early today on areas of southwest England.

In one town casualties were caused by high explosives falling in a working class district.

British night fighters engaged the raiders, who came over singly. Bursts of cannon and machine gun fire were heard.

Catholics Urged to Aid Catholic Relief

The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, archbishop of the archdiocese of Baltimore, which includes Washington, yesterday gave his unqualified indorsement to the United China Relief campaign, now under way locally to raise Washington's quota in the Nation-wide seven-million-dollar goal.

Urging all members of Catholic parishes in the archdiocese to contribute to the fullest extent of their means in "this worthy cause," Archbishop Curley directed his message to laymen and clergy through the official church publication, Catholic Review.

In adding his indorsement in behalf of the Catholic Church, Archbishop Curley thus made unanimous the support of churches of all denominations to the effect to raise funds to finance medical and hospital aid for Chinese victims of Japanese aggression.

Many Washington churches will feature sermons on the United China Relief movement tomorrow, which begins the final week of the official drive.

The chancery of the archdiocese of Detroit then made public, without comment, the letter in which Coughlin dissociated himself from the magazine. The chancery pointed out that since Coughlin did this, "no priest of the archdiocese" had asked or received permission to have anything to do with the magazine.

Editor Before Probe

Pending a hearing week after next, Social Justice has been barred from the mails. The nominal editor, E. Perrin Schwartz, is already before the special grand jury, having surrendered two cases of records which are being analyzed by experts on the staff of Wendell Berge, chief of the criminal division, who is in command of the inquiry.

The only known leader of the secret revolutionist Social Republic Society, David Baxter, completed his second week under grand jury scrutiny. Ordered to return Tuesday, Baxter complained that the strain was driving him into a nervous breakdown. Prosecutor Reddan cut him short:

"There is one thing, Mr. Baxter, that I cannot too strongly impress upon you, and that is the gravity of this inquiry."

It was believed possible that some link had been unearthed between the Social Justice operations and Baxter's secret band, which he says will seize control of a revolution which he believes imminent in the United States.

Dr. Maude S. Deland, Burlington Hotel, was questioned by the grand jurors yesterday. Meeting at the grand jury chambers, she and Baxter exchanged greetings and conversed during a stroll in the corridor.

The association adopted a resolution proposed by the Capitol View Civic Association urging passage of the civil rights bill, which would abolish restrictions against Negroes in public places.

The unit reinstated the Marshall Heights Civic Association whose new president is the Rev. James White.

HOW COME WE USE FINE, WOVEN SHIRTING FABRICS IN THESE SHORTS?

After a certain period a fine shirt mill had an accumulation of bolt ends of shirting fabrics. Although these bolt ends were too small for shirts, they were just the right size for men's shorts. We contracted with this mill to give us these fine shirting fabrics. And then we had them all made up into comfortable French Back shorts. That's the reason you are getting 75c value shorts for only 59c.

FRENCH BACK 75c SHORTS

OF FINE, WOVEN SHIRTING FABRICS

There are two factors you should consider when purchasing shorts. First of all they must be comfortable. The French Backs on these shorts may be adjusted to six different sizes. They'll fit perfectly and comfortably even if you lose or gain weight. The legs are wide, the crotch is deep, the "trouser" seat is full . . . no binding at any point. The other factor is that they should wear well. The story at the top of this page proves that point to a fare-thee-well.

Two French Children Win U.S. Citizenship

After weighing their cases for more than two weeks, Justice Matthew F. McGuire yesterday ruled that two French children might be admitted to United States citizenship because they were born legally—though not geographically—outside the United States.

The two children—who will take the oath of citizenship May 5—are Catherine and Georges Thenault of 2151 California Street Northwest, aged 14 and 12, respectively. Their father, Maj. Georges Thenault, is a French citizen, while their mother is a native-born American.

A Legal Brainteaser

When the youngsters were brought into naturalization court April 8, they had presented the justice with a first-rate legal brainteaser, based on the following information:

1. Catherine was born in Hyannis, Mass., and Georges in Washington, both places unquestionably "within the United States."

2. Their father was at that time in the United States as an Air Attache connected with the French Embassy. The fact that their father was a diplomatic representative here made them citizens of France despite their American birthplaces, under specific provisions of the Fourteenth Amendment.

3. The section of the Naturalization Act permitting children, one of whose parents is an American citizen, to be naturalized on petition of the citizen parents, is worded with reference only to "a child born outside of the United States."

Law Overlooks Status

The drafters of the law apparently overlooked the fact that a child may be born within the United States and still be a citizen of a foreign country.

Justice McGuire was asked to determine whether, legally speaking, the children were born within or outside the United States—for if they were not included in the scope of the law quoted above, they would have to wait until they were 18 years old and then go through the lengthy and formal routine of gaining citizenship.

Justice McGuire cut the Gordian knot neatly, declaring in his opinion:

"Although these children in a geographical sense were born within the United States, by virtue of the status of their father at that time they became subject to the jurisdiction of the French Republic as effectively as though they were born within its territorial limits and outside those of the United States. They thus may be said to have been born outside the United States.

"The petition is granted."

Germans Held Perverting Art To Suit Aims

Aesthetics have been perverted and prostituted, but not ignored, by the Nazis, Dr. Emmanuel Chapman of Fordham University, told a Washington audience yesterday.

"The followers of the great lie stage huge spectacles and pageants, cunningly exploit the radio, press and cinema," he said in a lecture before the Second American Congress for Aesthetics at Catholic University.

"The theatrical effects of the blitzkrieg are played up even more strikingly—the shrieking whistles of the Stuka bombers and other noise-making gadgets; the parachutist leaping from the skies, fake representations of boats and submarine periscopes and all the other contrivances of deception and demoralization.

"The neurotic cravings of the frustrated house and landscape painter Adolf Hitler and his accomplices will not be satisfied until the canvas of the whole world is smeared with their obscene scrawl and entire peoples are twisted into monstrous shapes or blotted out."

Speaking on "Autonomy of Art," Dr. Felix M. Gatz, president of the American Society for Aesthetics, defined art as that which is of "self-significant form." Painting, sculpture and prose which only give information, but lack this "self-significant form," are not art at all, said Dr. Gatz who is head of the art and music department at the University of Scranton.

"Self-significant form is form which stands, so to speak, under its own law. Its import and meaning is contained within itself. It can therefore appropriately be called autonomous. Autonomous form is the essence of art."

The congress will be concluded today with morning and afternoon sessions in McMahon Hall. One of the three speakers this afternoon will be Martha Graham, the noted dancer.

Buffalo, N. Y., April 24 (U.P.).—Fred Tarpenning's collapsible bed fell upon him today and city firemen had to use their axes to free him. Tarpenning, 60, was pinned against a door casing by the 500-pound bed as he prepared to disassemble it. A little abashed, Tarpenning insisted, however, on finishing the job.

Mrs. Roosevelt Asks Support For Churches' Financial Drive

MRS. ROOSEVELT

COLEMAN JENNINGS

DANIEL C. ROPER

Several religious and civic leaders, including Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, yesterday called for support of the annual Washington Federation of Churches' financial drive, which is progressing vigorously, according to Dr. Worth M. Tippy, acting executive secretary. The goal is $34,288.

"I am very glad to have an opportunity to pay a tribute to the great work carried on by the Washington Federation of Churches, and I feel sure that a great many people appreciate what has been done, and what will be done if this program is supported.

"My best wishes for a successful campaign to raise funds to continue your work," the First Lady stated.

Roper Backs Drive

Former Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, now local chairman of the Washington Roundtable of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, said in his statement:

"The Federation of Churches has proved of great value in coordinating and quickening fellowship among the churches. Its work was never so important to this community and Nation as it is today, when democratic freedoms—including the right to worship—are definitely challenged in the present world conflict.

"The financial needs of the federation for its highly essential service to our people should be regarded as a responsibility upon all Christian people to subscribe liberally in this campaign for its support."

"I am glad and enthusiastic to support the work of the Washington Federation of Churches," declared Coleman Jennings, president of the Washington Community Chest.

"I have had deep insight into the work that is being done for service men under the able leadership of Mr. Grover Hartman.

Unique Contribution

"The churches have a unique contribution to make toward these men who are not only looking for entertainment but who need more than anything else the more intangible things that come from being taken into normal life of a church and family.

"Thousands of young men in the service are being helped in that way.

"In the department of social welfare, Mr. Francis McPeek is doing a splendid piece of work in bringing together social service agencies and the churches.

"We are fortunate in having as its leaders men who have the wholehearted support of the community. Dr. Blackwelder, as its president, is making a tremendous contribution, as is Dr. Worth M. Tippy, acting executive secretary, who is building from the fine foundation laid by Dr. W. L. Darby.

Compton's Statement

Wilson Compton, official of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, said in his statement:

"The civic climate of any community is not likely to rise much above the level sustained by its churches. One thing we know. The institutions of religion the world over have proven the most durable of all human institutions. They will so continue. In the pressure of war we should not forget to maintain our churches and the community service which they foster. Our Protestant churches have been criticized, often properly so I think, for their isolated attitudes and their noncooperation with each other and with other churches. The Washington Federation of Churches is a practical means of making the efforts of our churches count for more."

A growing recognition of the value of cooperative church action, as carried on through the federation, will be demonstrated by increased contributions to the drive, predicted Dr. Tippy, picturing an optimistic outlook for the campaign.

Service Program Praised

Dr. Blackwelder, federation president and Reformation Lutheran pastor, declared:

"I would believe in the Washington Federation of Churches as a symbol of Protestant unity even if we had no practical program of Christian work. However, the federation is a service organization. It exists to do a city-wide type of ministry that no single church or denomination can perform.

"The present emergency opens many new avenues of service which normal times do not provide. I appeal with fullest confidence in the program of the federation and in the spirit of Washington Protestantism for the most generous support of the present financial campaign to underwrite the worthy work now being performed by our federation."

Applying Christian principles to everyday home life will mark the Nation-wide celebration of Christian Family Week beginning Sunday, May 3, and ending on Mother's Day.

Special programs have been arranged by ministers and other church leaders to help these families reestablish American home life on the firm foundation of Christian living. Activities will vary from home recreation evenings and old-fashioned family suppers in the church to home prayer meetings.

Christian Family Week is a part of the United Christian Education Advance recently launched by the International Council of Religious Education and its 40 constituent Protestant denominations. Joining in the sponsorship are the Federal Council of Churches and the United Council of Church Women. The advance is seeking the help of all Americans in bringing religious education to more than 17 million school age children and at least 30 million other Americans now "unchurched."

"O JESUS, I HAVE PROMISED"
JOHN ERNEST BODE

O Jesus, I have promised
To serve Thee to the end.
Be Thou forever near me,
My Master and my Friend.
I shall not fear the battle
If Thou are by my side,
Nor wander from the pathway

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

This hymn was written in 1868 for the Confirmation of the author's two sons and a daughter. It was inspired by the verse from St. John, "If any man serve me, let him follow me — and where I am, there shall also my servant be."

Futile Blow At Zoning

No one has given a satisfactory explanation of the bill introduced by Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee to let down the bars against boarding and rooming houses in Washington's restricted residential districts. For the duration of the present emergency the bill would permit the establishment of boarding and rooming houses anywhere. To be sure, that privilege would theoretically be canceled after the war is over, but it would be virtually impossible to revive present restrictions once they had been broken down.

If there were any real need for this proposed encroachment upon zoning regulations, opposition to the bill would properly melt away. But no such need has been shown. Homeowners in restricted areas may now rent their vacant rooms to as many as three persons, without putting their homes into the boarding or rooming house categories. Thousands of Washingtonians are already offering such accommodations to newcomers, and there are still more than 4100 vacant rooms in the metropolitan area listed at the Housing Registry. A large program of dormitory construction is also under way. It would be inexcusable, under these circumstances, to permit the indiscriminate establishment of rooming houses to undermine property values in carefully zoned residential districts.

Excess Profits

The 19-billion-dollar war appropriation bill just passed by Congress carries provisions for the renegotiation of contracts by department heads in case profits seem to be excessive. Severe penalties are also imposed upon contractors for falsification of cost data, and unreasonable salary payments are likewise barred. No fixed limit is set to profits, however, nor is any attempt made to define what is meant by excessive profits.

The legislation was sharply attacked on the floor of the Senate as vague, ineffective, and dangerous because of the large discretionary powers of control delegated to Government contracting agencies. However, it has the great virtue of putting chief emphasis on costs and full information regarding costs. As we have repeatedly pointed out, fixing limits on profits provides no protection against profiteering in the absence of adequate cost accounting. On the other hand, with costs and profits fairly estimated, the danger of excessive returns is greatly minimized. In any case restrictions on profits ought not to apply to single contracts or individual projects but to returns from all the business done by contracting industries. As Senator George says, the real problem of excess profits has to be met by taxes.

A rigid limitation on profits from individual contracts bears no necessary relation to the return of a company's capital investment. And that is the final test of fairness. Indeed, this kind of profits control may result in giving some companies excessive returns on aggregate contracts, while depriving others of the reasonable returns to which they are entitled. Senator George therefore suggests that legislation imposing fixed limits on profits should apply to all war contracts over the period of the war. That is certainly a much more reasonable plan, though this plan, too, gives rise to objections in case of companies engaged both in war and nonwar work.

There is still another controversial angle to the excess profits controversy that Senator George touched upon. He recommended that profits limits apply only to the profits remaining after other taxes have been deducted. That is a very important point. For much of the opposition to proposals to restrict or eliminate all profits in excess of a normal or customary return is due to the way in which the Government arrives at estimates of taxable excess profits. The present practice of computing excess profits first, without making allowance for normal corporate taxes, is the cause of justified grievance. For the method of computation results in cutting deeply into the credits allowed in measuring excess profits. Nobody can legitimately object to proposals designed to capture bona fide war profits for Government use.

But we shall be defeating our own ends by taxing corporations so heavily as to deprive them not only of war profits but also of earnings needed to keep them going and to pay normal dividends to their stockholders. For if dividends shrink unduly, equity capital for the use of private industry will go into hiding. What is more, individuals already subject to heavy taxes on income from all sources are hit extra hard and most inequitably by deductions at the source that take away a large proportion of expected returns on investments.

Reciprocity With Russia

Passing strange is the official report from Moscow that on April 18 an American bomber and its crew made a forced landing on Russian soil and were interned. The bomber, evidently, had just participated in the raid on Japan. From Tokyo there have been anguished cries for information about the bases from which our bombers took off. It almost looks as if Moscow is giving away that information. Accordingly the bomber incident will reinforce the feeling that the Russians should be asked at least for passive cooperation in our war with Japan.

Passive cooperation, as we have suggested before, would be insured if Russia were to lend-lease to the United States some of her air bases in Arctic Russia. Along this route we could keep up a continuous air offensive upon Japan. It is the direct and therefore the shortest line of attack. If we had bases in Arctic Russia—which is separated from Alaska only by a 60-mile strip of water—we could also set up weather stations which would be of inestimable aid to our offensive operations throughout the whole of the Pacific area.

We are not asking from Russia for the active cooperation in the Pacific which the United Nations are giving to Russia in Europe. Yet this cooperation is surely an argument for some approach to reciprocity. No American fails to appreciate the glorious feat of arms with which the Russians have held up Hitler. No American will stint his acknowledgment that Russia is doing yeoman service in beating Hitler. The effort has been so devastating that men's minds are toying with the thought that this war might soon be brought to a victorious conclusion. At the same time Russia is getting great aid from the United Nations. Material from our own arsenal has first priority, and, by a curious irony, that material includes the kind of bombers which the Russians have interned. The British on their part seem to be doing an effective job in diverting Hitler from his task in Russia by taking the war into Germany. Indeed, a second front, for which Lord Beaverbrook pleaded in his talk on Thursday night, seems to be an imminent development. Here is a dovetailing of operations and strategy among the United Nations in the attack on Hitler.

Why cannot there be an approach to cooperation against Japan? Russia is no laggard in thinking with this country that the wars that are now raging are all of a piece. She knows that Japan one day will reach out for Siberia. She feels compelled to separate the Pacific from the Atlantic conflicts solely on grounds of expediency. Yet her arguments against passive cooperation in the Pacific do not seem to us realistic. If it be argued that Japan would regard a lend-lease arrangement such as we have suggested as a casus belli, the reply is that Japan, along with Germany, is not operating in these terms. When she is ready to invade Siberia she will do so. The Axis acts on the basis of a prearranged schedule which requires the Axis to retain the initiative. Moreover, if it be argued that any such arrangement would worsen Russia's relations with Japan, the reply is that those relations could not be worsened this side of a rupture. The bomber incident should be the occasion for a further effort on our part to make such representations to Moscow.

Dollar-A-Year

The nagging of our dollar-a-year men has become so intolerable that Congress should issue a cease and desist order to its investigating committees. Donald M. Nelson has again been impelled to protest. He has 437 dollar-a-year men in various agencies of the WPB, and they are invaluable aides in the gargantuan job of converting industrial America to war production. Nobody else could do their work. In fact, if they were not in the organization, the bottom would fall out of the production side of the war effort. Yet, just because they are businessmen, they are made to feel like pariahs in Washington. It is no wonder, therefore, that some of them are beginning to think nostalgically of their private lives of ease and convenience. Mr. Nelson the other day spoke of this attitude in asking the Truman Committee for some restraint on vexatious criticism. He said that if it continues, the Government might have to draft the businessmen in order to keep them in Washington.

Did that restrain the members of the Truman Committee? Not in the slightest. Senator Truman insisted that the dollar-a-year men must adopt an "elephant-hide attitude." But some of the grilling to which the dollar-a-year men are subjected is calculated to get under even an elephant's hide. That is borne out by the brusque comment of Senator Truman on Mr. Nelson's report of the hesitation of potential dollar-a-year men about coming to the Capital. "When a man does not want to come, just give us his name," he told Mr. Nelson. "We will bring him down here, and if he fears criticism, we will give it to him first and let him go to work." The Senator talked like a policeman ready to apply the third degree. This is not the way to enlist the wholehearted and patriotic service of the country's businessmen in the greatest struggle of our history. This is not the way to win a war which requires the best work of everybody in the land.

It seems incredible that the Truman Committee should so vexatiously hamper Mr. Nelson in the responsible work he has undertaken. The committee must know that he has surrounded the practice of taking on dollar-a-year men with ample safeguards against abuse. As Mr. Nelson told the Truman Committee, a dollar-a-year man would not last five minutes in WPB if he were found influencing a contract. Only executives or technicians of a high caliber are appointed, and only then after it has been found impossible to hire suitable men at a regular Government salary. Personal records are investigated prior to appointment. No dollar-a-year man is permitted to make decisions affecting his own company. Criticism is always wholesome, no matter what the inconvenience to Mr. Nelson, but group criticism is just not intelligent.

Infernal Agitation

Every man in America who is producing ships and weapons of war knows that victory or defeat lies, in some measure, within his control. Taken as a body, these workers can put forth a maximum effort and virtually guarantee success for the United Nations. Or they can dawdle, fritter away their time and engage in futile controversies and thus pull the wreckage of a tempestuous world down upon their heads.

One certainty, in these circumstances, is that this great industrial army should have every encouragement to subordinate all else to the task of turning out ships, planes and tanks. From Washington, however, they are getting precious little encouragement of that sort. On the contrary, they are agitated by constant pulling and hauling over the 40-hour week, the closed shop, wage scales and so forth. If every loyal American workman were fully determined to concentrate his whole interest on the job at hand, he would find it almost impossible to do so while this heated debate on labor policy goes interminably on.

Admiral Land, our shipping czar, has not spoken out too soon against this demoralizing waste of energy. "We've got to have a national war labor policy," he told the Truman Committee . . . "If we had a definite program, it would stop the infernal agitation that is going around in everybody's head whether they have a closed shop, and open shop or some other condition." But we have no such policy. Congress has waited for the Administration, and the Administration has apparently waited for some miracle within the ranks of labor, until the whole situation is in confusion.

We have gotten to a point where even a second-rate policy would be better than none. Particularly in the field of shipbuilding, production is lagging, as President Roosevelt acknowledged yesterday, critically behind our requirements for this globe-circling war. Admiral Land believes that the output of ships could be accelerated 25 per cent next year and half as much this year by the elimination of troublesome labor questions and improvement of morale. That might easily be the margin needed for victory. Legislators and executive officials are taking an enormous weight of responsibility on their shoulders when they unduly perpetuate this controversy.

Comparable hesitation in the Army or Navy would have been immediately recognized as an invitation to disaster. But shipyards and armament factories are as much a part of the war effort as armed forces at the front. Wake up Congress! We are at war. The country is desperately in need of a fair and rational war labor policy to stop the present "infernal agitation" over issues that are insignificant beside winning the immediate battles ahead. And Congress must provide that policy or acknowledge that it is not keeping faith with the American lads who are shedding their blood for us on foreign soil.

AT HOME

Spring resumes its laughing look,
Sends clear water down the brook,
Cleans the pool of freshet brush,
Welcomes back the building thrush.

Somewhere in a meadow now
Fallows take the bite of plow,
Somewhere through a wide barn door
Seed is sorting on the floor.

Cattle seek familiar trails;
In the yard the milking pails
Shine with sunlight. Doors let in Open day to mow and bin.

Still the work goes on and on,
This as much for those now gone
As for those who stay to make
Beds, and build the fires, and bake.

Somewhere spans of horses miss
One who should be doing this,
Heed the alien voice, and still
Haul the wagon up the hill.

Normandie Jonah

The Normandie was overgrown in every respect. The only thing of value that may be salvaged is the scrap now blocking up a valuable dock. There is no such thing as a ship, according to our ideas of a ship, within that frame called the Normandie.

The Secretary of the Navy has done the sensible thing in asking some practical ship men to survey the hull. One sure report will be made.

To raise and equip this wreck will cost many millions more than to build a new vessel, smaller but more practical.

If this vessel should be raised within two or three years and equipped for service it will be a Jonah—a failure in operation—dangerous as an experiment in time of war.

Our immediate duty is to be brave, face the fearful loss, chop up the hull for scrap and as quickly as possible clear out a dock valuable for handling vessels in use.

Red Cross Slogan

I have read and heard the statement several times recently that the District of Columbia has lagged in its Red Cross fund effort. While $1 contributions in many instances are not fair because it is less than the contributor should give, enough of them will fill any quota.

I suggest adoption here of the slogan originated in Oklahoma in 1918, with which Oklahoma, with a quota of 150,000, sold 615,000 memberships. Incidentally, Oklahoma has exceeded its Red Cross quota this year also.

It could happen here.

The slogan was: "All you need is a heart and a dollar."

Value In Intellectual Offensive

We have read with interest in The Post, April 21, the text of the address by Archibald MacLeish, director of the Office of Facts and Figures, at the Associated Press annual luncheon, which warns against a "peace offensive" by the Nazis.

Not only was there no organized education against Hitler's half truths but the organized propaganda among our educators during the 1920's and early 1930's aided Hitler in winning his propaganda victories. Our educators were criticizing our Army and Navy and were trying to drive anything that sounded like preparedness for war from our national education programs. In those days the word "patriotism" was considered "reactionary" by many of our leading educators. The capitalists, the munition makers and those over 50 years of age were said to be the causes of all wars, and it was suggested that if we put these men in the front trenches there would be no more wars. England, not Germany, was considered the "big, bad wolf" among nations.

The question now arises: Are the educators who come to Washington to help win this war any more qualified for this job than they were in helping to prevent this war? So far it appears that our educational program to win this war has been chiefly, if not purely, a defensive effort. As we see it, our educational program has been designed chiefly to give aid and comfort to our people and to warn them against Hitler's propaganda offensive. This is indeed necessary, but it should be accompanied by a vigorous, hard-hitting intellectual offensive against Hitler and his partners.

Mr. MacLeish says in his address: "Specially, it is necessary to develop and to perfect a strategy of defense against the devices of political warfare which will insure the certain and continuing defense of the Republic on that front." This is indeed true, but the best defense is a vigorous offensive. Before the war it may have been in order to talk about "national defense," but now that the war is upon us we should talk about a national offensive—a United Nations offensive.

We know that the Germans have no love for the Italians, and vice versa. We know that the race program of Hitler does not fit either the Italians or the Japanese. We know that the pagan religions of Hitler and the Japanese are revolting to the Christian people of Italy and that Italy furnishes us with a means of getting at Hitler. We know that Hitler has said in "Mein Kampf" (p. 399) that the Japanese are a nation of imitators and that were the influence of the peoples of Europe and America stopped, the Japanese "culture would stiffen and fall back into the sleep out of which it was startled seven decades ago by the Aryan wave of culture." We know that the German people are far different in many respects from the Japanese and that for generations they have feared that the Japanese would lead a "yellow peril" against Western civilization. We know that a victory by the Japanese over the United Nations while Germany is being weakened would be dangerous for the Germans as well as for the English and Americans. The Germans know and fear this, too, and our intellectual offensive should give them no comfort on this point.

If the German government is preparing a "peace offensive" this summer, which Mr. MacLeish warns us against, why should we not call the bluff? Why should we not tell the Nazis to accompany their words with deeds if they are in good faith? Let the German government withdraw its armies from Russia and the other countries of Europe and give the United Nations some aid in machines so that we may stop the Japanese sooner. Certainly this cannot hurt us any and it can give the Germans a chance to save their face and their nation from total destruction. Let us call all bluffs of the Nazi leaders, and if they won't cooperate we can go to the German people with this knowledge. Put the Nazis on the defense, and take the intellectual offensive ourselves. That will weaken their morale and strengthen ours. There are many ways that this can be done without violating either the spirit or the letter of a strategy of truth. If we want the truth to make us free we should use it at every opportunity.

It is not the pleasantest thing in the world to carry forward a vigorous and hard-hitting intellectual offensive. It is not a pleasant job to create suspicion and hate and weaken the morale even among our enemies. But neither is it a pleasure to stick them through the chest with a bayonet, or get stuck through the chest with a bayonet. We are in a war not only for democracy but for our very lives and the soil which is under our feet. If we personally have been rather critical in the above we have no fear that those Americans whom we have criticized can "take it." They probably realize as much as anyone else that we must carry the intellectual offensive to the enemy, and we all—Government, public and educators—should cooperate to make this possible. District Boundary

A subscriber to The Post for more than 40 years, I have admired the fairness and justice of your editorial page. The editorial on "Boundary Line" in this morning's paper leaves something to be desired.

When, in 1846, this territory . . . now Arlington County . . . and Alexandria City, was returned to Virginia, the status quo ante was fully restored. Any proposal to reverse this action without the consent of Virginia would be an arbitrary exercise of national power. It should, and would, fail. States not immediately affected, cannot afford to establish such a precedent.

It is proposed that Virginia be asked to give up this section, and if she refuses, further steps can be taken. What steps? The right of eminent domain has been used to secure sites for various institutions. I have never heard it claimed that it might be used to take from a State of the Union one of its fairest counties and one of its leading cities.

The people of Arlington have created from an unattractive countryside a section of modest but beautiful homes. They live under the conditions they desire. The State controls the liquor traffic. They do not want the privately owned saloon because of which Washington ranks first in per capita consumption of intoxicants. They want to live in the environment they have created. They do not want to be subjected to the systematic and determined infiltration of an element that would destroy their home values, the sad experience of one of the home sections of Washington in recent years.

They do not intend to be deprived of the ballot, to lose this fundamental right of an American citizen, or to substitute rule by a Congress which has very slight interest in them, for a State government of which they are rightly proud.

Arlington is a national shrine. It is also a shrine of Virginia. It is as unthinkable that it should leave the State of Virginia as that the State should relinquish Mount Vernon. And no such act is necessary. The Government does not find it necessary to take from the State the properties in distant cities to which thousands of its employes are being transferred. The Navy Department has its office in Arlington, as will the War Department on completion of its building. But the headquarters of both will be in Washington.

Fixing Wages

For the 10 million or so union workmen in this country, wages, not only as measured in dollars per week but also in terms of purchasing power, are the highest ever recorded. At the same time the incomes of millions of clerical workers, Government employes, professional men, owners of small businesses, and subordinate executives of big business have increased little or not at all. Many of us whose former employment was knocked out by the war are trying to meet enormously increased taxes and living costs from an income actually smaller than in the depression year 1932. The members of this unorganized great middle class, make no mistake about it, collectively pay most of the taxes, buy the war bonds, and do it without any full-page advertisements to proclaim what good Americans they are.

Now we learn that wages are to be fixed at their present level, thus perpetuating $100-a-week plumbers, electricians, steamfitters, etc., on Government projects, for which extravagance the rest of us will pay from incomes frozen at the 1936 level. A truly magnificent proposal! Verily, the union chiefs made a shrewd investment when they put their money on Roosevelt.

Federalese

If you work in Washington and if your job includes putting words on paper—two categories which include thee and thine, thy neighbor, and thy neighbor's ox and ass—you then have a choice between using English and Federalese.

Many of us choose Federalese. We know not what we do.

English is "bad weather." Federalese is "adverse climatic conditions." But if Federalese were restricted only to the writing of weather reports, there would not be such a gnashing of teeth and sharpening of pencils (and axes) in this city of the enchanted bromide.

Since you are the villain of this piece, suppose we begin with you. (You are "the average citizen," or that curious cipher, "the average Government worker," or merely "the public." All these terms, you understand, automatically exclude me.)

You're writing a memo—which is Federalese for memorandum, which is English for a technique of (a) making sure the axe falls on the right neck when and if axes start falling (b) occupying 6 to 48 hours sending a statement through the interoffice mails which a two-minute phone call would clear up, and (c) telling him where he gets off. In Federalese this procedure is called "fixing responsibility."

Well, you're writing this memo. You quickly fill in To: Principal and Senior Pretzel Straightener Elmer T. Stuffshirt. From: Junior Aquatic Pretzologist Joseph P. Jones. Subject: Reported recent outbreak of pretzel dunking in coffee made from bucaaramangas and medellins beans in the North Central States. A glassy film slides over your normally intelligent eyes, and, thinking at no higher level than your medulla oblongata, you begin to write without a quiver: "You are advised that . . ." Joe Jones is not giving anyone, let alone Senior P. S. Stuffshirt, advice. No, he has begun the "time-honored" ritual of jumping from one Federalese phrase to another with all the nimbleness of a mountain goat.

"You are advised that as of the above date . . ." ("as of" means "on" in English) " . . . I proceeded from Washington into the field." Joe never goes any place, he proceeds. The "field," of course, is that endless wilderness which stretches in every direction beyond the District line.

"There is transmitted herewith," continues Joe, "a preliminary survey of a study on a broad mass general basis which I have cleared through proper channels by the direction of the director of pretzel information involving most of fiscal '42. In order to curb the rising tide of dunking and thereby stem the ravages accompanying this public practice, I proceeded to State headquarters and began field operations on State and local levels. A communication from Assistant State Pretzologist Albert O. Gosh has just reached my desk, which includes the following statement: 'Senior State Pretzologist A. W. O. Lemuel is in utmost accord with your viewpoint. He made one comment, namely, This is not without interest. I might venture to say it is superlatively fine!' Looking forward to your reply at your earliest convenience."

An English translation of this memorandum accepted by most scholars of Federalese (all of whom are now slightly nuts) would read: "Here is a report on pretzel dunking."

"Transmitted herewith" means "here is," or "I am sending along." "A preliminary survey . . ." —well, that stumps even the experts. All "surveys" are "preliminary," and they always "study." How? "On a broad mass general basis," of course! "Cleared through proper channels" means keeping one's nose clean, in English (colloq.).

"Curb the tide" and "stem a ravage" mean, in English, "to stop, to prevent." "State and local levels," "communications," "in utmost accord," "not without interest," "might venture to say"—but there is no need to "pursue" Joe's memo "to the bitter end." Don't blame him too much; his name is "legion."

Speeches? The best Federalese tradition demands that a speaker begin with: "The major problem which faces us today——" "Lay" audiences are always "faced" with a "problem." Then comes the rhetorical question: "What have we done to solve this overwhelming threat to our Nation's security?" (This speaker, by the way is complaining about the slowdown in tiddlywinks activities to people who are worried about Australia, India, our coastal shipping, tires and how to get to work, rising food costs and the baby's inflamed tonsils . . .) After "reviewing accomplishments to date," the speaker insists that "the surface has barely been scratched." Then he moves on to discuss "the task of every man and woman here tonight."

Federalese substitutes fog for sunshine, curves for straight lines, whipped cream for muscles. The ordinarily benign habit of using complicated, spaghetti-twisted Governmental jargon becomes a malignant sickness when it creeps from a man's pen to his tongue, and from his tongue into his brain.

As Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch once suggested, we should "Render unto Caesar things that are Caesar's"—and not "Render unto Caesar the things that appertain to that potentate."

Or, as that book which uses English with knife-edge exactness puts it: "Let there be light."

Corporate Tax

A corporation is in the eyes of the law a single person. It is, however, owned by a group of individuals, some of whom may be old retired individuals depending upon the income of the corporation for a living. It is unjust and unreasonable to assess a greater tax on a return of 6 per cent on $100 invested in a large corporation than on a like return on a like investment in a small concern. K.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

"Victory Through Air Power"

THE MOST baffling to describe, and yet pregnant with the greatest consequences, is the issue which is drawn, not very clearly but daily and everywhere in Washington, between the men whose minds are dynamic and the men who are fixed in a groove. Much of the seeming confusion, and much I imagine of the President's vacillation in settling responsibility clearly, arises here. He would like to give the dynamic men their head, knowing quite well that this unprecedented war cannot be won by routine minds. But the inertia of the loyal and honest static men is immense. At the same time there is the everlasting trouble of knowing whether a man who is not stuck in the mud is nevertheless a man who has his feet firmly set on the solid ground.

This kind of trouble is really beyond the reach of the congressional investigating committees, though the discerning men on these committees are well aware of it. The trouble is beyond the reach of accepted newspaper comment. For the villains in the piece are not villains at all, but rather like the old cracker who said: Yes, he had often been told the world was round but it was flat everywhere he had ever been. The toughest obstructionists to deal with in Washington are not corrupt and they are not lazy and they are untouched by defeatism; what really needs saying about them is what an Oxford professor once said of a paper read by a student: "It was empty, magniloquent, abstract, flatulent . . . I could have wept salt tears. But I couldn't do anything else; the young man wanted a clean heart and a new spirit, not a little top-dressing."

AGAINST such a background of feeling Maj. Alexander P. de Seversky wrote his book, "Victory Through Air Power." He is the exasperated enthusiast, one might say that he is a frantic eagle who can stand it no longer among the roosters and hens who, having wings, stay on the ground. But even if he is not judicious, even if he is an enthusiast, even if he is exasperated and frantic, he is an eagle and not a hen, and no one can afford henceforth to believe he is thinking about the war if he has not read carefully, and opened his mind fully, to what Major Seversky has to say.

It makes no difference whether or not he agrees with any specific recommendation that Major Seversky makes. Nor does it make any difference whether the book is right or accurate or sound on every point of historical fact or of technological prophecy or of strategic planning or of administrative organization. It is still for almost all of us, except the pioneer airmen whose cause he champions, a book of primary importance. It is one of those very rare books which, though they say little perhaps that others have not said somewhere before, are nevertheless capable of changing not merely men's particular opinions but their minds in general. Admiral Mahan's books on sea power were of this order. General de Gaulle's book on mechanical war was of this order. Major Seversky's book is not in the same degree original as these, being a popularization of ideas which have been current for about 20 years. Yet it belongs to the same order of book in that it may, and probably will at long last, make us realize that air power is not merely just another weapon but that it has opened a third dimension in the politics and strategy of the globe.

THE HEART of Major Seversky's plea is that we should open our minds to the revolutionary fact that in the future the decision on the familiar land and the familiar sea will be reached in the unfamiliar ocean of the air. Who can doubt any longer that he is right, and that as once the destiny of peoples was shaped by the armies of the land, and then by ships on the surface of the sea, so now we have come to an epoch when the destiny of the world will be determined by the mastery of the air?

If that is the truth, then who can deny his fundamental thesis: that until there is "a specific strategy for taking and holding the skies, our plans must remain two-dimensional in conception and therefore, notwithstanding the physical participation of aircraft, seriously if not fatally handicapped in an epoch of three-dimensional warfare"?

And if this thesis is true, then who can deny the conclusion that after the Army and Navy have been provided with the aircraft they need for their particular operations, it is necessary to have also an air force, capable of fighting and bombing the enemy, and of supplying itself, at long range; and that this air force should be developed and commanded by airmen who are as thoroughly at home in the air as soldiers on the land and sailors on the sea?

THIS ISSUE, which has been fought over so fiercely since the days of General Mitchell, will not down and is in fact more than ever alive today. For now we have the great bombers, and soon we shall have the mightiest armada of great bombers which the world has yet seen. The question is no longer professional, departmental, and bureaucratic. The question now is whether this power can be used to its maximum effect if it is not directed strategically, as well as tactically, by airmen who think in terms of air power.

Otherwise, it seems likely that this power, which can decide the war and will govern the future, may be scattered, and its use distorted by obsolete strategical ideas as to what are the vital points to hold and to seize, by ideas which belong to the age of sea power as such. It seems likely, too, that as long as the air force is subordinate and auxiliary to the older services, it will not obtain the priorities in materials and in the use of our productive facilities which will insure its maximum development.

IT SHOULD, I think, be said that Major Seversky, being an exasperated enthusiast, may give the general reader a false impression of the actual situation in Washington, leading the public to think that the airmen are all faced with a solid mass of obstruction. This is not the case. There is obstruction, and there is hesitation at taking steps too quickly which, though right, are so drastic that they might cause delay and disturbance.

Yet with all the faults which Major Seversky dwells upon, and all the initial mistakes, the growth of American air power is the outstanding achievement of the Government and of American industry. Moreover, the thing which Major Seversky really insists upon the most, that men who understand the air should rule the air, is by no means a hopeless cause. The Assistant Secretary of War for Air, Mr. Robert Lovett, is conspicuously equal to his task, and the debt we owe him is greater than the country has yet realized. For he has unlocked the door to genuine air power, and a good hard persistent push by the people, who intuitively believe in air power, will open wide the door.

(CORRECTION: In my article of April 23 describing the circumstances of 1917 in which President Wilson decided to assume the political leadership of the Allied cause, I said that in the summer of 1917 the Russian armies had collapsed, which was correct, and that Russia made a separate peace, which was incorrect. In fact the separate peace of Brest-Litovsk was not concluded until March, 1918. But when President Wilson made his decision, it had already been settled that Russia would sue for a separate peace.

(I regret this error, and should not have made it because as a matter of fact, as I well remember, while the studies were being made in December, 1917, on which the Fourteen Points were based, all concerned were very conscious of the Russo-German negotiations. —W. L.)

Price Ceilings

By Janet R. Keith

Do They Work?

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT will probably announce to the American Nation before long that something drastic is going to be done about rising prices. It is a safe bet that the drastic action will be a general freezing of all rents and retail prices. Such a freezing policy is generally admitted to be the only way of effectively damming up the wild floodtide of inflation. But will it really turn back the current, or is it only a flimsy stopgap?

Canada erected an over-all price ceiling four months ago, and on the whole it seems to be working effectively. Certain Canadian editors were, in fact, quite nettled recently when Mr. Walter Lippmann suggested in his daily column that there are grave objections to freezing prices as a guard against inflation. "If the proof of a pudding is in its eating," they said, "why doesn't Mr. Lippmann take a look at what a price ceiling is doing in Canada?"

THE CHANCES are that Mr. Lippmann took a good look at Canada before he concluded that frozen prices cannot stop inflation. His argument, briefly, was this. It is dangerous to teach people that stationary prices mean checked inflation. As long as money is more plentiful than goods the value of currency will depreciate in spite of fixed prices. The only sound way of combating inflation, therefore, is to control supply of money and supply of goods.

Canada's experience actually bears out Mr. Lippmann's argument because Canada's price-control experiment has not been simply an affair of freezing retail prices. Frozen prices have perhaps been the most spectacular part of the program, and as such they have attracted the most attention. But no absence of price control could possibly be effective unless it made an effort to control supply of goods and money.

Actually Canada has a five-point program, of which frozen retail prices is only one point. The second point is wage control. When the government decreed that no prices could rise above their level during a basic period last fall, it also decreed that basic wage rates could not rise. This ruling struck a severe blow at trade-union privileges, none too strong in Canada anyway. But it was a logical and necessary step in the government's attempt to control supply of money. Obviously prices could not be held down if the nation's wage income continued to increase steadily. There is provision for an increased cost-of-living bonus if living costs go up in spite of the price ceiling. Indications are that the United States will adopt a similar ceiling on wages if a price ceiling goes into effect.

THE THIRD point of the program is reduction of civilian spending, also tied up with government control of money supply. This has of course been accomplished by high taxation and Government war loans. There is every indication that, as consumer goods become less and less plentiful, the Government will have to drain away more and more of the taxpayers' money. With a price ceiling operating effectively, the Government can be sure that whatever small percentage of money it does leave with its citizens will buy a fairly constant supply of essential goods. A system of compulsory savings may soon be necessary in both Canada and the United States.

Fourth point in the program has to do with regulation of supply. This, of course, is accomplished by drastic reduction in output of durable consumer goods, curtailment of varieties, standardization of essentials. Rationing, restricted so far to gasoline and sugar, may soon be extended to other commodities. Price control and rationing should work well together in harness. They are both aimed at a fair and equitable distribution of consumer goods, and the machinery set up for one may prove of great value in administering the other.

LAST POINT is a system of Government subsidies to agriculture. This too is a means of controlling supply. When the machinery of price and demand is no longer allowed to operate by itself, there is of course a danger that supply will peter out. If the ceiling price of an agricultural product is so low that production threatens to fall off, the Government is empowered to grant a subsidy for the stimulation of production.

Canada's price ceiling does not stand alone as a protection against inflation. It is based on four strong walls, each one a stronghold of government control over supply of money and supply of goods.

A price ceiling in the United States will need strong walls, too. And it will constantly be springing leaks which will have to be patched with new legislation and Government subsidies. But if it can manage to weather the storm somehow, Americans will probably be glad of its shelter. There's tremendous psychological satisfaction in knowing that if a loaf of bread costs 9 cents today it will still cost 9 cents next week and next month. And it's very comforting to see in the papers that the cost of living has definitely stopped climbing.

Living under a price ceiling is something like being in an Anderson shelter. You may not be proof against a direct hit, but you feel safer than you did under the dining-room table.

Women In Germany

By Maurice Feldman

Subjects Of State Control

THE WOMAN in Nazi Germany is just as much subject to unrestricted control as raw material or the food supply. Two mighty state organizations dictate to over 35 million German women, tell them where they shall work, what they shall cook, what they shall read and what they shall say. They do not even stop before the most intimate feelings of a young girl or a married woman. Women who have been married for years but have no children are summoned to the authorities and notified that their first duty is to produce as many children as possible. Young girls are sent in groups to the front and are specially instructed that they will not have to be ashamed of a child born out of wedlock. "The Fuehrer welcomes every new-born citizen of the Third Reich regardless whether its producers are in possession of a slip of paper called a marriage certificate or not," said Dr. Leonhard Conti, the German secretary of health, on December 26, 1941, in Strassburg in a speech addressed to women. The organizations of German women comprise the "Frauenschaft der Nazionalsozialistischen Deutschen Arbeiterpartei" and the "Deutsche Frauenfront." The "Frauenschaft der N. S. D. A. P. is ruled by Frau Gertrud Scholz-Klink, the divorced wife of a little country doctor who was appointed by Hitler personally.

Frau Klink, the members of the Frauenschaft and the leading men of the board of health in reality exercise unrestrained authority over millions of women and girls. Adolf Hitler has announced that the most important task of the Frauenschaft and the Frauenfront (a mass organization to which every woman must belong) is to accomplish a speedy and thorough regeneration of the German woman and mother. Proclamations were issued to the end that the woman should be brought back to her "natural vocation," to "the cookpot and the nursery." All women holding executive positions in ministeries, colleges, editorial offices, and in commercial enterprises were fired. The propaganda drums into women's heads that they are unable to cope with higher governmental, economic or cultural problems. Furthermore, it is a shame for a woman to enter competition with men. Propaganda Minister Dr. Joseph P. Goebbels explains the place of the women in Germany of today as follows:

"OUR WOMEN and girls will not give orders like those in the capitalistic democracies. The women know only too well that this is a man's job and if they do not need to take the lead, what do they need so-called higher education for? The women themselves do not want it either. A woman finds happiness only in her home full of children. She belongs to the bedroom, to the kitchen and the nursery. There she finds happiness and meets the demands of her holy mission as a woman of the Nordic race." A propaganda campaign was launched in newspapers, magazines, movies and on the radio to create the necessary emotional background. Finally the minister for education introduced the numerus clausus for female students. Results of this restriction can be easily seen in figures; in 1932 there were 22,146 female students, while the figures for 1941 show only 6313. In accordance with the board of health and the board for general view of life, the 'Frauenfront' has appointed thousands of women and men as populating wardens. These confidantes of the Nazi Party control ever single phase of the life of a woman even in the remotest villages. A girl who is 22, but has delayed marrying, is visited by one of these advisers and asked for the reason. Lack of money is no excuse. If the girl maintains that she has not found the right man as yet, the "warden" takes some cards out of his file—photos are always attached—and she is ordered to marry any one of these blond Aryans. In case she does not, she is told to produce children, which "has nothing to do with marriage." Some available men are simply sent to her. Newly married couples are visited by these social advisers of the 'Frauenfront,' who find out how long the woman has been married, why she cannot bear children, etc. The state encourages the poor to produce more and more children by offering premiums; doctors and nurses are always ready to give information and medical help.

Social advisers also check up on homes and kitchens to see that ersatz foods are properly used, and too much garbage is not thrown away. No book, no magazine, no broadcast that is concerned with women's problems can be published without having been approved by the Nazi Party.

However, the Nazis have not quite succeeded in eliminating the woman from economic life. Although the woman was banished from intellectual work—an increased demand for her to do menial work can be noted. The armament program has intensified this need. Today there are 7,670,000 female workers in plants, five millions in the fields and 1,300,000 women as domestic servants. 53 per cent of all these are married. In the factories all women are supervised by spies, called social wardens. Their concern is to cheer the women up and to remind them that besides their work they have to fulfill their duties as wives and mothers. Although millions of women are working in factories, the birth rate is rising. In 1941 there were 12,000 more births than in the normal prewar year of 1939. But the newborn babies are necessarily neglected. An official publication, Deutsche Klinische Wochenschrift (December 1941), is concerned about these conditions.

"A great many newborn children die because they either get no mother's milk or too little. On account of the intensified industrial work more and more mothers are obliged to work in factories and therefore wean their babies and leave them at home under insufficient care. Thus, all efforts of the government to raise the birth rate have been in vain."

Family life, formerly a bulwark of German education, is now shattered and disrupted, since the National Socialist children's organization takes possession of them at the tender age of 3 and 4. Later, they have to join the Hitler Youth Movement. The leaders of these groups imbue youngsters with the belief that they belong to the master race destined to rule the world and that the young generation has every right to claim leadership. Their duty is to denounce every enemy of the state, even if their own parents are concerned. Every morning before school starts the teacher inquires about discussions at home. Confidence between parents and children is gone, since they cannot trust each other any longer.

A VIENNESE refugee woman told me of a tragic case which last year happened in Vienna, apt to typify family life in the third Reich. A little tailor living in one of the suburbs of Vienna was summoned to the Gestapo. The secret police agent accused the man of listening to foreign broadcasting stations. The tailor vehemently denied this. About three months later he was again summoned to the Gestapo. This time the officer directly named the day, the exact time, and which foreign stations the man had tuned in. Without any delay the man was sent to a concentration camp. His wife could not understand who might have denounced her husband since nobody shared their apartment but their own son. Finally the boy confessed to his mother that he had done it. "But father is an enemy of the state and received his well-deserved punishment," was his explanation. The mother shot her son and then herself. This is a true story and happened in April, 1941, in the neighborhood of my friend's apartment.

The young girls leave their parents at the age of 16, to spend one year in a labor camp. Every girl between 18 and 28 must devote one year to the State. Formerly the age limit was 18, but has been reduced to 16 during the war. This is a compulsory duty for every girl. Most of them are put up in labor camps or with peasants. The girls living in camps build their own barracks, learn to milk cows and to help bring the crop in. The war has inaugurated new organizations. There are women working in nurses' corps, others in "Frauenhilfsgruppen im Oeffentlichen Dienst," serve as postmen, postal clerks, conductors, guards, etc., to replace the men. Girls conscripted for labor may be shifted into any of these groups, including one whose task consists in cheering the soldiers up at the front, called "Entertaining Groups."

The girls employed in labor service are told time and again that they should not forget to enjoy life in spite of the one year's service. It is made clear to these girls that they do not have to be ashamed of children born out of wedlock. Whole groups of these young girls are often sent to the front for two to three weeks. Soldiers on leave receive special assignments into the girls' labor camps. The mothers of these girls who, of course are not enthusiastic about this "new form" of life, were told in the official Nazi paper "Voelkischer Beobachter." "It does not do the girls any harm out there (in the labor camps), in the open air and with all the solid food they eat, if a strong boy of pure German blood puts his arms around a girl a little more vehemently than those prudish town girls may be used to. Besides, we have to put away with all prudishness which belongs to another period. What is behind it, anyway? Nothing but false prejudice. As if those women who seem today so anxiously concerned about their daughters' morals would have minded a healthy, strong boy's embrace in their days?"

INDEED, there does not exist any difference between legitimate and illegitimate children any longer in Germany. According to the law they are equal. If the father can be found, he is held to pay alimonies, if not, the state provides for the child. The mother of a child born out of wedlock usually receives bonuses from the state, if she is working and unable to take care of her child; the child is put up in one of the many homes for infants.

"The word 'illegitimate' must be blotted out of the German language. There only exists the German mother and the German future. We must put an end to those shameless Jewish-liberal prejudices." Reichsarbeitsfuehrer Ley told a meeting of female workers in Frankfurt, October 11, 1941.

Girls and women alike are today mere objects to be handled by the state and the ruling Nazi clique. Where Germany's borders begin, there is an end to respect and dignity of woman as a human being with a soul.

Gneisenau Laid Up in Gdynia, British Assert

New York, April 24 (AP).—The British radio reported today the 26,000-ton German battleship Gneisenau was so heavily damaged during the German fleet's mid-February dash through the Channel that she has been laid up at the Baltic port of Gdynia "for extensive repairs."

The B. B. C. account, heard here by C. B. S., said the battleship Scharnhorst also was undergoing repairs, presumably at Kiel, and that the Battleships Tirpitz and Admiral Scheer and the heavy cruisers Prinz Eugen and Hipper still were lying in Trondheim Fjord

In one attempt to dash to the open sea the Tirpitz was turned back to the Norwegian coast by British torpedo planes, the British reported last month.

Fair Enough

World Germandom

ALTHOUGH we have been formally at war for more than four months, too few of us keep aware of the sinister, poisonous nature of Germanism, that treacherous world force which sneers at honor and mocks the trust of decent people. Yet, if we take the pattern or scheme which Hitler has attributed to world Jewry and compare it with the conduct of the German nation, we must find that in every detail this plan has been followed by Hitler himself and the German nation. This is the course of world Germandom. The German individual who goes abroad and takes citizenship in an adopted land is invited, even put under pressure, to betray the hospitality and trust of his new country and remain a German and an agent of world Germandom. He is expected to undermine the country of his adoption and particularly to take advantage of any of its laws which protect him in his treachery, with the understanding that in so doing he is performing the duties of a good German. If he refuses to cooperate, the German consuls and the agents of the bunds will report him to Berlin, and his family in Germany are likely to suffer.

PEGLER

In the days before the Hitler war Germans abroad were encouraged to return every year to a great reunion under the auspices of a department of the Hitler government maintained for the very purpose of promoting this world-wide betrayal, and report their progress in their various fields of operations. Those from the United States were honored, as Mussolini similarly honored some Italians living among us in the enjoyment of American citizenship, for this traitorism and such conduct was frankly praised as good Germanism.

IN THE FIELD of finance, Hitlerism meant, in one word, thievery. It was good Germanism to borrow in pretense of good faith as much money as other nations and their people would lend Germany, with a determined intention never to pay back a single mark of it. American industries, representing the savings of American working people, were induced to build plants which would be useful for the war that Hitler was planning against this country, among others, and the plants became German possessions and the profits, when there were profits above retroactive and whimsical taxes, were held in Germany. This was a national and racial plan of dishonoring debt, adopted with cold calculation by a nation and race which, at the time, was shrieking of the perfidy of the international plutodemocratic-capitalist conspiracy against innocent Germany. Thus, in every considerable part, the people of the trusting nations were induced to pay for the war machine, to buy the planes, guns and explosives with which world Germandom to date has crushed some countries and is now trying to conquer this one.

In the matter of racial clannishness the German was told that this was, indeed, the super-race with a right, derived from some mystic emanations from the German soil to betray, subdue and literally to enslave all others. His literature told him to shun the Italians because they were short-legged and swarthy and probably touched with the tar brush, and scorn the mongrel French, who are now invited to collaborate as slaves. It instilled in him a belief that because God was a spirit, rising like a mist from the land within the German boundaries, and from no other land, the Germans, and they alone, were God-people with no obligation to respect the rights of lesser breeds, because, obviously, God can do no wrong.

GOING ABROAD and intermarrying beneath their racial station for the purpose of establishing political and economic outposts, they could regard their spouses and children as beasts and abandon them casually, renouncing such marriages, to return to Germany and marry Aryans, if they desired. This was the doctrine of the chosen people, lifted whole from the indictment which Hitler had cried out to the world against a group selected for their numerical inferiority and their military non-existence, to divert attention from his own adoption of the same identical principle.

So recently that the memory is still fresh, the race-pure blond, blue-eyed Nordics, who had abhorred Jews as Asiatics, conferred on the Japanese status of Oriental Aryans and within a short time embraced the archenemy of Jewish bolshevism and then attacked the Soviet. This was followed by the attack in concert of Aryan world Germandom and Oriental Aryanism on the people of the United States who are predominantly Caucasian, Aryan and Christian.

So closely does the world Germandom of the chosen people follow the indictment that Hitlerism was founded on and yet, in our American midst, under fire and in peril of our national life, there rises on the altar a defender of the most formidable enemy of Christianity since the Crucifixion to mock the teachings of the Figure on the Cross above him.

9,600,000 Independent Voters Hold Balance Of Power as 1942 Political Campaign Opens

Princeton, N. J., April 24.—The independent vote in American politics—that group of voters who do not claim allegiance to any particular party—is smaller today than at any time in the past five years, but it will hold the balance of power in this year's election.

About one-sixth, or 16 per cent, of the 60 million eligible voters classify themselves as independent voters today. The major parties are sufficiently close in their total normal strength so that victory for one or the other will depend on how the independent vote goes.

G. O. P. Holds Own

Over the past five years the Republicans have improved their general position somewhat, but at the moment the party is not substantially stronger or weaker than it was in 1940. The war has apparently not brought any violent or substantial shifts one way or the other in the line-up of the major parties.

The normal strength of the parties today has been measured in a coast to coast cross-section poll which asked voters in the 48 States:

"In politics do you consider yourself a Republican, Democrat, Independent or Socialist?"

When the percentages are applied against the total of 60 million eligible voters in the Nation, the results are as follows:

Republicans	22,200,000
Democrats	28,200,000
Independents	9,600,000
Socialist and Other	600,000

Those figures are not necessarily a measurement or forecast, since the personalities of candidates and the issues of the election may cause shifts. The results simply show the number who at present consider themselves regular Republicans, or regular Democrats.

The Long Trend

The Institute has conducted this same survey at intervals for the past five years. The earliest was in May, 1937. A study of the trend shows a small Republican gain since 1937, and a corresponding loss among the Democrats. The Independent vote, after increasing during the period 1937-'40, is now about the same as it was in 1937.

The Republican trend can be seen from the following figures showing the number of voters who classified themselves as Republicans: May, 1937: 19,800,000; November, 1937, 20,400,000; January, 1940, 22,800,000; August, 1940, 22,800,000; today, 22,200,000.

The Democratic picture shapes up as follows: May, 1937, 30,000,000; November, 1937, 27,000,000; January, 1940, 25,200,000; August, 1940, 24,600,000; today, 28,200,000.

The growth and subsequent decline of the independent vote is as follows: May, 1937, 9,000,000; November, 1937, 12,000,000; January, 1940, 11,400,000; August, 1940, 12,000,000; today, 9,600,000.

Where Independents Are

Outside of the South, where the size of the independent voting group is small, the independent vote is evenly distributed.

It tends to be a little higher in New England than elsewhere, the percentage of independents being 22 per cent of the total eligible voting population there. The Pacific Coast shows the next highest proportion, 19 per cent.

In the other sections the Independent vote averages between 16 and 18 per cent, except for the South, where it is only 7 per cent.

A Jeep's-Eye View Of War On The Road To Mandalay

By Daniel De Luce
Associated Press Staff Writer

On the Irrawaddy Front, Burma, April 6 (Delayed—By Courier and Airmail to India)—I blundered into no-man's-land for 22 miles today and saw the little Irrawaddy port of Allanmyo dying in the flames that the retreating British army started last night.

My observation post was the white-washed brick base of a pagoda on a steep, burned-over hillock, one of the chain along the eastern edge of the pinched-in river valley.

Allanmyo, erupting smoke from scores of blazing buildings looked about 10 miles away.

Nothing moved in the road within my range of vision and the sky was empty of the Japanese planes whose bombing and gunning had helped drive the British from Prome to Allanmyo, 60 miles in two days, and then forced another retreat—"breaking contact with the enemy"—which was still in progress today.

Some time in the morning the Japanese infantry was believed to have filed into Allanmyo but there was no booty left behind in the fiery ruins of wooden shops, river wharves, warehouses, Indian temples and Buddhist monasteries.

Westward out of sight across the Irrawaddy, from Thayetmyo to Minbu, some 70 miles, five small oil fields and one refinery were put to the torch.

"Because they are scattered and impossible places to defend and it was senseless to disperse our troops" said a British government official, the "oil field executioner."

When I met him last night he was organizing the possible demolition of Burma's oil capital, Yenangyaung.

A dynamited bridge just south of Allanmyo appeared to have choked off the stream of Japanese lorries temporarily and what troops moved northward, seeking the new British positions, came afoot.

A gentle breeze stirred the pagoda bells, but everything else was silent and the land seemed dead.

Yet five minutes later I encountered 30 Burmese armed, fortunately, only with long-handled dahs, a native sword.

They dashed into the scrub jungle toward the left when they caught sight of my jeep roaring around the turn. There a crippled Indian grandmother, in grimy cotton dress but with a golden ringlet in her nose, lay in the dust of the roadside, her hands lifted to beg for water and bread.

The Indian army captain who was my conducting officer fired his revolver into the air to make sure that the Burmese kept running, and we stopped to give the ancient amma something to eat and to quench her thirst.

She had crawled thus from Allanmyo.

We did not know whether the Burmese were the advance guard of the enemy or simply lawless neighboring villagers, intent on robbing or killing the unarmed and impoverished Indian coolies fleeing north. Since not one return shot was fired we left our jeep parked in the middle of the road, motor running, and hiked to a pagoda.

Unwittingly I had driven through the temporary British line miles back and I had seen nothing like I'd seen in Poland, Albania or even Burma, marking the front. So the Indian captain and I rambled on, untroubled and unsuspecting.

Even the screen of tanks in the bush which was protecting the last units to be withdrawn escaped our notice and we continued far beyond without a challenge.

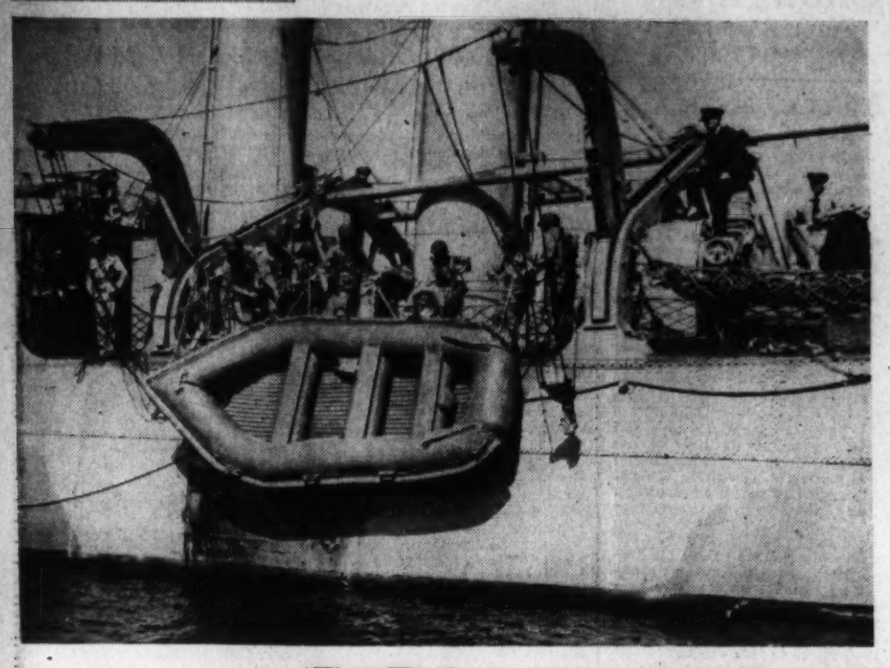
Leathernecks—Commandos of the U. S. A.



1. This series of pictures shows units of the United States Marines training with rubber landing boats for possible use in the type of warfare being waged today by Britain's Commandos. The boats are carried on troop transports and when action is imminent they are inflated by machine or by hand pumps. Inflated they will carry safely a squad of men with full equipment. This picture shows the launching of one of the boats. Then the Leathernecks clamber over the side . . .

2. . . . into the boats, ready to pull for shore and instant action. Depending upon the nature of the operations, these boats proceed by outboard motor, paddles or are towed by motor boats. The paddle is the main method of movement in all surprise operations. Next is a . . .

3. . . . closeup of one of the boats on way to shore. The paddlers set a rapid pace. Each man is fully armed and wears the new style helmet. Making landings on enemy shores is not new to the fighting Leathernecks. Since 1775 it has been their job and their banners are covered with glory. Remember Wake Island? The snouts of the boats . . .

4. . . . touch shore and the Marines leap into action—set to meet bullets with bullets or cold steel with cold steel. The rubber boats in addition to carrying the men with rifles also transport to shore side arms, automatic rifles, grenades, light machine guns and 60-mm. mortars. The Marines are practicing landing operations night and day—every day. When they hit the beach, the situation is well in hand

French-Canadian Larks to Sing at Festival

FOR the first time in the history of the National Folk Festivals, a group of foreign artists—professional singers of French-Canadian folk songs—will appear in the festival this year May 6-9 at Constitution Hall. They will be on all eight programs of the ninth national festival sponsored by The Washington Post Folk Festival Association.

This group is coming under the sponsorship of the government of the Province of Quebec with the patronage of Hector Rerrier, secretary of the Province of Quebec and minister of education. It is known as Le Quartour Alouette and is composed of four men who have made so thorough a study of the art of folk songs of their land that they have made concert tours of Europe more than once and were chosen among the principal entertainers for the King and Queen of England when they visited Canada and the United States in 1939. Queen Elizabeth expressed a wish at that appearance, at a civic banquet in Montreal, to hear an encore of certain of the quartet's songs including "Alouette" and "A la Claire Fontaine," both of which will be on their programs here.

The members of Le Quartour Alouette (which means The Four Larks) are: Jules Jacob, tenor; Roger Filiatrault, baritone; Andre Trottier and Emile Lamarre, bassos with Oscar O'Brien, director and Alexander Peppin, accompanist. They dress in homespun such as is worn much in their province—with red shirts, checkered gray trousers, high leather boots, and the authentic wide sash—"Ceintrue Flechee."

Their songs include Lumberjack and Canoe songs; songs brought from France by early settlers; folk songs purely Canadian in origin; and Handicraft songs. Their full repertoire numbers more than 500 songs, all they call "revival rather than survival" because the melodies are untouched but the songs harmonize into the four parts.

M. O'Brien, the director and really "builder" of this group, writes apropos of the coming appearance in Washington:

"We are going toward you in a most unpretentious way. Just consider us as messengers of good will who are very happy to have the privilege of playing a modest part in a great Festival of Folk Traditions; a festival that proves to the world that America is always the Land of the Free!"

Le Quartour Alouette was organized in 1930 by Trottier and Filiatrault with the aim—"to give artistic interpretation of fine Canadian folk songs." This was the year of the last Quebec Festival held before World War II. O'Brien was active in that festival work, along with Charles Marchand, a highly gifted singer who really designed the three festivals and had complete control of that final one till his sudden death in May, 1930—postponing the giving of the festival from June to the following October when it was given as a memorial to Marchand. The first public appearance of Le Quartour Alouette was in May, 1932. From then on they have built, first in Canada, then on tours in Europe and the U. S. A. and also with radio programs, until they have become an outstanding musical group of the world at large.

They have been featured on many important festive programs and they, in turn, seem most modest. They are glad to know that Mrs. Roosevelt will attend one of the festival programs and hear them and say it will be, "for us, one of the greatest events of our career."

Mrs. John T. McCay, president of the Vancouver Folk Festival, Vancouver, British Columbia, says to Miss Sarah Gertrude Knott, founder and director of the National Folk Festivals:

"So Canada will be there this year! How glad I am! It is splendid that the representation comes from Quebec. Vancouver will begin the work for its tenth annual Folk Festival with greater confidence—keeping the 'folkways' strong on the Pacific Coast as you have set the example on the Atlantic Coast in even these troublous times. As our slogan from the Greek—Aristophanes—goes, 'We are weaving a garment of comfort and dignity, worthily wrapping the people therein.'"

Members of the Sarah Lawrence Dance Club are shown at left in one of their dances. The club and the chorus of the college will appear in a joint recital tonight at 8:45 o'clock in Pierce Hall. Tickets may be obtained at the door and proceeds will go to the college scholarship fund. The chorus and dancers have appeared in New York's Town Hall this season. The chorus is directed by William Schuman, young composer

How Fleeing Antinazi Worker Raced Across France and Spain to Gibraltar

In the fourth and final chapter of Kurt Kokorniak's dramatic story of his escape from Nazi Germany, the former German aircraft worker tells of his flight through France and Spain and his daring swim from La Linea, Spain, across the bay to Gibraltar in the dead of night.

LONDON, April 24.—I reached the second frontier—that into Occupied France—in the afternoon. Neuhaus is a little frontier town about 60 kilometers from Metz. Here it was considerably more difficult, because I didn't know anybody and didn't even know exactly how the frontier ran. I had to find someone I could pump unobtrusively.

Finally I found some one in an inn that I thought would do. He was an old, one-eyed Alsatian peasant. And was he difficult! It took me two hours to get him to talk.

First I had to convince him that I was a Spaniard and not a German. Then he began to curse the Boches and really let himself go. The whole town wanted to go back to France, he said. The only exceptions were a few Nazis belonging to the party. But they weren't even natives, they were Boches from the Reich. I heard the word "Boches" all the way from Alsace to the Spanish frontier. It was the same story everywhere.

Shortly after midnight I got out. I didn't use roads. Guided by my compass, I went across country, over hedges and through ditches, as the old man had told me. I think I must have thrown my bike 30 times over barbed-wire fences 3 feet high surrounding the fields. At last I reached the frontier wood. At 3 o'clock in the morning I saw the lights of the French railway line appear.

I spent the first day on French soil mending the tires and repairing the bicycle. I thought now that I was out of Germany the worst was behind me. But I was mistaken. I discovered this for the first time an hour before Nancy, as I was approaching a large steel works.

I turned a corner, suspecting nothing, and rode straight into two German guards.

"Halt!" they called.

I made myself as small as possible and rode the bike all out. There were two shots, but they both missed. Then I disappeared round the next corner and the night swallowed me up.

The same thing happened when I wanted to cross a bridge going out of Neufachatel. A guard sprang up out of the shadow of the bridge, 30 feet in front of me. It was full moon; you could have read a paper by it. Before you could say knife I had turned around and zig-zagged away.

After that I didn't like bridges. I preferred the water. The next night I reached the canal zone of Longres. Again I had to cross bridges. My first attempt, just before sunset, failed. I got shots without any challenge. The whole of the next day I lay hidden behind a hedge, observing from a distance how they were looking for me and noticing what roads the guards used.

During the night I gathered together some planks, then I cut about 150 feet of cable out of a German field telephone connection, and with the wire I tied the planks into a raft. Thick mist helped me to get into the water without being seen. I stowed my bike and my things on the raft; I swam and pushed the raft through the water in front of me. I was glad when I reached the other side. The road to the demarcation line of unoccupied France lay open before me.

I reached it toward noon, at Chalois-Sur-Saone. At my first attempt to cross the frontier I was stopped by a double guard and fired at. My bike was hit and, with my baggage, it fell into the hands of my pursuers. Blood-stained and with my clothes torn, I ran to the town. I thought I was lost, but a group of French women saw me running across the fields pursued by the German soldiers. Without asking any questions they left the way clear for me and closed up again behind me.

I went through the streets at the double. Half a dozen young girls on bicycles rode in front of me to protect me from surprises. A few minutes later I was safely stowed away in a wine cellar. Each of those women risked her life; the penalty for that kind of thing is death. But they didn't hesitate a moment about saving me.

The French people still seem to be very ready to help. Of the hundreds who saw me, none gave me away. When I went on my way the next night I took with me, besides clothing and food, 500 francs. They had made a collection in the afternoon.

About midnight I swam across the canal, and this time it went smoothly. Unoccupied France took me in. In Tournus I got a new bicycle. Everywhere I was helped. Although the people here do not feel the burden of the army of occupation, the hatred they feel for the Germans is the same as in the occupied zone. In fact, it is more noticeable because the people do not need to be so careful about what they say. The country is like a powder barrel, and I have no doubt that it will explode at the right moment.

Without once being halted by the police I reached the Spanish frontier at Le Perthus. To cross Spain was child's play after what had gone before; I still had my Spanish papers and, since 1936, Spain had almost been my second home. On September 28, almost ten weeks after my escape from Sueplingen, I reached La Linea, a little Spanish town on the southernmost tip of the peninsula, separated from Gibraltar only by a bay.

The bay is about 3000 feet across and easy to swim, but when I got into the water a Spanish patrol challenged me. It was a bright moonlit night; if I swam on they could have shot me like a duck. I ran along the coast and through the sleeping town. At the other end of the point I reached the Mediterranean coast. But here there was a chain of fishing boats and I knew that many fishermen are police agents as well.

When finally I found a suitable place to get into the water without being seen, I was nearly two miles away from Gibraltar. I swam with steady, even strokes through the bright night in an arc round the fishing boats.

And then, suddenly, I felt an electric shock, which nearly paralyzed my right hand—then another, and another. I had got into a swarm of transparent medusa fish, a kind of jellyfish. Each shock nearly stunned me and afterward the place burned as though I had sat down in a bed of nettles.

When at last I had got past this swarm, a lot of other fish—huge ones—suddenly sprang up all round me out of the water. I was frightened to death. Now, I thought—now that your goal is in front of you—it's all up and you're going to be eaten by sharks. I was really frightened for the first time during the whole of my flight. I struck out at the water and swam like one possessed. It wasn't till the next day, in Gibraltar, that I heard that my "sharks" were harmless dolphins.

About 7 in the morning I reached Gibraltar. For the first time in five years I felt really safe. Three weeks later a warship brought me to England.

Fur Coat Investment

QUERY—I am going to buy a fur coat to last me for the duration and would like an answer to these questions: When would be a good time to start looking? Are furs likely to go up in price later on? What type would you suggest as a practical buy?

ANSWER—In about three weeks the stocks of furs in local shops will be well supplied for you to make your selection. It is advisable to buy early because there is a very great chance that prices will go up—although there is no authoritative statement along this line.

The Government also has made no statements in reference to an additional tax, nor has it committed itself in regard to the usual July fur sales. It is the consensus of opinion, however, that if there is an additional tax it will be levied quickly and that city-wide advertising of "buy now" sales would not be approved by the Government. The merchants have yet to make their decision on the sale issue. In any event, there will be a plentiful supply available, so don't believe there is a great scarcity.

Jane Driscoll

A few furs have already gone up in price. They are Asiatic furs, such as caracul, China mink and Asiatic mink, also gray and dyed squirrel and the spotted furs. Persian lamb, Persian paw, muskrat, Hudson seal, dyed ermine, lapin and coney are about the same price as last year. Of these, Japanese and Chinese mink are expected to be entirely out of the picture. The more important furs will be muskrat, dyed ermine, lapin, caracul, coney and Persian lamb, as usual.

Fashion authorities say the fitted coat will be better this year, but local fur experts are expecting this to be a casual year for furs in Washington. The great difference in the silhouette is the turned back cuff, which started last year and is carrying through on all types of furs for next fall and winter. It is especially practical on Persian lamb, mink and dyed ermine, but will appear on all coats.

The tuxedo, or baggy look to the front, is an important feature of fur coats. Collars are generally larger and many turn into a roll down to the front. The military look with soft, mannish shoulders no puff—Johnny collars ending in a modified sailor style and shirred backs, will complete the silhouette. Muskrat is the fur that will be liked in these styles for its modest price and practicality.

Cotton Suits

QUERY—If only one good cotton suit can be afforded in a summer wardrobe, what fabric and style would give good service?

ANSWER—Cotton seersucker is the fabric of the season for summer suits. There are seersucker suits available in every style imaginable. Some have short jackets, some long. Many are made to look like a two-piece dress and are worn without blouse. Others are tailored sufficiently so that a blouse might be worn, if desired, and the jacket thrown open.

The fact that seersucker needs virtually no ironing, except at the seams, makes it a desirable material, since irons will be at a premium. Less practical perhaps, but attractive, are the checked, plaid, denim and homespun suits. Gray and white stripes, together with green and white, brown and white, blue and white and beige and white, are the most popular combinations.

Washable Rayons

QUERY—In previous seasons when I have purchased rayon summer dresses I have always had them dry cleaned. This spring so many of the attractive dresses are made of rayon. What are we to do in the face of possible rationing of cleaning fluids?

ANSWER—Rayons in past years have not been washable to a very great extent. This year the story is different, however. The majority of rayons made up into two-piece suits and simple little dresses are washable. Materials are woven firm and sturdy, and in most cases the washing instructions are included with each frock.

Small-Scale Dining Room Furniture Now Available

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

DINING on a dime? Well, you have plenty of good company, for recent surveys show that most of America lives in compact small quarters and likes it. What's more, still more Americans are going into small democratic quarters before the present social upheaval has settled itself. Already huge houses are a drug on the market.

This is one place where the manufacturers were not caught short in the defense housing emergency when the spotlight focused national attention on the need for small-scale furniture. They've been making small-scale dining furniture for a long time, and so the consumer will find a very satisfactory assortment—most of it highly livable and practical. Tables, chairs, chests and cupboards in size for dinettes and alcoves are offered in a wide range of styles—leaving no excuse at all for eating on a card table. (No disrespect for card tables is intended here—they're fine for cards but not for dining.)

First Problem

Whether your dining problem involves a separate small room or an alcove or whether it means incorporating dining facilities in the living room proper, the problem of table and chairs is the first one to solve. If the room to be furnished is a dinette or an alcove, then a small table that can open up to larger size is the need . . . that means either a draw-top or a drop-leaf. And the chairs in this instance should preferably be the kind that can be set together to make a bench along the wall . . . they seem to take up less space than separate dining chairs and they make a useful seat used this way between meals. Even simpler, of course, are long benches to draw up to the table for dining or to push back against the wall between meals. These look charming and forthright, but they aren't as comfortable as chairs.

If the table is to be used in the living room, it can be an open-out type as mentioned above—and if floor space is limited, this is the best idea. But in many living rooms a big table is wonderfully pleasant and convenient . . . a trestle table or the sort we used to call library table, or even a full-sized dining table can be worked nicely into the layout of a living room.

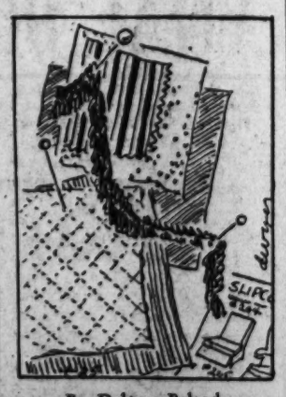
Home Construction

If you are up against a relentless budget that doesn't allow leeway for deciding between this and that, don't despair. A homemade dinette table of plyboard set on sawhorse-type trestles can have a lot of simple forthright charm. Or else make a plyboard table in the wall, attached by hinges, so that it can draw up into a wall cabinet or else be dropped down against the wall when not in use. This kind, of course, requires braces below that swing out from the wall or else picturesque rope supports from above.

Another excellent type of makeshift table for the informal room is a counter with stools, like the kind everybody likes to dangle over at the roadside diner. This is awfuly practical in the informal house where there's no maid but a gay lot of work "doing for" a busy, active family.

No matter how simple and practical you must be in making plans for dining in small quarters, don't ever let this family gathering become a sloppy, slipshod affair . . . no matter how informal it may be, keep it self-respecting and orderly and attractively casual.

New Type 'Bird Cage'



Bonita Granville owns something new in birds, hangs it in the south window of her sunroom. It's a wire gadget shaped like a bird cage, the "bird" a pot of ivy set inside the cage, the ends spilling out through the wire to hang in long graceful sprays. For variety, Bonita sometimes uses sprays of cut flowers in the holder.

Antigray Hair Vitamin Tests Prove It Works

By Ida Jean Kain

ONE of the most surprising stories currently going the rounds is that of the woman who is suing her doctor because she has been taking a vitamin in accordance with his prescription which has turned her hair from gray to its original color. Most women—and men—would gladly give any sum she fancies to be in the same fix.

This is the filtrate factor, para-aminobenzoic acid, about which I told you last fall. And I want to say right here that your only chance of obtaining it in the pure synthetic form is still through your doctor. Any doctor can arrange with the research laboratories for trial samples. You also get some of this anti-gray hair factor in yeast, rice polishings and in liver, but in as yet unknown quantities.

Process Varies

The full name of para-aminobenzoic acid has been shortened by Dr. S. Ansbacher, who identified it as a hair coloring vitamin, to the much more wieldy term of Paba. Dr. Ansbacher is research director for the International Vitamin laboratories in New York.

It takes about three months, I am informed, before you can be sure whether your hair will be affected by the treatment. At first, some of the gray hairs assume a yellowish tinge. Then they take on a reddish hue. It is during these stages that your hairdresser notices the change and insists that you must be doing some home dyeing. Finally dark patches appear. The entire process varies somewhat with the individual but covers a period of many months.

The hair at the back of your head, which is usually the last to turn gray, is the first to show the effect of the vitamin. That at the temples, which in men is the first to gray, is the last to darken. Unfair as it may strike you, a man's hair appears to change more quickly than a woman's.

It doesn't seem to matter whether you are prematurely gray or have the gray hair we are resigned to expect with middle-age. Among 30 cases under strict supervision as to diet and treatment are a man in the early 20's and one in the late 50's. Both were completely white-haired and both are turning dark-haired. There are even septuagenarians among the successful cases.

Effects Far-Reaching

To date, the treatment has been given to over 700 cases, the majority of them doctors, dentists, their wives and relatives. Judged by these reports it has proved about 75 per cent successful. Dr. Ansbacher, however, prefers to place the estimate lower—at the most, to 10 out of every 15 cases. It may be his conservatism has a personal basis. His own hair obstinately remains gray at the temples. Under the same treatment and on the same diet, his wife's hair has changed from gray to its original dark brown.

As pointed out by Drs. Wisansky and Ansbacher at the recent meeting of the American Chemical Society in Memphis, Tenn.: In addition to its effect on gray hair, Paba has been shown to have a pronounced clinical effect in cases of constipation, asthma and sterlity, and it markedly enhances the feeling of well-being. This increase in the feeling of well-being is uniform and is expected to contribute materially toward lightening the burden of additional work necessitated by our all-out war effort.

While you may not be able to obtain the vitamin in synthetic form for awhile, it's nice to know science is losing no time in research that will eventually make it available to everyone.

Food Decoration For Buffet Supper

Food is the best decoration ever for a buffet table. If you agree with this, you'll be interested in a decorative dish Ginny Simms arranged for a recent buffet supper.

Ginny, operating on the sound principle that a buffet is self-service, arranged even the green salad so the guests could mix their own. In the center of the table was a long wooden tray heaped with hearts of lettuce, slices of tomato, cucumber, carrot, crisp curls of chicory, piles of radishes, all arranged with an eye for color and line. On either side of the tray, tiny pots with various types of salad dressings.

Failure to Understand Chief Functions of U. S. O., Which Are Well Defined, Leads Public to Infer It Is Unsympathetic Toward Citizen Initiative.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have just read with great interest the worthwhile letter from "M. D. M.," published April 22, in which she tells how she and her husband are giving a series of Sunday night suppers, to which soldiers are invited "to meet charming girls." The purpose, she explains, is to boost morale by bringing together, in an acceptable way, some of the soldiers who are stationed near Washington and some of the girls who have come here recently to do war work.

Having found that the plan is easily put into practice, great fun for the hosts as well as guests and potentially far-reaching in scope, she brought it to the attention of the U. S. O. and affiliated organizations in the District, asking advice and sponsorship,—only to encounter "lack of cooperation" and "unsympathetic treatment," so she says.

I am taking the liberty of making reply to this aspect of her letter, because I feel that the functions of the U. S. O. are not clearly understood. The chief function of the U. S. O. is to supplement community activities of a recreational type; and, after that, to provide new projects as they seem to be needed. The "affiliated organizations in the District" include six member agencies,—and I am writing as a member of the national executive staff of one such agency.

The member agencies in Washington are these: National Catholic Community Service, Jewish Welfare Board, Salvation Army, National Travelers Aid, the Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. Representatives of these agencies meet in weekly conference, under the chairmanship of Mr. Joseph Bower of the Jewish Welfare Board, and the letter from "M. D. M." is to be given attention at the forthcoming meeting.

There are four U.S.O. clubs now operating in Washington and another will be in operation by June 1. Each member agency welcomes volunteer workers, and has plenty of work for all to do. Perhaps if "M. D. M." and her husband would affiliate themselves with a volunteer group, their contact with soldiers on liberty would be broadened and their plan strengethened. Sincerely,

M. M. F.

Hospitable Couples, Here's Job You Can Do!

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am greatly interested in the letter from "M. D. M.," which appeared in your column of April 22. I have been appointed chairman of the home hospitality committee of the District's Civilian Defense Recreation Services,—whose function it is to provide home entertainment for enlisted personnel of the armed forces. This committee has been in operation for a little more than a month.

Already a great many persons in and near Washington have entertained soldiers, sailors and marines at luncheon, tea, dinner, buffet supper and "open house," under the auspices of our committee. We contact the morale officers and chaplains of the various branches of the service and men are sent out either through them or through the Recreation Services' headquarters at 306 Ninth Street Northwest. We also have a list of young women who have volunteered to help entertain the service men and who are sent out to the various hostesses if they are needed.

The home hospitality committee would be very glad to cooperate with "M. D. M." and if she cares to talk things over, I can be reached by telephone any day, between 11 a. m. and 6 p. m., at ADams 1404. Sincerely yours,

MRS. MARTIN VOGEL.

Is Sight of 'Soft Living' Offensive to Soldiers?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The plan for "home entertainment" of soldiers, outlined in your column of April 22 isn't exactly new. It has been in practice here in Baltimore for some time. And those married couples sponsoring the plan here seem to enjoy a social and economic status equally as "comfortable" as that which "M. D. M." and her husband possess. Both members of the household are employed. Their combined salaries provide them an excellent livelihood. They live in apartments, which means that little or no physical effort is required in housekeeping. And, usually, the husband is within the earlier draft-age classification.

It is conceivable that soldiers would look askance upon this type of layout, particularly when the wife is self-supporting. Which gives me to wonder if the U. S. O. recognizes the undesirability of "entertaining" soldiers in such an environment. There is some question in my mind as to whether it would "build up" a soldier's morale! Respectfully,

BALTIMOREAN.

Styling Gives Cotton Lingerie Luxury Note

We may not be back to the good old days in some respects, but at least cotton lingerie with fine lace trimming and dainty embroidery is one result of our present uncertain days.

Cotton slips and lingerie wash well and always look dainty and cool. Today we find a larger and better styled stock of cotton lingerie than ever in such materials as dimity, batiste, fine muslin and nainsook.

It is well to look for the labels which indicate these garments have been preshrunk. They may be in a lightly higher price bracket but they will be infinitely more satisfactory. The styling and designing of cotton slips will insure the same good fit that has been found in silks.

Gadget of Gay 90s Return

Those who wistfully sigh for the "good old days" and cherish sweet memories of our happy past may soon find much of the household snugly back to the "gay nineties" with many treasured grandmother devices to decorate the modern home, points out the "Travelers Cheque" Survey Bureau of the American Express.

Among the cherished articles of grandmother's day now making their appearance are the return of earthenware pots, pans, jars and dishes, many more daintily colored and with many of the same designs. New wooden articles from wooden washboards to wooden jars and containers with all kinds of wooden kitchen utensils, including wooden dish drains, promise a greater wood variety than used in the households at the turn of the century. Juvenile games are to come back as in the decade preceding the nineties with animal playing cards, wooden poker chips, almost exact duplicates of the "good old days."

Plastic substitutes made from nonvital materials are now in order for the bathroom, with the glass and wood porcelain towel rack, the soap saver in colored wood designs, as used in the days when the Gibson girls pompadoured their hair and the dignity of the family bathtub changed to the bathroom of the nineties, which expanded with hair dye, paint and powder era when lily faces of the Victorian days took to facial decoration which exhibited 40 bathroom accessories made of glass, porcelain and wood.

Ham and Cabbage Choice Of Store Employes

WHICH would you rather have for dinner if you could make your choice—fried chicken, pot roast or ham? Ordinarily, the choice of most persons would be fried chicken. But not so with the 400 employes of the Frank R. Jelleff Store.

On Thursday when the shopping hours are from 12:30 until 9 p. m., this organization fetes its employes at dinner. Not only are the workers guests of Mr. Jelleff, but they are asked in advance to make their choice from a list of suggested foods. From the poll of this week resulted the following menu:

Dinner Menu

Baked Ham
Boiled Potatoes — Cabbage
Hot Rolls — Butter
Apple Pie — Cheese
Choice of Beverages

With all the splendid pre-cooked hams that are now available—cooking directions attached—it is no trick to make delicious baked ham. And cooking cabbage is simple. But it must be remembered that to retain the food value that cabbage should be cooked in a small amount of boiling water. If quartered cook 15 to 20 minutes, and from 7 to 10 minutes, if shredded.

But directions do not come attached to apples for making pie. I ate a delicious apple pie recently that deserves special mention. In fact, the pie caused the maker no little concern for her friends begged her to make them for sale. Her recipe follows:

Apple Pie—Line a 9-inch pie plate with pastry. Pare, core and cut 5 to 8 sour apples in eighths, put row around plate one-half inch from edge, and work toward center until plate is covered; then pile on remainder. Mix together one-half to three-quarter-cup sugar, white or brown, one-quarter teaspoon grated nutmeg or cinnamon, one-quarter teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons lemon juice and few gratings lemon rind and sprinkle over apples. Dot with butter. Wet edges of undercrust, cover with upper crust and press edges together. Prick several places with fork. Bake in hot oven, 450 degrees for 10 minutes, reduce heat to moderate 350 degrees and bake for 40 minutes or until done. If upper crust browns too quickly cover with paper.

Norway's Prime Minister Scheduled for Visit Here

Johan Nygaardsvold, Now in New York, Will Come to Washington Next Week

By Patricia Grady

"I've been working on the railroad . . ." The Prime Minister of the Norwegian Government in Exile, Johan Nygaardsvold, who will be a Washington visitor within a week, could join in the chorus of that traditional American song with a vigor based on experience.

This is his first trip to the United States since the first decade of this century when he spent five years "working on the railroad" of the Northern Pacific. His entry into this country on this his second visit has all the elements of an Horatio Alger success story. He arrived in New York by clipper from London two days ago and expects to come to Washington for a conference with President Roosevelt and other officials the latter part of next week.

The premier is waiting to make final plans for his Capital visit until he finds out the exact date of the return of the Norwegian Minister, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, who is now on a lecture tour of the Middle West with Crown Princess Martha and Crown Prince Olav. The minister and the royal party are expected to arrive back in Washington about May 1 after three weeks of speaking engagements. The minister has been introducing the Crown Prince who speaks on "The Norwegian Contribution to the Allied Cause," with Princess Martha adding an impromptu word at most of the meetings.

Prime Minister Is Typical Viking

The prime minister, who expects to remain in Washington about two weeks, has been head of the biggest party in Norway, the Labor Party, for some years and since 1934 has served as premier. A typical Viking in appearance, tall, with red eyebrows jutting from beneath graying hair, Mr. Nygaardsvold is considered to be one of the outstanding political personalities in Norwegian history. A quiet man usually, he is a bombastic orator, and those who know him speak in awesome tones of his tenacity of purpose once his mind is made up.

Though self-educated — after construction jobs on American railroads he worked in Norwegian sawmills for several years before choosing a political career —the prime minister is considered to be one of the best-read members of the Norwegian Parliament, with an exhaustive knowledge of history and literature. His wife fled with him to London when the government was forced to leave Norway, but his three children remain in their occupied homeland.

Will Hold Press Conference Soon After Arrival Here

One point particularly stressed by Norwegians is that the 63-year-old prime minister is the head of the constitutional government of Norway. It is not a free Norway government constituted after the conquest of the country, but is the government in power at the time of the conquest, ordered by the last free Norwegian Parliament to establish headquarters in London, where they have been since the spring of 1940.

Just what the plans of the prime minister are for his stay here are not yet known, but he will hold a press conference soon after his arrival. The Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne will probably give a reception in his honor, though social doings will be kept to a minimum as he has a number of conferences scheduled. It has not been decided whether he will stay at the legation or at the Wardman Park Hotel, where other visitors of the Norwegian Parliament have stayed during their sojourns here.

Accompanying the prime minister on his transatlantic hop were Toralv Kandahl, president of the Norwegian Press Association, who will act as chief of the Norwegian Information Service in New York, and Hans Christian Berg, counselor to the Norwegian Legation in London, who will serve as the prime minister's secretary during his visit here.

Stressed by the premier in all his interviews is the magnificent work the Norwegian merchant marine is doing in carrying vital war cargo to all parts of the world. The officially expressed reasons for his visit are "to strengthen further the war effort and to inspect Norwegian forces in the United States and Canada." From Washington he will go to Minneapolis to address a Norwegian independence day meeting on May 17. He is also planning a visit through the Western States.

Miss Nancy Stewart Ould Is Bride of Frank W. Fields

Before an altar banked with spring flowers, ferns and candelabra in the Potomac Heights Community Church yesterday Miss Nancy Stewart Ould, daughter of Mrs. David K. Correll, exchanged vows with Frank Wilton Fields, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Fields of Hyattsville, Md.

The Rev. Aaron Burleigh Kelley performed the 8 o'clock ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents in Barnaby Woods.

Given in marriage by her stepfather, Mr. Correll, the bride wore an imported gown of brocaded satin made with sweetheart neckline, full skirt and long train. The full-length veil was draped from a coronet of pearls and lily of the valley and she carried a bouquet of white freesia, orchids and gladioli.

Weits
MRS. FRANK WILTON FIELDS

Matron of honor was Mrs. William E. Eastman, who was costumed in rose taffeta made with full skirt and short train. She carried a bouquet of spring flowers.

Bridesmaids were Miss Ellen Nesom and Miss Catherine Fields, wearing pastel shades of taffeta with headpieces of flowers matching their bouquets. Miss Correlia Eastman, the flower girl, wore teal blue taffeta.

Eugene Shoemaker was best man and ushers were William E. Eastman and Vincent Marcionetti. Assisting at the reception were Mrs. Robert Slaughter, Mrs. Clarence Forsling and Mrs. Reid Baker.

For her traveling costume the bride donned a brown and white print dress with bolero jacket and small straw calot. The couple will make their home in Hyattsville upon their return from a short wedding trip.

They'll Farm for Victory

Artist to Be Honored at Luncheon Today

Miss Anne Harcourt will be the honored guest today at a luncheon in the Pall Mall Room at the Raleigh Hotel given by Mrs. Charles C. Adams, a war-brought addition to Washington circles from New York.

Miss Harcourt recently finished a portrait of Mrs. Adams, which is to go soon to New York for exhibit with several other of the artist's portraits. Among the 20 guests invited to today's luncheon are Baroness Stackelberg, Mrs. Martin Vogel, Mrs. Walter A. Wells, Mrs. James Holman, Mrs. Gordon Butler Fitts, Miss Lilita Dawson and Mrs. Robert Sloan who, like the hostess, formerly lived in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Adams have been in their house in Georgetown at 3331 Q Street, for about a month now. Before that they had taken a small apartment on Wisconsin Avenue and Mrs. Adams was kept quite busy with trips to New York and the business of moving their furniture down here and into their house. Mr. Adams, who was "in Wall Street" in New York, is now in the office of the General of the Quartermaster Corps. They have a son, 4, who is now at Cathedral School.

Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

BUDGET YOUR ears . . . Listen to cultural radio programs as well as straight news flashes. This is the advice of Miss Eunice Harriet Avery, guest speaker at the annual meeting yesterday of the Capital division, Woman's National Farm and Garden Association.

"We as civilians must maintain the cultural heritage of ages which we've inherited," she said. The world traveler and lecturer thinks that too many people are neglecting art, literature and music by concentrating entirely on war news.

Mrs. Winston R. Holt

Today every person has a job to carry on. These include four things—keeping a clean Government, doing social service work, continuing education and preserving our culture, according to Miss Avery, who spoke on "Ears and Wings of the World."

After the war Miss Avery predicts that people will fly to Australia, China, Europe and all parts of the globe in a very few hours. Also she expressed the belief that radio and aviation would bring about a great spiritual rebirth of the people.

Preceding the luncheon new officers were elected for the ensuing year. Mrs. Winston R. Holt, who has been acting president for several months, was named officially to that post. Mrs. Frances B. Lincoln was elected recording secretary and Mrs. Evelyn D. Cameron, treasurer. Assistant treasurer is Mrs. E. J. O'Brien.

Directors and vice presidents are elected from the Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, and D. C. clubs, which comprise the Capital division of the organization.

Sunday Club Meetings Now Popular

EIGHT MONTHS ago a club meeting or party on Sunday was the exception rather than the rule. Of course the Women's City Club and the A. A. U. W. long have held teas on that day. But for the most part, club events took place during the week. Now, wartime schedules are reversing the order.

Because of the longer working hours and the increase of jobholders, outside activities fill up the Sunday calendars. Tomorrow's club activities are just a sample of the transition. The local ALUMNI OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO holds an afternoon meeting 4 to 6 o'clock at the A. A. U. W. clubhouse. After a reception and tea, Dean Gordon Jennings Laing discusses "The University of Chicago All Out for War." Newcomers can contact Miss Kate Mayer (Ordway 2407) for reservations or information.

Over at the Dorchester House—2480 Sixteenth Street Northwest, THE VENTURE CLUB is playing hostess to the South Atlantic Regional Conference of Venturita. Sixty representatives of the six clubs included in the South Atlantic region are expected to attend. Chief purposes of the conference are to elect regional officers, business matters and to make plans for the national convention to be held in June at Cleveland, Ohio.

Dr. Chih Meng, Chinese author, statesman, who was a political prisoner and a leader in the Student Patriotic Movement in 1919 will be guest speaker at the COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY ALUMNAE CLUBS supper meeting, 6:30 o'clock at the A. A. U. W. clubhouse. When the Chinese students in Peking started a nation-wide campaign against the award of Chinese rights and territories in Shantung Province to Japan at the Versailles Conference, Dr. Meng spoke out against the deal.

One hundred and fifty ALUMNI OF WOOSTER COLLEGE will first hike and then feast on a picnic tomorrow afternoon at the club's annual spring get-together. The Wilson Compton farm on the Potomac River at Seneca, Va., will be the scene of the event. Dr. Arthur Compton, chairman of the board of trustees of the college, and Mrs. Compton will be the host and hostess.

To mention a few more events on schedule for tomorrow—Miss Bertha Nienburg, assistant director of the women's bureau of the Department of Labor, entertains members of the local ALTRUSA CLUB with tea at her home, 6808 Meadow Lane, Chevy Chase, Md.

From now on, the ALL STATES CLUB will hold Sunday afternoon tea dances 4:40 to 7:30 p. m. at the Washington Hotel. The one tomorrow begins the series. These tea dances will be in addition to the usual Friday and Saturday night functions. Music is furnished by Washie Bratchie and his 16-piece orchestra. This gives the six-day defense workers a chance to play.

Mrs. Evans to Speak

MRS. MAY THOMPSON EVANS, chief of the consumer relations section, Consumer Division of the Office of Price Administration, will be guest speaker at the dinner meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club at 7 o'clock Monday evening at the Washington Club. The program is under the direction of Miss Nina Kinsella, chairman of the club's public affairs committee, with Judge Fay L. Bentley and Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward as cochairmen for the occasion.

Davido Cortez, concert violinist and former member of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, now in the Capital with the Federal Housing Administration, will provide the music, his accompanist for the evening being Miss Louise Michael. Mr. Cortez is a graduate of the Peabody Institute in Baltimore, and in addition to his work on the concert stage and with the Baltimore Symphony, he was formerly band director for the Oklahoma A. and M. College, and also was a featured artist several seasons on the Mauretania. His concert tours included both Cuba and Canada, as well as many cities in the United States.

Training Courses Set

THE LOCAL Girl Scout staff will give a series of training courses for outdoor living this spring to leaders and adults, who are working with Girl Scouts. Overnight courses begin at Rockwood today and tomorrow. Miss Barbara Phinney, field adviser, will be in charge of the first training class which will include instruction in health and safety precautions for overnight camping, types of campsites, shelters, bedrolls, menu planning, use of implements and tools, first aid and types of programs for the outdoors.

Stanley Kobe And Bride Back

After a short wedding trip to New York, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Paul Kobe have returned to the Capital and are making their home in Arlington. Before her marriage, Mrs. Kobe was Miss Esther Virginia Dorman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo D. Dorman of Arlington. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Kobe of West Newton, Pa.

Their marriage took place at 8:30 on Saturday, April 11, at the Cherrydale Methodist Church with the Rev. Herbert E. Hudgins officiating at the double ring ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white satin and lace with circular train and a finger-tip veil of illusion arranged from a coronet of orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of gardenias.

Mrs. Richard Dorman, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Anne Kobe, Miss Blanche Downs, Miss Dorothy Ann Bladen, Mrs. Raymond Thacker and Mrs. Milton Jaycox. They were attired in frocks of pastel taffeta and shoulder-length veils of matching shades. Their bouquets were of roses and spring flowers.

Adolph Kobe was his brother's best man and ushers were Richard Dorman, Harry Dorman, Raymond Thacker, Milton Jaycox and Raymond Wells.

A wedding reception followed at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Acherman of Green Acres, Md.

Mr. Kobe is a graduate of West Newton High School and Keystone Radio Institute in Pittsburgh. He is now chief radio operator for the Pennsylvania Central Airlines at Washington National Airport.

J. D. Howes And Bride Return Home

Returning from Florida this week are Mr. and Mrs. J. Dorsey Howes whose marriage took place recently at Gaithersburg, Md., where they will make their home.

The bride is the former Miss Jane Williamson Bell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Garrison W. Bell of Gaithersburg. The Rev. William J. Elliott performed the ceremony in the Grace Methodist Church.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was attired in a rose colored crepe street frock with beige hat trimmed with rose colored ribbon and veil and beige accessories. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Claire V. Williamson of Washington, who wore a costume of pastel blue with beige accessories. Each carried an old-fashioned bouquet.

Albert W. Clagett jr., brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was best man and ushers were Merle King, Park L. King, Martin W. Porrey and James S. King jr.

The wedding reception was held at the home of the bride's parents.

Hospitalization Row Breaks Out Into Open

A split between Group Hospitalization, Inc., and Doctors Hospital came into the open yesterday with the disclosure that the latter has given notice of withdrawal as a seller of hospital service to G. H. members.

Joseph H. Himes, president of the non-profit organization and a former Congressman from Ohio, indicated that court action may be instituted to prevent Doctors Hospital from rejecting any Group Hospitalization patients applying for admittance between now and March 31, 1943, when the service contract is scheduled to be terminated.

Founded in 1933, Group Hospitalization has contracts with all of the hospitals for care of its subscribers and dependents, who number in excess of 140,000.

In a printed statement circulated among these subscribers yesterday, Himes explained that the board of trustees does not challenge the hospital's right to terminate its contract on the stipulated year's notice.

May Go to Courts

However, the notice, according to Hines, contains the following phrase: "The hospital will refuse to accept for admission Group Hospitalization subscribers whose contracts are written with you or whose contracts are renewed subsequent to March 31, 1942."

"We content," said the organization's president, "that all of our subscribers—current, renewed or new—are entitled to full service under the contract at Doctors Hospital up to March 31, 1943. In behalf of our subscribers, we shall take such action as may be appropriate or necessary to require the hospital to comply to the fullest extent with its contract for service to our subscribers, even though this may require an appeal to the courts."

Officials of Doctors Hospital, which was opened in 1940, withheld comment on the controversy but intimated that they will issue a statement today. The president is Dr. Charles Stanley White, prominent surgeon. Dr. Osbar B. Hunter, the secretary, also happens to be a trustee of Group Hospitalization, Inc., which holds a special charter from Congress.

Despite the hospital's avowed refusal to accept G. H. patients who joined up, or whose annual contracts were renewed, since March 31, a spokesman for the hospitalization co-op said "one or two" persons in that category have been admitted as patients so far this month.

"Whether it was an oversight on their part or something else, I don't know," he asserted.

Heralding the break which came yesterday, Dr. White resigned as a trustee of Group Hospitalization, Inc., a couple of months ago.

When the trusteeship terms of Mark Lansburgh, George H. O'Connor and Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., expired this year, the hospitals renamed O'Connor and the District Commissioners reappointed Lansburgh but the District Medical Society chose Dr. Hunter to take the place of Mrs. Evans.

Monday Last Day for Orchestra Fund Donations

Although the National Symphony Orchestra's 10-day drive for $114,000 sustaining fund officially closes tonight, contributions will be accepted until noon on Monday, it was announced yesterday by E. R. Finkenstaedt, campaign chairman.

Contributions may be mailed to the National Symphony's campaign headquarters, 1111 Woodward Building, or may be left at the orchestra's stand in the lobby of the Woodward Building, Fifteenth and H Streets Northwest. For last minute gifts, a table will be set up Monday between 11 and 12 a. m. outside the grand ballroom of the Hotel Mayflower.

The final results of the drive will be announced at 12:30 p. m. Monday at a luncheon for the volunteer workers in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Mayflower. At that time, chairmen of the eight fund soliciting committees active in the campaign will report the amount their groups have collected, and the total will be given by Finkenstaedt.

$9000 Fire in D. C. Warehouse

Fire of undetermined origin broke out in a second-floor warehouse at 1233 Maine Avenue Southwest yesterday afternoon, and destroyed baled cardboard egg cartons and office equipment valued at $9000.

Firemen responding to the first alarm were forced back by the heavy smoke, and a second alarm was turned in. By the time the fire was under control, 12 engine companies, 4 truck companies and the veteran fireboat, Firefighter, were on the scene.

William F. Huhn, president of the Carlin Creamery Co. who leases the warehouse from Isaac Kossow, said that no one had been in the building since Thursday noon, and that the fire had been discovered by a watchman. All the property, he added, was covered by insurance.

Firemen Drag Hose Up 20 Flights of Stairs

Newark, N. J., April 24 (AP).—Firemen had to haul 50-pound hose packs up 20 flights of stairs to extinguish a fire here early today in scaffolding atop a nearly-completed skyscraper.

Acting Fire Chief Charles Burnett said it was necessary to build up 250 pounds pressure to force water skyward through an 8-inch standpipe.

D. C. Dog Tax Fund Embezzler Is Given Probation

Mrs. Hattie F. Small, 70-year-old widow convicted April 2 of embezzling about $400 from District dog tax funds, was given a sentence of two to six years and placed on probation by Justice F. Dickinson Letts at District Court yesterday.

A nominal fine of $1 also was assessed.

The justice pointed out that the offense was a serious one—she was accused in a total of 30 counts of taking the money while a District of Columbia tax office employe—but that he was granting probation in view of the defendant's age and circumstances.

Mrs. Small, who had been permitted to remain free on $500 bond pending sentence, now lives at the Episcopal Church Home.

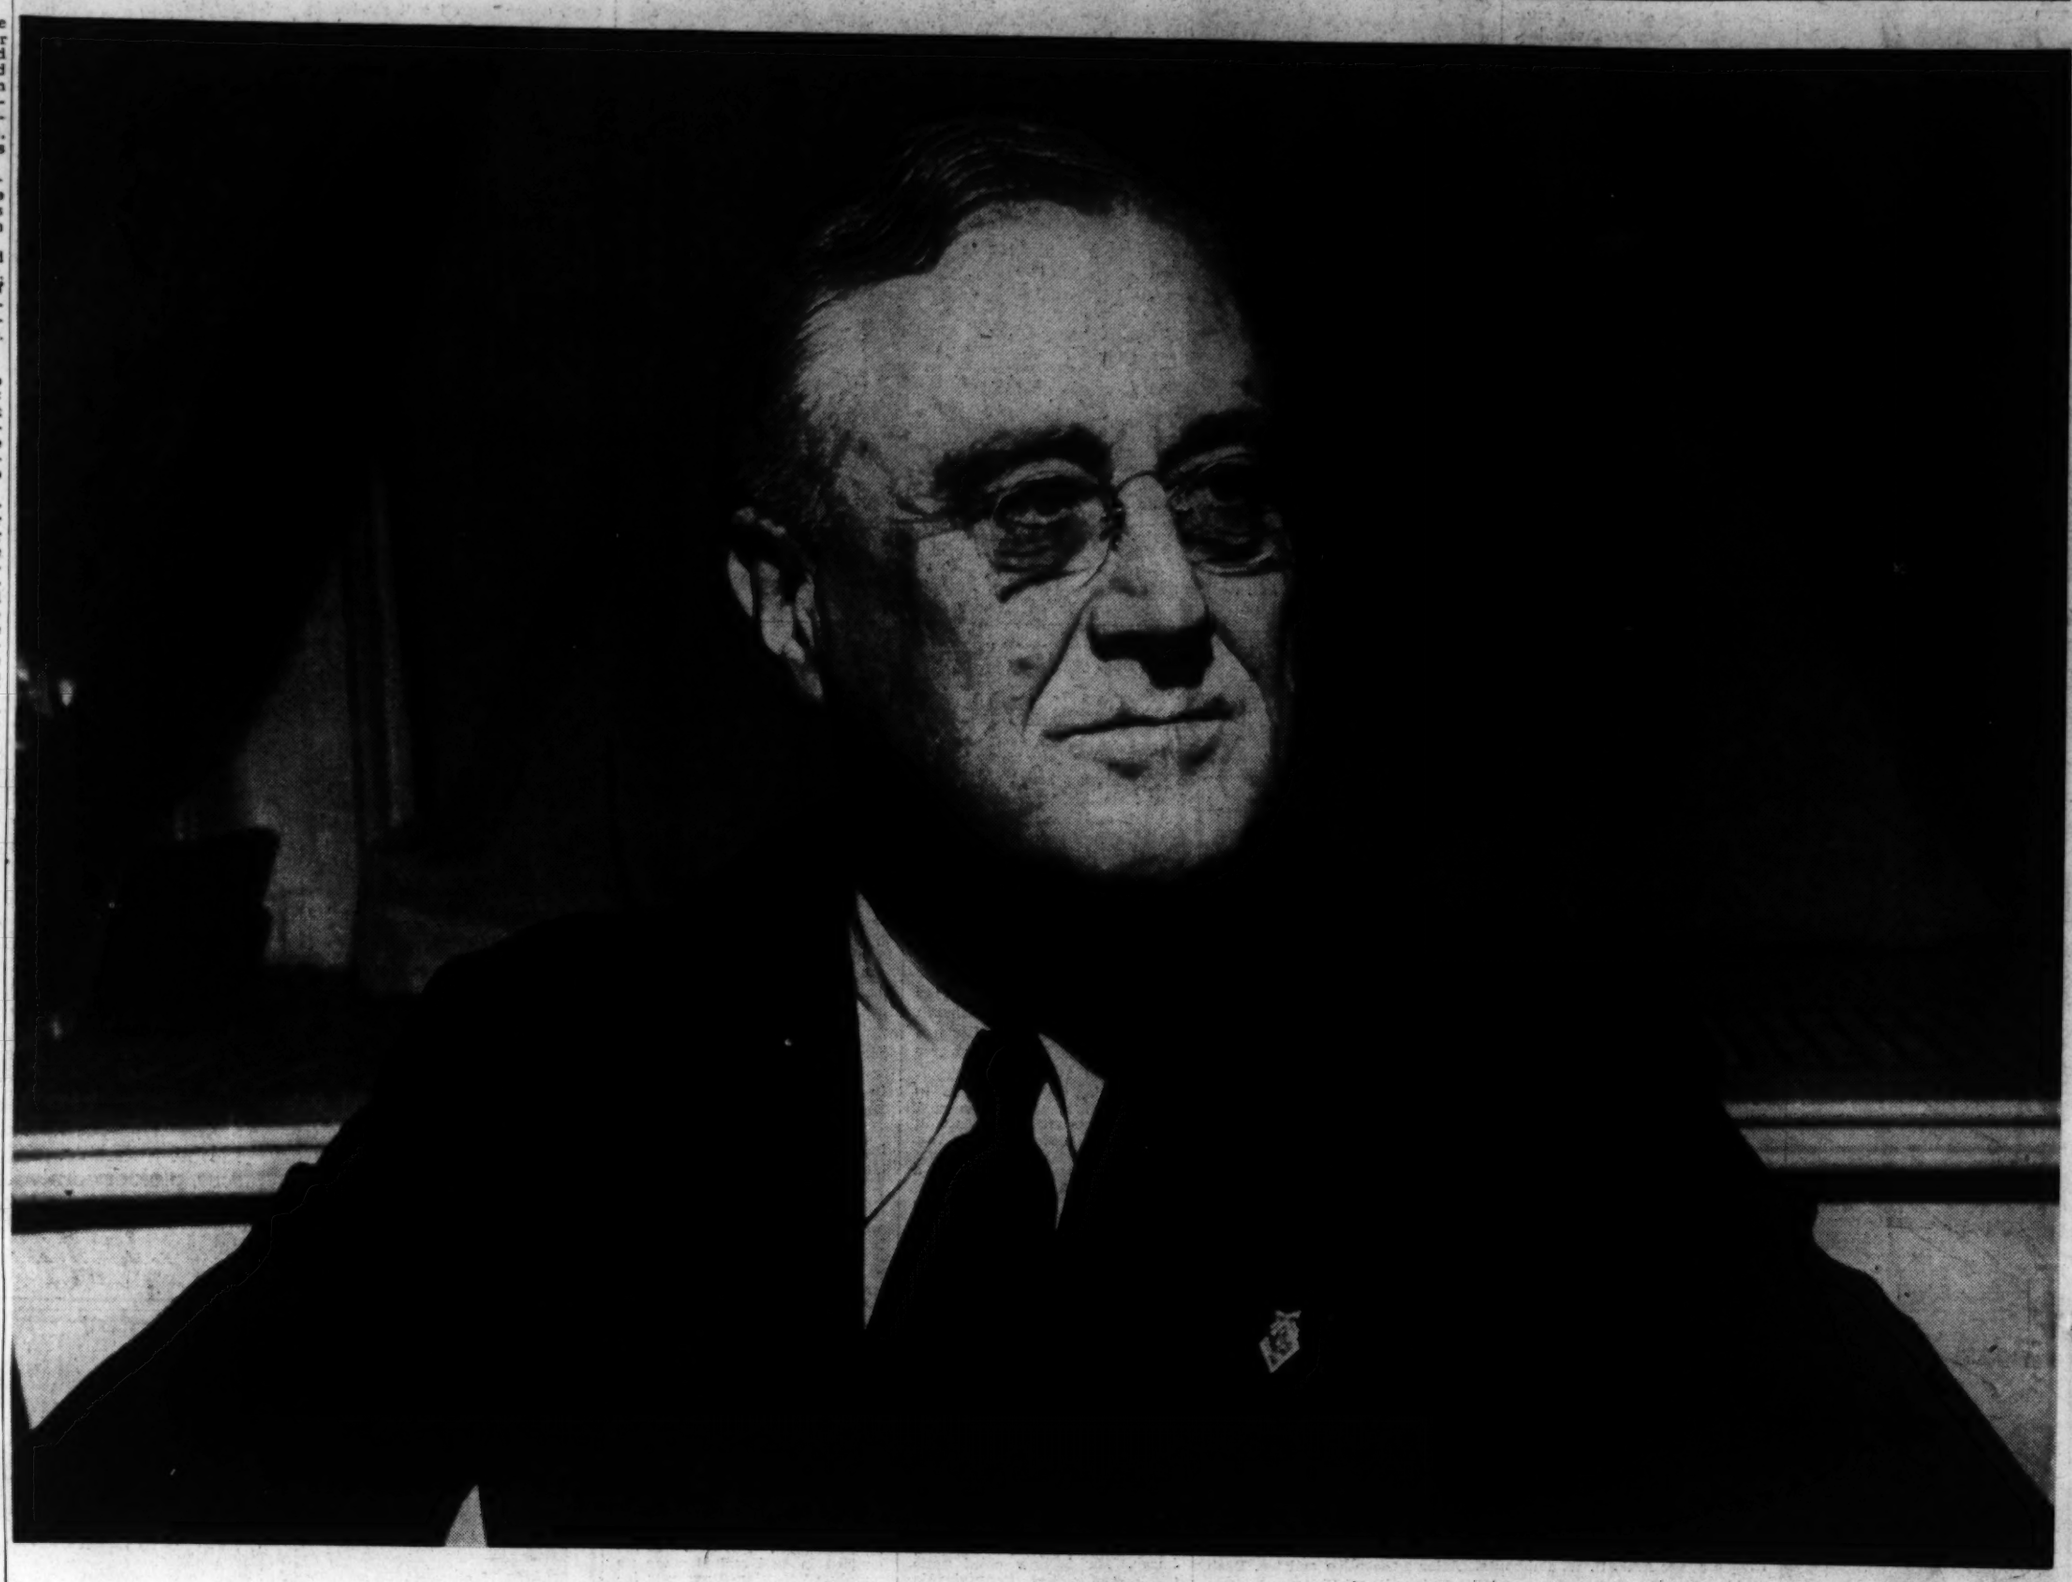
Letts also suspended a sentence of 16 months to 5 years given Frank P. Gairens, 26, who pleaded guilty to a charge that he had absconded with payroll funds entrusted to him as a timekeeper on the Statler Hotel construction job.

The jurist warned that he was making the probation subject to restitution of the stolen funds, however, and that Gairens must make regular weekly or monthly repayments until the money was all returned if he wished to remain on probation.

5 Soldiers Killed By Shell Explosion

Los Angeles, April 24 (AP).—Premature explosion of a shell being fired from a 60-millimeter mortar killed five soldiers and wounded 16 near La Mesa in San Diego County today, the Army reported.

Officers said the shell, containing several pounds of high explosives, exploded before it cleared the muzzle of the gun.



Franklin D. Roosevelt wrote the first paragraph of this ad

. . . when he made his fireside chat on February 23rd

"It is essential that we help China in her magnificent defense and in the inevitable counter-offensive—for that is one important element in the ultimate defeat of Japan."

THE ABOVE STATEMENT is so important that we would like to expand it into eight more paragraphs.

The Chinese army is fighting our battles. If China should be forced to her knees, approximately 2,000,000 Japanese soldiers would be released for attacks on Australia, India, and Hawaii. This might mean that we would lose the Battle of the Pacific . . . lose the best airfields from which to bomb Tokio . . . perhaps lose the war itself.

Of course, through Lend-Lease, our Government is sending war supplies to China's army. But more than Lend-Lease must be done to overcome the almost unbelievable handicaps under which the Chinese army and the Chinese people are fighting today.

The Chinese need medical supplies . . . sulfanilamide . . . gauze . . . anesthetics . . . surgical instruments . . . ambulance units. The Chinese need money to habilitate millions of homeless . . . to feed 2,000,000 orphans . . . to establish more vestpocket factories. They need funds to keep their schools running to train the new leaders so vital to winning the war.

Without these things behind it, the Chinese army cannot be expected to fight forever. Morale can eventually crack . . . the will to win can be lost . . . and fifth columnists can get in their deadly work of appeasement.

The Chinese believe we are their friends. They know we have a wealth of the things that China needs. They feel that we, as their allies, should share some of these things with them for the common good of all who hate oppression.

To give China the things she so desperately needs takes money. Not just Government funds for arms, but money donated by the American people . . . donated with an open-handed generosity that will bolster the morale of every Chinese soldier . . . bring hope to every civilian.

An American dollar is worth 20 Chinese dollars. Even a small contribution from you will buy an incredible amount of the things that China needs. Nowhere else in the world today can your money do so much to relieve human suffering, to encourage the staunch defenders of Democracy, and to help win the war.

Send contributions to Ord Preston, Treasurer, United China Relief, 1218 Connecticut Avenue. Won't you do it today?

WHAT AMERICAN MONEY WILL DO IN CHINA

10c will provide painless operations for 4 wounded soldiers.
15c will provide hospital care for one day for an air-raid victim.
40c will buy a refugee a 3-pound woolen blanket.
80c will feed an orphan for one month.
$1.00 will save 3 people from lockjaw,—or, buy 70 doses of sulfathiazole to combat pneumonia or blood poisoning.
$5.00 per child will set up an orphanage.
$25.00 will endow a hospital bed for one year.
$50.00 will buy 15 pounds of sulfanilamide,—or, start a surgical gauze cooperative.
$100.00 will buy 10,000 special formula vitamin capsules.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Public Debt Bureau Is Decentralized

The largest single decentralization order—2100 employes in Treasury's Bureau of the Public Debt—was announced yesterday by Budget Director Harold D. Smith. The employes will start moving to Chicago's huge Merchandise Mart on June 1 and it will take the entire month of June to make the transfer. In Chicago, Treasury plans eventually to hire 1900 additional employes which will push the staff up to more than 4000. Treasury Undersecretary Daniel Bell, who negotiated the transfer with Smith, told the employes that they will be brought back to Washington "soon after the war."

Divisions to be decentralized are: Division of Savings Bonds, 450 employes; saving bond functions of the Division of Loans and Currency, except the securities section, 1550 employes; 50 employes in the office of the Register concerned with the audit and custody of saving bonds; 25 employes in the audit section of the Division of Public Debt Accounts and Audit, and 75 employes in an audit group from the Office of the Treasurer. Unannounced but to be transferred just the same will be 25 employes in the audit section of the Division of Postal Savings in the Postoffice Department.

The vast majority of the employes to be transferred are low-paid clerical workers. Treasury officials estimate that more than half of the 2100 employes were hired within the past year and more than 1500 since the emergency was declared in June, 1940. The correspondence division has 400 employes who answer questions about war bonds. Most of the employes register the sales of war bonds and release the records on redemption. First employes to be moved will be those working on stub files and machine work. The 2100 employes are now located in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing Annex, the Auditor's Buildings, and the Liberty Loan Annex, all on lower Fourteenth Street Southwest.

Job Aid Promised

Treasury immediately promised to help employes who feel they can't move, to find other jobs here. However, the employes must present the facts to the personnel office and the facts must be commendatory before help will be given. War Transfer Unit, 801 E Street Northwest., also will help the people get other jobs here. Treasury announced that an employe who moves his dependents will be paid $75 to help him get settled. An employe with no dependents or who doesn't move his dependents will be paid only $20. No allowance will be paid persons who transfer to Treasury for the purpose of being transferred to Chicago or who have transferred at an increase in salary.

Travel allowances will be made to needy employes. Employes must move dependents to get the full allowance. Promotional, printing, and shipping functions of the war saving program won't be touched . . . Wayne Coy yesterday was appointed assistant director of the Budget Bureau. He's expected to continue as the President's liaison with the Office of Emergency Management . . . The Senate Appropriations Committee riddled the National Resources Planning Board, a special pet of the President's. Funds for all its war work was knocked out and only $400,000 for regular work was recommended. NRPB stands to be cut by nearly a million dollars under the amount asked by the President.

The committee okayed the Board of Legal Examiners but it cut the Civil Service Commission $907,307. The board was set up by the President to recruit attorneys for the Federal service. It must get its funds from the Civil Service Commission . . . The committee added a rider to the appropriation for United States Housing Administration which would prevent funds being used for information work . . . Wendell Lund of Michigan's State Unemployment Board was reported to have been recommended to the President to head WPB's labor production division by organized labor.

The Federal Government has more than twice as many civilian employes on its payroll now as it had during World War I. On March 1, Civil Service Commission reports, there were 1,805,186 employes. The actual figure now is believed to be closer to two million. Civilian employment jumped 102,087 during February, the War Department adding 76,420. Employment during February reached 233,000 here but that figure is ancient history now and the actual number is more than 250,000.

A Slight Favor

Milwaukee, April 24 (A.P.).—Civil Judge A. J. Hedding married Private Harland Heuter, 21, and Josephine Skusek, 20, here today. Then the soldier-bridegroom, fidgeting, inquired whether the judge would grant a favor and "not charge me." "All right," agreed Hedding, "if you'll do me a favor and go and get Hitler for me." The private promised to do his best.

Where Did They Hide the Car?

Hope, Ark., April 24 (A.P.).—Two men stepped up to the theater box office rolling a spare tire and wheel.

They bought tickets, rolled the tire into the theater and sat down with the wheel between them.

It was a little inconvenient, they admitted, but "it's the only safe thing to do when your spare isn't locked."

Single Ballot Bars Censure Of D. C. Judge

By a 1-vote margin, the District Bar Association last night tabled a resolution indirectly censuring Judge Nathan Cayton of the Municipal Court for his action in publicizing proposed changes in the court's rules before they were adopted and without consulting the association's committee on relations with the Municipal Court.

In a minority report of the committee on relations with the Municipal Court, Arthur Hilland and Carl Bauersfeld asked the association to:

1. Appoint a special committee of seven members to investigate the "source and proof" of a statement in an afternoon Washington newspaper that procedure in the Municipal Court "has frequently amounted to a racket." The statement was made in a story in which were given Judge Cayton's reasons for proposed simplification of rules, later adopted, whereby defendants would not need to retain lawyers in civil cases involving sums of $50 to $1000.

2. Disapprove in principle the court's action in making "drastic and fundamental changes" in established rules of practice without consulting the Bar Association.

3. Direct its committee on legal ethics to investigate the "propriety" of a judge discussing proposed changes in the press before his colleagues had approved of them.

Tabled with the minority resolution, after a lively and lengthy debate, was the majority report which covered only the second point of the minority resolution.

Principal among Cayton's defenders was Sefton Darr, former president of the association, who rose to declare that there is "no judge who has shown more cooperation with Bar Association committees" than Cayton. He warned that it would be "a horrible mistake for this association to indulge in innuendo flinging—if it's not mud flinging."

Preceding the business session, memorial services were held for members who died during the past year. Eulogies were given of James A. Burns, Philip Pitt Campbell, Walter A. Johnston, Clinton R. Colvin, William A. Coombe, Moncure Burke, Walter H. Wills, John Walsh, Stanton C. Peelle, John F. Moore, August H. Moran, Edward S. Brashears, J. Harry Covington and Joseph A. Burkart.

Planners Find Dorm Problem Big Headache

Just what type of architecture to use for dormitories in which to house 15,000 of the District's single war workers is giving the Federal Public Building Authority a lot of room for thought.

Officials yesterday admitted they are going through the same building pains usual to prospective home owners who find it hard to decide whether their money should go into sun porches or extra bathrooms, or whether maybe it wouldn't be better to have the kitchen a little smaller and put the savings into a fishpond.

Numerous sketches have been drawn up, they said, but no amount of pondering has brought a decision. If they go too fancy, they know there will be yells of protest—also there will be protests if they revert to the barnlike structures run up for girls during World War I.

The problem is complicated by the fact planners for the structures almost must include plans for the furnishings. If they overspend on mattresses or built-in furniture they must make up the difference somewhere else. Restaurants and recreation rooms must be provided.

The dormitories will be financed from the 50 million dollars recently authorized for expenditure on war housing in the Washington area. Although some of them are expected to be placed on the Mall, exact locations have not yet been determined.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 24.—Stewart Laidlow, athletic star at Martinsburg High School for the past three years, will serve as mayor of the city Tuesday when students take over municipal aaffairs for the day. Laidlow was elected by the members of the senior class in a ballot conducted in the "democracy" classes of John C. Cobourn.

Victory Sidelights

U. S. Civilian Defense Board Discusses Scope of Program

Scope of the Nation's civilian defense program and plans to integrate it more closely with the work of all Government agencies were discussed yesterday at the first meeting of the Civilian Defense Board.

The board was created recently by executive order, with James M. Landis, director of the Office of Civilian Defense, as chairman. Its initial meeting, which was executive, was held in the OCD conference rooms.

Members present were Secretary of Navy Frank Knox, Attorney General Francis Biddle, Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, Red Cross Chairman Norman Davis, Gen. L. D. Gasser, Lieut. Comdr. Harold E. Stassen, former Governor of Minnesota, and Mayor Maurice J. Tobin, of Boston.

D. C. to Test Raid Sirens Each Noon

Wartime Washington, with nigh onto a million population and appropriately termed "the World's Capital," is just about to take on at least one aspect of the small town—the noon-day whistle.

Each day at noon sharp, beginning Monday, the citizenry will be serenaded by whistle blasts, but the idea behind the noises will be not to remind the populace to knock off and go home to lunch but to make certain the District's 38 electric air-raid warning signals are in "operable condition."

Daily siren workouts were ordered yesterday by Commissioner John Russell Young, and will be continued until further notice. Young said the results will be checked by observers who will report the horns' audibility to the civilian defense control center.

Training Course Set For House Inspectors

Women volunteers interested in helping as housing inspectors for the Defense Housing Registry can receive training through the American Women's Voluntary Service, 2170 Florida Avenue, it was announced yesterday. The registry needs more trained inspectors to help with the task of maintaining adequate housing standards for war workers.

Maimed Defense Aides Pose Problem

What can be done to provide adequate financial protection for civilian defense workers killed or maimed in the performance of their duties, is being studied by a Washington Board of Trade committee which is expected to recommend additional legislation on the subject.

Neither the Senator Pepper bill, which would give insurance benefits to the workers, nor recent amendments proposed to the District's blackout law are deemed sufficiently comprehensive, Executive Secretary W. H. Press said yesterday.

"The committee is still studying the problem, of course, but that seems to be the attitude at present. We have had several calls on the subject and consider it very important," he said.

A study of legislation passed by other States and municipalities shows that "nothing much has been done anywhere yet," Press declared. Recommendations of the committee probably will be worked out at a meeting Monday.

Indian Misses Serve in Canteen

Two new canteen workers add a picturesque touch to the blue-garbed staff serving daily lunch at the American Women's Voluntary Service's "stable bar terrace," 2170 Florida Avenue. They are the two daughters of the Indian Agent General and Lady Bajpai, the Misses Crishna and Bagwati Bajpai. One works behind the coffee urn and the other serves tarts and cakes, and both wear their native dress.

390 Service Men Will Go Bedless Here This Weekend

By Christine Sadler

Post Staff Writer

About 390 soldiers, sailors and marines will be without beds in Washington tonight, according to last week's figures minus 110 new cots made available yesterday by the Central Union Mission, 613 C Street Northwest.

A week from tonight, if all goes well, the number of bedless boys will be cut to 140. Two hundred and fifty extra beds will be available at that time in the leave area just across the Potomac.

Before the summer is over part of the large concourse of Union Station may be partitioned off and the men permitted to sleep there. This possibility was discussed yesterday at a meeting of the subcommittee of the Welfare and Recreational Association, which is tackling the problem.

Use of Fourth Floor Out

Use of the fourth floor of Union Station for the same purpose is out, however, because the cost of making it safe for dormitory use would run into big money—possibly $12,000—and then the ventilation problem would be unsolved.

Tentative plans to renovate the station's third floor will continue, Chairman W. A. Corley said. It has a ventilation system, but no windows and can be turned into sleeping quarters at much less cost, Federal Security Administration officials believe.

FSA has asked the subcommittee to consider using the third floor on a 24-hour basis, to give the soldiers more space in which to wait over between trains.

Other Proposals Studied

Winfree Johnson of the Welfare and Recreational Association, said the cost of fixing over several small rental spaces available in downtown buildings and gymnasium is being studied. Also the subcommittee is studying use of the CCC camp in Dupont Park during the summer months, and will look into the possibility of erecting Regular Army barracks for the men.

The Central Union Mission beds are in the new John Bennett Memorial annex. Mrs. Bennett said another room could be turned over to the soldiers later when additional mattresses are purchased. A night's lodging will cost 25 cents and the service men will be routed there from Service Club No. 1 at Ninth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue.

Corley said between 10,000 and 15,000 service men were in Washington each weekend, but that only a tenth of them apply for beds. The others stay with friends, have money for a hotel room, or return to camp, he said.

Emergency Hospital Makes Defense Offer

Willingness to maintain and service 100 additional beds as a part of the civilian defense program here was reported yesterday at the annual meeting of the board of directors of Emergency Hospital.

Reports also disclosed that the hospital provided care for indigent patients to the extent of $90,000 during 1941.

Officers elected were Stanley D. Willis, president; Samuel H. Kauffmann, first vice president; George A. Garrett, second vice president; Dr. A. B. Moore, secretary; Thomas H. Reynolds, treasurer, and Brent B. Sandridge, superintendent.

The board includes:

Flather, Jr., George E. Fleming, Mrs. Sherman Flint, Dr. H. A. Fowler, Mrs. James Carroll Frazer, George A. Garrett, C. C. Glover, Dr. James N. Greear, Jr., Mrs. John Gross, J. Randolph Visions Raid On D.C. Soon

Federation Hears Him Predict Bombing of City Within 60 Days

Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, last night told the Federation of Citizens Associations that he believed there would be an attempted bombing of Washington within the next two months.

He warned that "we shall be called upon for greater sacrifices, and while I am making no prophecy, I believe that within 60 days, Washington will suffer a bombing by enemy planes in an attempt to strike at the heart of America."

Speaking at the thirty-second anniversary dinner at the Lee-Sheraton, Mr. Randolph said that the District was in good condition today, and that ultimately "the right and responsibility of franchise will be granted to his jurisdiction."

Harry N. Stull, federation president, reported on activities during the last year, and praised the cooperation of the citizens' associations with the civilian defense activities of the District. He promised that the federation would continue to do its part in protecting the people of Washington.

Guests at the head table also included Col. Lemuel Bolles, director of civilian defense; James A. Crooks, general chairman of arrangements; Commissioners Charles W. Kutz and Guy Mason, William J. Mileham, president of the Federation of Businessmen's Associations; Clement Murphy, chief air-raid warden; Former President James G. Yaden and Harry S. Wender, federation vice president.

Music by an orchestra trio, songs by Wender and an exhibition of magic completed the program.

Lanham Funds For Child Care Centers Asked

Efforts to let Lanham Act funds with which to establish and operate day child centers in Washington are being made by the Child Welfare and Protection Committee of the District Defense Council, Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, the chairman, said last night at a meeting of the Emergency Committee for Day Care of Young Children at the Interior Department Auditorium.

Two units to accommodate 30 children each are contemplated in the midtown area, she said, and a third at Howard University. In addition, four junior high schools will be staffed to care for children from the time school is out at 3:30 to 6:30 p. m. daily and all day on Saturday. A total of 160 children can be cared for at the schools, with one trained worker for each group of 40 and several volunteers.

To care for children under 2 years of age, she said, the committee is training housekeeping aides in child welfare technique.

"We have been spending much time trying to establish budget justification—one of the chief ways of spending time in Washington. We have had no promise from the Commissioners that any of the 20 million dollars in Lanham Act funds soon to come to the District will go to day care, but we are still pushing the idea," she declared.

Other speakers were Dr. Grace Langdon, who reported on child problems in defense areas throughout the country; Mrs. Henry Chandler, who presented statistics to show the need for child care centers for working mothers in the District; Alice Coe Mendham, committee chairman, who reported on present facilities for taking care of the needs, and A. Canwitt, who discussed the "acute labor shortage" in Washington.

Hobby Show Is Mostly Planes, Autos, Motor Boats and Trains

WORKING MODEL—Mrs. John D. Lincoln holds one of the model planes that really fly that are on exhibit in the hobby show now at the Riverside Stadium

Planes zoomed, race cars careened around tracks, motorboats roared through the water and train whistles announced arrivals last night as the Washington National Hobby Show opened at the Riverside Stadium.

Scheduled to remain open until May 3, the show presents exhibits by many local model building hobby groups, as well as models of airplanes and boats designed by high school students all over the country in keeping with the Army and Navy's plan to instruct school students and defense workers in the mechanics of defense materials.

Providing the focus of attention in the model plane exhibits is the $20,000 array of model powered planes built by the Army. These planes were recently exhibited in Dayton, Ohio.

Motor-powered model planes built by the Capitol Aironeers Society also are shown. These planes, some measuring 25 inches wing span, can stay aloft on their own power for several minutes.

Demonstrating the interest of school students, a comprehensive exhibit is presented of model planes in balsa wood designed by pupils of the Montgomery County schools. Included are dive bombers, pursuit planes, transports and observation craft.

Streamlined motorboat racers whipped about in a 75-foot tank of water to attest the ingenuity of the designers of the Washington Model Power Boat Club.

The Pennsylvania and Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Companies' exhibit of miniature trains running on a circuit of elevated track also demanded a large part of spectator interest. A static exhibit of train models was operated by the Metropolitan Society of Model Engineers.

Archbishop Curley Deplores Wane of Moral Principles

Declaring that "the Dark Ages were enlightened ages compared to our present time," the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, last night called for a return to moral principles in individual and national life.

Many people in the country today "are following moral principles which suit themselves," he said at the annual meeting of the Washington Catholic Charities at the Willard Hotel.

Speaking earlier in the program, the Very Rev. Msgr. Lawrence J. Shehan, director of Washington Cathodic Charities, said, in part:

"One of the things that most clearly differentiates us from our non-Catholic neighbors at the present time is the fact that we as Catholics hold fast to the belief in the existence of certain fixed and unchanging principles while the whole trend of the modern world outside of the Church has been steadily toward the complete rejection of such principles."

Msgr. Shehan, in presenting the report of the family division of Catholic Charities, revealed that it gave either service or relief to 1312 families or individuals in 1941, with expenditure of $33,473.89.

Reports of cooperating agencies of Catholic Charities were given by Harry J. Kirk, vice president of the St. Vincent de Paul Society; Mrs. Frank Schwoerer, president of the Ladies of Charity; Mrs. George O'Connor, president of the City-wide Milk Fund of Ladies of Charity; Mrs. Francis X. Callahan, vice president of the Christ Child Society, and Miss Mary Mattingly, president of the social service committee, Washington Sodality Union.

Dr. Henry J. Crosson presided at the meeting, when the following officers were elected:

Msgr. Shehan, director; Dr. Crosson, president; George H. O'Connor, first vice president; John Saul, second vice president; James E. Colliflower, third vice president; Caeser Aiello, secretary, and Adam Weschler, secretary.

Board members named were:

Dr. Ernest Aschenbach, Frederick E. Altemus, Henry J. Auth, George I. Borger, Vincent C. Burke, Daniel J. Callahan, Jr., Francis X. Callahan, Michael P. Calnan, the Rev. J. K. Cartwright, D. D.; James A. Cassidy, Eugene A. Clark, George J. Cleary, William J. Cosger, Leo A. Codd, the Right Rev. E. J. Connelly, J. Hadley Doyle, Dr. George R. Ellis, James V. Housing Bill May Pass Next Week

50-Million-Dollar Appropriation Will Go Before Full House on Monday

The House will receive Monday the 50-million-dollar housing appropriation bill for Federal war workers in the District area, with passage expected by the middle of the week, Chairman Cannon of the House Appropriations Committee said last night.

The District and adjoining areas in Virginia and Maryland will share approximately equally in the amount appropriated, which calls for 30 million dollars for single unit and dormitory housing and 20 millions for public works serving the new developments, Cannon said.

His statement followed acceptance of the measure by the House Appropriations Deficiency Subcommittee yesterday. Officials of the Federal Works Agency and the National Housing Administration testified at the executive hearing.

Mall May Be Site

Both permanent and temporary housing is proposed, Cannon said, with dormitories to be built "on Government land within walking distance of the downtown Federal building area."

Whether dormitories will be built on the Mall as first suggested by President Roosevelt has not yet been determined, the chairman told reporters. His statement about the probable location of the dormitories indicated, however, that the Mall will be the site. No other locations capable of holding such buildings exist in the downtown area.

The war housing program, long considered on Capitol Hill, was authorized early this month after lengthy deliberations in both the House and Senate.

Vast as is the building program proposed, it still must be supplemented by private construction, Cannon emphasized. Witnesses pointed out at yesterday's hearing that private builders must immediately raise at least 6000 single units to house the unending tide of workers still coming to the Capital.

Twice as Many Workers

Representatives of Federal agencies told the subcommittee that already there are twice as many Government workers here as there were at the peak time of the first World War. Payrolls for the administrative branch, exclusive of the legislative and judiciary, totaled 40 million dollars for February, they said.

The committee is fully aware of the urgency of the need, Cannon said, and forecast little opposition to the appropriation which already has been authorized.

Following action by the House, the bill will move to the Senate for further consideration by the Senate Appropriations Committee

'Kings Row,' at the Earle, A Stark Study in Drabs

Splendid Production and Superb Cast Cannot Gloss Over Morbidity of a Tragic Story; Stage Revue Provides Much Needed Contrast

"KINGS ROW." Warner Brothers picturization of the novel by Henry Bellaman, adapted to the screen by Casey Robinson, costarring Ann Sheridan, Robert Cummings, Betty Field and Donald Reagan, with Charles Coburn, Claude Rains, Judith Anderson, Nancy Coleman, Maria Ouspenskaya, Harry Davenport, Kaaren Verne, Ernest Cossart, Pat Moriarity, Ilka Gruning, Thomas W. Ross, Scotty Beckett, Douglas Wheat, Mary Thomas, Ann Todd and Joan Duval. Directed by Sam Wood. At the Earle Theater.

SUPERBLY PRODUCED and photographed, sensitively and forcefully directed by Sam Wood and eloquently interpreted by a cast of extraordinary capability and distinction, the Warner Brothers film version of Henry Bellaman's gruesomely emotional novel of "Kings Row," now on view at the Earle Theater, nevertheless, is a lugubrious and depressing exhibit, primarily dedicated to all that is morbid and repellant in human character and existence.

The audience reactions it engenders are grim and terrifying, only occasionally relieved by Adapter Casey Robinson's skill in alleviating the stark psychological and physical horrors that characterized the Bellaman study in youthful anguish and frustration suffered at the hands of their sadistic elders. Insanity, death, jealousy, unsanctioned love, suicide and murder are the chief vehicles of Mr. Bellaman's excursion into bleak mysteries of human behavior that would seem to have a more natural place in a psychiatric or surgical clinic than in any center of assembly for those in quest of "entertainment."

It would be as remote from the truth to say that "Kings Row" does not, now and again, inspire pity, sympathy and compassion as to pretend that even the faintest ray of comedy has any place in it. The groundwork of the tragedy of later years is laid in the childhood of the principal characters involved and early establishes the forbidding nature of the tribulations that are to pursue them throughout their lives. Only at the very end does a shaft of hope strike through the somber shadows of despair that enshroud the entire work.

If a fine integrity in visualizing a repellant subject is a virtue, "Kings Row" has much to commend it. Director Sam Wood has adorned the tale with minutely complete and impressive mountings and manipulated both characters and events with intelligence and discretion. It is in the caliber of the cast, however, that the film finds its richest asset. Robert Cummings, Betty Field and Ronald Reagan bring insight and resourcefulness to the roles of Parris Mitchell, the gifted youth who abandons music for medicine; Cassandra Tower, the victim of an aberrated doctor-father, and Drake McHugh, the story's chief symbol of fortitude, and Ann Sheridan lends a saving grace to the major movement of the tragic drama by the surety of her work in its most heartening role. Claude Rains, as the unnatural Dr. Tower, and Charles Coburn, as the surgical sadist, self-appointed instrument of retribution among the wayward, epitomize all that is sinister. Judith Anderson, Harry Davenport and Mme. Maria Ouspenskaya lend their brilliant talents to the lesser roles, with Nancy Coleman heartbreakingly competent as another of the victims of parental persecution.

The Stage Offers Surcease

In striking contrast to the screen, the Earle stage this week presents a brief interval of color, gayety and music. Afer a clever introductory by the Roxyettes, George Prentice presents his lusty "Punch and Judy" show, which never fails to supply its full quota of laughs. The Arthur Murray Dancers interpolate a period of graceful pirouetting, again with the Roxyettes much in evidence, and Jerry Cooper, popular baritone, scores his customary hit in a nice selection of songs, including "Begin the Beguine," "Who," "I Don't Want to Walk Without You" and others at the front of the hit parade. The Roxyettes' piece de resistance is their "Chimes" routine, executed musically enough with both hands and feet.

The new issue of the newsreel, with Gen. Douglas MacArthur still arriving in Australia, and the usual house features complete the more enlivening third of the bill. "Kings Row" is a full two hours long.

Two Whose Love Was Bitter

BETTY FIELD AND ROBERT CUMMINGS in two of the stellar roles in the Warner Brothers film version of "Kings Row," from the novel by Henry Bellaman, now on the screen at the Earle Theater. Ann Sheridan and Ronald Reagan are the other stars, supported by a cast of distinction in an acutely depressing drama of youthful frustration and mental torture

—LOUELLA O. PARSONS—

Big Shoes to Fill!

Hollywood, April 24 (INS).—The toughest test any young actor ever had handed him is the one Jimmy Rogers made at Warner Brothers for the role of his dad, Will Rogers. The rope-throwing, gum-chewing comedian didn't come into fame until he was much older than Jimmie, but the family resemblance is strong. In fact, someone whispered off the record that the test is so good there is no doubt that Jimmie will be signed very soon.

JACK BENNY

Of course, there is the little matter of borrowing young Rogers from Hal Roach, to whom he is under contract. But that can probably be arranged without difficulty. Mrs. Rogers, who sold the life story of the American cowboy philosopher, has the final say on the actor selected.

When is Jack Benny going to get the vacation he told me he needs so badly? He is booked for a movie at Universal after he finishes "George Washington Slept Here," and he won't be off the radio until summer. Jack has been talking business to Bruce Manning on "Wonder Boy," a comedy written for him by Paul Jarrico and Richard Collins. He likes the idea so well he probably will sign a contract within a few days.

Eddie Sutherland won't have even a breathing spell after he finishes "Army Surgeon," at R. K. O. He's been signed to do another service movie, "The Navy Comes Through," with practically the same cast — Randolph Scott, Pat O'Brien, Jackie Cooper and possibly Jane Wyatt, an R. K. O. starlet.

While the contest rages over whether Lana Turner, Rita Hayworth, Peggy Diggins or any one of a half dozen other glamour girls is the "Sweetheart of the Army," Joan Davis crops up as the "moral girl," by popular vote of the quartermaster motor base at Stockton. The boys voted for Joan Because she makes them laugh. It is a good thing they haven't seen or heard Joan's daughter, Beverly Wills of Beverly Hills (as she calls herself), because she would have stolen ma's thunder. The juvenile's latest contribution to the gaiety of nations was at the circus when the pint-sized ponies pranced on. "Look!" she yelled, "rationed horses!"

A line or two: Twenty-five Texas men of money have wired Dottie Lamour they're all set to buy $100,000 worth of bonds from her when she hits the Lone Star State on her tour. That's what I call diggin' deep in the jeans of Texas . . . Here's the most amusing story of the week for my money: Jack Holt took himself down to the Navy and said he wanted to enlist. "How old are you?" asked the recruiting officer. "Forty-five," replied Jack. "You're lying like H—," retorted the officer. "I'm 43 —and I remember seeing you in pictures when I was a baby!"

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: whisper is the stork has made another date with Maureen O'Sullivan and John Farrow; Judy Garland is ill again and off the set of "Me and My Gal;" Robert Montgomery's superbuilt British automobile—the pride of his life—is for sale. Bob is taking an advanced course in naval instruction.

Capt. James Roosevelt and his bride, the former Romele Schneider, dining at the Little Club, formerly called the Little Troc; Brenda Joyce is again a blonde—at the request of Owen Ward, her severest critic.

—HEDDA HOPPER—

The Field of Effort!

Hollywood, Calif., April 24. Although Betty Field is expecting the stork, she's not quitting work, not any time soon, at least. She's got weeks of work still in "Triumph Over Pain." And her husband, Playwright Elmer Rice, is coming out to join her soon. The big news is that while Betty is finishing her present picture, Rice will either adapt one of his plays as a screen vehicle for her, or write her a complete original. Anyway, that husband-wife combination is definitely headed for the screen. The picture will doubtless be produced at Paramount, where the little girl with the big talent is under contract.

BETTY FIELD

Ilka Chase is writing a new play. It'll deal with men and women in defense work and the problems that arise between the two sexes when they're both on the same job. Ilka is using all her spare time from "Now, Voyager" to study defense industries and workers hereabouts for material. And when play is produced, you guessed it—she gets the lead.

For a scene in "Cairo," Jeanette MacDonald goes to town on a hot jive number called "Robert E. Lee," which she does in a deep throaty voice, imitating Ethel Waters' style and shuffle so well that Director Van Dyke and Ethel Waters ganged up afterwards and sent her a telegram signed "Duke Ellington."

Live Bait?

BETH DRAKE angling for something or other, between "takes" on the Warner Brothers' "In This Our Life," in which she will next be seen

Ralph Bellamy is still limping badly from a spill he took on night of blackout. On air-raid warden duty, he blacked himself out when he stumbled over a curb, lost his flashlight and skinned both knees. Now, X-rays discover he broke a small bone in his foot, so as soon as he finishes "The Great Impersonation" he'll have to wear a cast for six weeks.

Day they opened the season with their game against Washington, Gary Cooper sent a wire to Bill Dickey, Yankees' catcher who'd worked with him on the Lou Gehrig picture: "Sorry I can't be there. You boys will just have to do the best you can! Coop." . . .

There's one sequence in Damon Runyon's forthcoming production, "The Big Street," that Lucille Ball can "give her all" to—the part where she's living from hand to mouth in a cheap New York lodging house. "I went through so much of that when I was trying for a break on the stage, I could play it with my eyes shut," she says.

"In those days a chorus had to rehearse five weeks without pay, and along about the end of the third week, my savings would be gone. I've experimented with several stages of starvation, and none of them made any hit with me!"

Lupe Velez, who's the hottest fight fan in our town, has been ordered by her doctor to take a month's complete rest before starting "Mexican Spitfire and the Elephant" (and that doesn't mean Laird Cregar). Rest is a little out of Lupe's line, but she's agreed to follow orders with one exception which the M. D. has okayed—she gets to see one fight a week.

Marta Eggerth, who's worked hard on her language study, still has trouble with our slang. Other day after a scene with Judy Garland, Gene Kelly and George Murphy, for "Me and My Gal," Director Buz Berkeley, meaning to toss her a compliment, said, "'Miss Eggerth, that was a snakeroo!" "Oh, I'm so sorry," said Marta. "Let's try again. Perhaps I can do better this time."

—LEONARD LYONS—

New York, April 24.

CAMPAIGN: Michael Bernheim, who was an orderly assigned to an Admiral in the French Navy, arrived in America a few days ago. He had been interned, with three French admirals and 120 French generals, in a special prison camp near Dresden. Bernheim was released when the three Navy officials were sent back to France to take their posts on Vichy's warships . . . Last June the prisoners saw trainloads of Nazi troops and equipment rushing to the east. The captured generals observed this unusual activity—day and night, trainloads heading east. The prisoners hadn't learned of the Nazi invasion of Russia. Bernheim saw the 120 generals of France hold a conference and make deductions. They all agreed—that the Nazis were invading Turkey.

RUTH GORDON

CHATTER: Ruth Gordon will become a theatrical manager. She will produce "Mutiny in the Nursery," a new play by Judith Guthrie, whose husband is the director of the Old Vic in London. Miss Gordon also will appear in the leading role . . . Alfred Hitchcock, whose newest film is "Saboteur," has signed a contract for a new picture. Under its provision, Hitchcock becomes the highest priced director in the world . . . Dean Ivan Lamb, the soldier-of-fortune, has been commissioned as a major. He'll be our Asst. Military Attache in Rio . . . Arch Obeler will adapt his prize-winning radio show, "Our Precious Freedom," into a feature length movie, for General Motors. It will be shown, free, throughout America.

ENTERPRISE: Jim Farley met Kay Kyser and asked him where he was born. "Rocky Mount, N. C.," said the bandleader . . . "Rocky Mount? I played there once," said Farley . . . "I didn't know you were an actor," said Kyser. "What was your routine?" . . . Farley explained: "Opening postoffices."

PIETY: Fred Allen, who transferred his program to a Sunday evening spot, has encountered new difficulties. The advertising and broadcast officials started to delete a number of excellent gags. "You can't tell such stories on Sunday," they cautioned him . . . The following week some more gags were deleted. "Those aren't for Sunday broadcasts," was the explanation. Allen turned to his friend, Alton Cook, and said: "See if they've shortened my microphone" . . . "Why?" asked Cook . . . "I'll need a short mike," said Allen, "if they expect me to broadcast kneeling."

PRISON: Robert Irwin, the mad sculptor who committed the Easter Sunday Gedeon murders, is serving a life sentence. Last week he wrote to a friend in New York.: "I have become quite a bird lover since coming here. I have 24 nests in my yard just outside my window." . . . Irwin, who destroyed three lives, expressed anger at the prison guards for killing three of the prison mice. "I tamed the mice here and had them eating out of my hand," he reports, "but then those —— guards set traps and killed them off."

FACT: A young private, first class, emerged bewildered from the American Theatre Wing's Canteen. "Nobody'll believe it. I can't even believe it myself, even though it happened to me," he gasped. Lynn Fontanne sat with me. Alfred Lunt gave me a tray. And then John Garfield took it away."

Metropolitan

If it's a good cry at down-to earth reality you're after, stay away from the Metropolitan. Frivolity and nonsense is the keynote on that screen, playing host to "The Fleet's In," Music, vaudeville acts on celluloid, Dorothy Lamour, William Holden, Eddie Bracken and Gil Lamb are the principal ingredients.

"The Fleet's In" is based on the giddy, boisterous stage farce, "Sailor, Beware." Holden is the shyest chap in the fleet, but he changes all that by asking a visiting movie star to autograph his kid sister's album. For the sake of the front pages, he's press-agented into a torrid embrace from the obliging film queen, sought by the admiral's daughter as a liason man to make her dance a success and becomes the pride of the U. S. S. Dakota. From there on it's up to him to conquer the most self-contained lass in all 'Frisco.

Onto this slight peg are hung opportunities for the smoldering allure of Miss Lamour, the jitterbug abilities of blond Betty Hutton, the quiet appeal of young Holden and the snazzy orchestra of Jimmy Dorsey, Esq., who brings along his radio vocalists, Bob Eberly and Helen O'Connell. Diversions of the plot offer variety turns by the eccentric Lamb, volatile Cass Daley and the dancing spoofists, Lorraine and Rognan.

A "Popular Science" release, a color cartoon strangely reminiscent of "Dumbo" but far less inspired and an informative issue of the Paramount and Universal newsreels complete the bill.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

In Congress the other day, Representative Donald L. O'Toole of Brooklyn squared off against a phase of the Army and Navy's physical education program and brought one up from the floor—of the House. Getting recognition for 10 minutes, Representative O'Toole slugged away at the practice of giving "soft berths," far from the combat services, to headline athletes.

POVICH

O'Toole let fly with his oratorical haymaker when he declared, "our men in Bataan, writhing in their death throes, must feel that all is not in vain when they hear over the short-wave radio that our big league pitchers and catchers, or our punch-drunk fighters are giving their all on the field of combat in some training-school competition."

The Brooklyn Congressman, a trial lawyer, invoked some beautiful prose to make out a case against the custom of handing out commissions and special ratings to heroes of the ball field and boxing ring "who enter the service without any training whatsoever . . . while men who have given as much as 10, 15 and 20 years to the service cannot advance because there are only a certain number of ratings and commissions in each service, and these are now being given to the heroic defenders of home plate and the pitcher's box."

"Why should these men who have made for the major part splendid livings from the public in the field of professional sport be given soft berths at training camps or training centers?" O'Toole demands to know. "It is done in the name of morale, but whose morale? The morale of these professional athletes themselves who are determined that they shall serve without the dirt, grime and discomfort of other men who have given themselves unselfishly."

Doesn't Criticize Gene Tunney

The morale of the men in the combat service would be raised to a much higher degree, O'Toole declared, "if they were able to say now that in their crew or in their battery, or in their squad was Joe So-and-So, the great Cleveland pitcher, or Johnny So-in-So, the great left-handed fighter. Surely these men would feel then that it was an Army of democracy and not an Army where favoritism was shown to those who had certain physical attributes . . .

". . . I could point out at least 20 or 30 who have neither the background nor the knowledge to qualify them as physical education experts. A man may be the world's best fighter, and I know that Commander Tunney will not deny this, and still know nothing about physical education. Yet many of these unilateral athletes are being classed as physical educators . . . Let them take their skills and fine bodies and let them mix with the men in the combat forces."

O'Toole prefaced his remarks with the observation that he was not "criticizing the efforts of Commander Tunney, for I know his own record as a fighting man in the last war, but I do criticize the system that has caused many boys in the service from my district to write to me and ask 'how come' that Joe Palooka of the Pittsburgh Pirates can get a chief petty officer's rating or that Knockout Glutz of the Hometown A. C., is being given a noncommissioned rating without previous military service.

". . . I am criticizing those, who, while they wear the uniform and take the plaudits of the multitude, have engineered themselves into feather beds where they are exempt from the many menial, tiring, back-breaking and morale-shattering jobs common to the ordinary enlisted man. Men whose boast will be, when their children ask, 'Daddy, what did you do in the war?' will quickly respond, 'I pitched a two-hitter for Great Lakes in the immortal game against Norfolk. Do not pay any attention to Johnny Jones his dad only did enough to win the Distinguished Service Cross."

Whew!

Stars Serve Purpose Behind Lines

What do you think? We think the good Congressman is slightly out of bounds. We think he is tarring the whole kaboodle of uniform-wearing athletes for the maneuvering of the few who have found soft berths in the physical training centers. Certainly the system by which athletes are promoted to special ratings can stand a bit of abuse if it results in a better physical specimen for our armed forces, the need of which has been so shockingly evident in the draft rejections and the rigors of modern warfare.

O'Toole has in mind, of course, such men as Petty Officer Bob Feller and Lieut. Mickey Cochrane, who moved into special ratings without previous military experience. He points out that their stardom on the ball field is no proof that they are physical education experts, which may be true enough, but apparently there is a shortage of physical education experts. And, anyway, who would command more respect and genuine effort from a group of draftees: an obscure graduate of a physical culture school, or a Feller or Cochrane who were probably the heroes of the men in civil life? Feller and Cochrane may not know a tibula from a fibia, but their years of baseball has brought them close to expert training and they know the fundamentals, at least, of getting in shape.

In any event, the sports stars cannot be singled out for special favors bestowed on them by an Army and Navy in need of special talents. Attorneys who may never have shouldered a gun are eligible for commissions in the Judge Advocate's office; newspapermen who would cringe at the roar of a revolver are being detailed for special services in intelligence and communications jobs, with ratings. Members of Congress, with special talents, might even get a commission as flame throwers, or something. And the chances are that the crew of an air carrier in the Southwest Pacific would be more thrilled to hear that Bob Feller had pitched a no-hit game for an All-Navy team against an All-Army team than they would to have him stoking down below. Americans are like that.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, April 24.—You read the front pages and you feel the sobering realities of war and, if you're a baseball fan, you get a feeling in the stomach that it can't go on. You read about the new draft ages, rationing and, for a time, the dilly-dallying of owners, and you say the same thing. What's the use of it, you ask?

CONSIDINE

Then you go to the ball park and you see Connie Mack. And you know that it'll take an awful lot to stamp it out. An awful lot.

Old Connie. It's a shock to remember that he'll be 80 years old this year. And yet he's still in the dugout, tall, spare and gentle in his black clothes. He can still talk about next year and the year after. He doesn't live in the past, either, though it has been a rich past full of great ball players. "Joe DiMaggio is as good an outfielder as ever lived," he can say. "Yes . . . yes, better than Al . . . Simmons . . . was."

We watched the old guy during the recent Yankee-Athletic series. Standing up, sitting down, coming to the mouth of the dugout to wag his scorecard and move his absurd young men this way or that, and we marveled again at his never-failing appetite for the game.

Somehow, when you watch old Connie in action, you don't think of the nine pennants he won, the seven runner-up spots he captured, the procession of Philadelphia greats who fought and won for "Mr. Mack." You think of his incredible, supernatural patience with incompetents.

Incompetents who stop grounders with their chest, who throw to the wrong bases, who make the wrong pitches, who go for bad balls at the plate. And you look at his wrinkled face and wonder why in heaven's name he stays on; why he doesn't call it quits and ask for his rocker and slippers.

Team Made Six Errors in Game

When Connie's end comes, and let's hope it is never, it will come in the dugout. That would be right. It will be quiet, too. No expostulating. No shock. That would not be Connie.

His Athletics made six errors in Thursday's game against the Yanks, undoing all of Connie's strategy and the fine pitching of Jack Knott. The official scorer was a little charitable, too, on the errors. Hardly one ball was handled cleanly by the Athletic infield. The boys threw their bodies in the way of the Yankee grounders, or they left their positions wide open. But if Connie was thinking of what his infield of McInnis, Barry, Collins and Baker would have done with such balls, or what his infield of Foxx, Bishop, Boley and Dykes would have done, it did not show in his face.

"Gracious!" he ejaculated softly after the sixth Philadelphia error, but he wasn't nearly as downcast as the young guys who were making the boners. You sensed, looking at their embarrassing performance, that they might be as vain as most ball players, but that it hurt them to think of letting the old man down more than it hurt them to think they were blowing their chances of staying in the big leagues.

There's something so durable about the fragile-looking old man, with his quiet niceties, his "by jingoes," and the really loving paternal care that he lavishes on one batch of earnest young stumblebums after another. His blue eyes water a little in the dank, cheerless dugout and a newcomer's first impression of him is lugubrious. But not after a while. He's brisk, gingerly and restless. He misses nothing on the field, speaks occasionally to the young men on the bench, explaining why something was done or should have been done, and never condemns a player.

He has protested two umpiring decisions in the last five years. One

Blozis Wins In Shot Put And Discus

Outstanding Milers Hook Up in Thrilling Duels as Anchor Men; Penn State Scores

By Jack Munhall

Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, April 24.—Picking up today where they left off last year, Indiana's lanky Campbell Kane and N. Y. U.'s stocky Les MacMitchell today featured a colorless opening session of the forty-eighth Penn Relay Carnival with a pair of individual duels that provided most of the day's excitement for 5000 fans on sun-flooded Franklin Field.

With Al Blozis failing even to approach a record in winning the shot put and discus for the second time in as many appearances here and no other college marks being molested, Kane's victory over MacMitchell in the anchor mile leg of the distance medley was easily the day's feature. The wavy-haired, long-striding Kane came back later and again bested MacMitchell, this time over the more familiar half mile route in the sprint medley in another dog-eat-dog duel whose drama was little lessened by the fact that it was for second place behind Penn State.

Best Relay Effort of Day

Penn State, in lifting the second of the two titles N. Y. U. lost today, sprung from a sensational opening quarter of 48.2 by Norwood (Barney) Ewell to a 3:26.5 performance which by comparison was about the best collegiate relay effort of the afternoon.

In this race Xavier (La.) College's surprisingly strong team failed a bold bid to make off with a pair of major championships. Earlier the all-Negro Louisiana team galloped away with the quarter-mile title after N. Y. U. was disqualified from its trial heat for two false starts by lead-off runner Stanford Braun.

Xavier grabbed off its heat in 3:27.8, but that fairly fast time netted it no better than fourth place as Penn State, Seton Hall and Syracuse all bettered the performance in a thrill-packed second heat.

Syracuse, thanks to Anchorman Lynn Radcliffe's finishing 1:50.2

Yanks Rally In 9th, Beat Red Sox, 8-5

Champs Score Seven Runs on Six Hits to Save Game; Gordon's Homer Tops Outburst

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 24.—The New York Yankees unfolded one of their familiar but seemingly miraculous rallies in the ninth inning today to score seven runs on six hits and beat the Boston Red Sox, 8 to 5.

Up until the big explosion Heber (Dick) Newsome had held the World Champions to one run, although he was kept in hot water more or less constantly by giving ten hits and was saved three times by Red Sox double plays.

Then in the ninth, Bill Dickey led off with a single. Tom Henrich batted for Ed Levy and singled, Buddy Rosar batted for Pitcher Ernie Bonham and doubled for one run, and Gerry Priddy singled for another.

At this point, Mike Ryba relieved Newsome, but he couldn't even slow down the Yanks. Frank Crosetti doubled for his fourth straight hit, scoring a run, and George Selkirk singled off Ulysses Lupien's glove to tie the score. Joe DiMaggio forced Selkirk and Charley Keller lifted a fly, but Crosetti scored after the catch to put New York in front and Joe Gordon climaxed the rally with a home run, scoring behind DiMaggio.

Ryba was charged with the defeat, keeping Newsome's record clean at two victories and no defeats.

The Red Sox collected nine hits and sped away to an auspicious start with two runs in the first inning

Marchildon Holds Griffs To Four Hits

Hurls Two-Hit Ball After Second Round; Estalella Smacks Homer in Second

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Phil Marchildon wrecked the Nats and contributed nothing to U. S.-Canadian goodwill among the 9000 Ladies Day fans at Griffith Stadium yesterday. The righthanded Marchildon, a Canadian citizen whom the U. S. graciously permits to work for the Athletics on a special passport, acted the ingrate and held the team representing the seat of this Government to four hits.

Marchildon beat the Nats good. There may be a more grammatical way of saying it, but we like it that way. He pitched two-hit ball after the second inning, and steered the Athletics to a 7-2 victory which was a soft touch.

Estalella Hits Homer

It was a great day all around for the foreigners. Washington's only two runs were the product of Bobby Estalella's bat. The little Cuban giant who is also in the U. S. on a skilled worker's passport, swatted a home run over the rightfield wall in the second inning with Jake Early on base and that is all the runs the Nats ever did get.

Buck Newsom, scion of one of Hartsville, S. C., oldest families, who likes to pitch on ladies' days because "they appreciate me more," had little on the ball except his admirers' good wishes. He was belted out of the box in seven innings, after allowing 10 of the 12 Philadelphia hits of the day and six of their runs.

Marchildon alternately threw a fast ball that was surprising for his pounds, and a curve ball, to pitch the Nats in submission. After Early's single and Estalella's homer in the second, the only Washington hits were Spence's third-inning double and Repass' infield single in the seventh. The Nats' batting attack was pretty futile.

Infielders Save Pitcher

Marchildon was losing his control toward the finish, but he got some valiant help from his infield. Shortstop Pete Suder and Second Baseman Bill Knickerbocker made some fancy grabs of ground balls that choked off threatened uprising by the Nats in the sixth, seventh and eighth.

One hit sufficed the A.'s when they took a 1-0 lead off Newsome in the first inning. Kreevich drew a walk, Knickerbocker sacrificed and the run scored on Johnson's single to left.

The Nats' futility was evident in the first inning when Case walked and reached second with none out after Marchildon threw wild in an effort to pick him off first. Spence's long fly moved Case to third, but

Lyda Hero Of Drake's Track Meet

By the Associated Press

Des Moines, Iowa, April 24.—A sensational half-mile reeled off by barrel-chested William Lyda, one of the Nation's top-ranking runners, enabled the University of Oklahoma sprint medley team to establish an American collegiate record in the opening events of the thirty-third annual two-day Drake Relays today.

The Oklahoma quartet, with Lyda running as anchor, ran the 440, 220, 220, 880 yards in 3:23 to clip one-fifth of a second off the record set by the University of Texas in the 1941 relays. The Sooner runners conquered the heavily favored record-holding Texans, who finished third behind second-place Michigan.

Oklahoma's smashing triumph was the outstanding performance of the day, which also saw two other Drake records broken and the surprising, upset defeat of Defending Champion Ollie Hunter of Notre Dame in the 2-mile run.

Then Cuts Loose

Lyda was timed in 1:49.7 in his blistering half. He was third for the first lap and a half, on the heels of Mac Umstattd of Texas and Davey Mathews of Michigan. Then he cut loose with driving finish, passing Umstattd and the Wolverine and hit the stretch curve with a lead of three yards, which he gamely maintained to the tape. His teammates were John Sharp, Orv Mathews and Bob Hodges.

Col. Bradley's Bless Me Out of Derby, May 2

By International News Service

Louisville, April 24.—A Kentucky Derby field of 10 horses was forecast by veteran horsemen tonight as stable owners weighed possibilities of their eligibles against the $500 entrance fee for the Bluegrass Classic, May 2—one week off. The track's spring meeting opens tomorrow.

Only 8 horses tonight were generally conceded to be "sure starters" as Col. E. R. Bradley's Bless Me and Samuel D. Riddle's less-known Soldier Song were reported definitely out of the running. Two others may be added to the starters from the Wood Memorial entrants. Alsab, the champion as a 2-year-old of Mrs. Albert Sabath, Chicago, is "ready" according to Trainer "Sarge" Swenke, and will give a preview of his talents in the Derby trial Tuesday.

Growing more impressive with each day the Derby draws nearer are the Valdina Farm's Hollywood and Valdina Orphan. Although both worked the Derby distance of a mile-and-quarter Friday at the Downs, they were never called on, and Hollywood was clocked at 2:11.4 and Valdina Orphan at 2:12.

Both are "right," according to Frank Catrons, trainer, who is entering the pair in the trial.

Blackburn, Louis' Trainer, Dies

Old-Time Fighter Was 58; Heart Attack Is Fatal to 'Chappie'

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 24.—Jack Blackburn, trainer of Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis, died today.

Blackburn, 58-year-old, was stricken with pneumonia several weeks ago but had progressed sufficiently to be removed from a hospital to his home. He was believed to be on the road to recovery, but death came suddenly, apparently from a heart attack.

In all Louis' championship fights except the last bout with Abe Simon, Blackburn had been in the titleholder's corner. At that time Blackburn was ill and listened to the battle by radio.

He was regarded as one of the outstanding Negro trainers of the prize fight ring and Louis gave him credit for his fighting technique. The champion referred to Blackburn affectionately as "Chappie."

Chappie Happy

When Louis put Simon away in the sixth round of their bout in New York March 7, he stepped to the microphone and said:

"I hope you're satisfied, Chappie."

On his hospital bed here, Blackburn grinned and said:

"I sure am."

"Chappie" was hardly more loquacious than the taciturn Louis whom he trained to the championship and through 20 successful defenses. But however short on chatter he was long on ring wisdom, so much so that Blackburn often was referred to as Louis' "Mr. Brain."

Blackburn had recuperated enough to take an automobile ride Wednesday and felt so strong that he

GAMES TUESDAY
Central at Anacostia.
Wilson at Coolidge.

After losing a game apiece to start their 1942 interhigh baseball seasons, Anacostia and Wilson came back to chalk up their first victories yesterday in two wild and wooly battles.

Anacostia's Indians needed 10 innings to turn back a persistent Tech nine, 10-8, on the latter's field. Wilson, playing at home, poured 11 runs across the plate in the eighth inning to top Roosevelt 12-8.

Thus the two winners moved into a four-way tie for third place in the series standings, Western and Central now holding the coveted top positions which will earn a berth in the three-game championship series.

Though out in front most of the way, Anacostia came within a hair's breadth of losing in the ninth, then managed for two runs to win in the tenth. And despite its loss, Tech took credit for one of the gamest struggles possible.

Nolte's Double Wins

In the end it was Bob Nolte, chunky outfielder, who gave the Indians their victory. His ringing double with mates on first and second was one of the best blows of the game, ending a period of futility which had seen the Indians leave 3 men stranded in the eighth and two in the ninth.

Meanwhile, Tech had whittled at a 6-3 deficit with five runs in the last three innings of regulation time to tie. Nobody took credit for the tying run in the ninth, though big Buddy Keithley's hot grounder, muffed by Second Baseman Wahler, sent it home in the person of Bob Brewer.

Until the start of the eighth, Anacostia's John Penn had the Trainers well in check. He had given them only six hits. But a home run by Tom Curtis, first-year outfielder, and Gil Schmelz' double accounted for two Tech runs in the eighth. When Penn walked Brewer to start the ninth he was yanked in favor of Elmer Leukhardt, regular shortstop. The latter hurled the last two innings, issuing only one safety and fanning three.

Curtis Leads Attack

Curtis led the array of sluggers for both teams with his eighth-inning homer and a sock in the first frame that would also have been a home run if he'd thought to touch third base.

Over at Wilson matters coasted along cozily until the eighth inning, and then came the biggest deluge of runs in one inning this season. The Tigers used a total of five singles, Tiny Lamb's double, three Roosevelt miscues, four walks and a wild pitch to score 11 runs.

Victim of most of the spree was Leight Joy, who previously had beaten Coolidge for the Riders. He pitched to 13 batters, got two of them out, and allowed Jack Wilson to have a try at four more hitters before retiring the side.

Nats Recall Hurler Kennedy And Release Phil McCullough

Alexandria Pitcher Has Won 3 in Row For Chattanooga Club

The Nats reached into their farm system yesterday to bolster a pitching staff weakened by the accident that put Dutch Leonard in he hospital with a fractured leg. From Chattanooga they summoned Bill Kennedy, tall lefthander.

As balm for the loss of Kennedy, who has been Chattanooga's leading pitcher this season, Manager Bucky Harris sent big Phil McCullough, knuckleballing righthander to the Chattanooga team. McCullough was one of the most prized of Harris' rookie pitchers.

For Kennedy, Leonard's accident brought about a call for his services which may have been overdue. Kennedy was with the Nats in spring training and didn't give up an earned run in three appearances on the mound. He squawked loudly at his release to Chattanooga before the Nats' broke camp, declaring he deserved to stay with the Washington club.

Kennedy at first refused to report to Chattanooga, but bowed to the advice of the Nats' bosses.

With Chattanooga, Kennedy became one of the early-season pitching stars of the Southern Association, winning his first three starts. In the club's opening game, he pitched a 10 inning, 2-1 triumph over Atlanta, last year's pennant winner.

Manager Bucky Harris stated yesterday that Kennedy would be promoted immediately to a starting role on the Washington staff, replacing Early Wynn, who is out of condition. Wynn was hit solidly in his two starts this year.

"I realized when I gave Kennedy his release last month that he had the makings of a pretty good pitcher, but we seemed to have all the pitching we needed at the time," said Harris. "Leonard's accident and Wynn's flop has changed that picture. Kennedy showed me that he is not having the same trouble with his control, and I think he can win in the big league."

Bannockburn Club Goes on Sale Today

Bannockburn Golf and Country Club, the 18-hole course, clubhouse and all fixtures, will go under the auctioneer's hammer at a trustee's sale at 11 o'clock this morning in front of the club property.

Default in payment of the indebtedness will place the club on sale at public auction to the highest bidder. A $5000 deposit will be required.

John J. Shinners of Norristown, Pa., owner of the property and 100 per cent owner of the first-mortgage bonds, is desirous of protecting his title at the sale and intends to continue to operate the club property as a golf course and promote the club.

Joseph B. Simpson, jr., of the Rockville law firm of Simpson & Simpson, is substituted trustee.

Landon Nine Scores, 13-12, Over Blair

A single by Outfielder Johnson in the final inning gave Landon School diamonders a 13-12 triumph over Montgomery Blair yesterday in a seven-inning game on the losers' lot.

Johnson's smart blow sent Teammate Cady across the plate, deciding a clash which had seen the winners take a 12-1 lead and lose it to an 11-run Blair rally. J. Sager, going the route for the winners, allowed 10 hits, while Landon could collect only nine off three Blair hurlers.

Rookie Patrick's Ninth-Inning Homer Wins for Tigers, 2-1

Chisox Lose As Gorsica Gains Victory

Rudy York, Kolloway Also Hit Circuits To Round Out All the Scoring

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 24.—With two out in the ninth inning rookie Outfielder Bob Patrick belted a home run today to give the Detroit Tigers a 2-to-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox and a sweep of the two-game series.

Patrick's round tripper came off Lefty Edgar Smith, who in his first start of the American League season had lost a 1-to-0 decision to Cleveland, and Gorsica gave relief Pitcher John Gorsica his first triumph.

The other two runs also resulted from homers. Rudy York, of the Tigers, clouted No. 3 in the Seventh inning to give big Alton Benton a temporary lead, but Don Kolloway of Chicago found the range in the eighth to square the count. It was the first run in 19 innings for the White Sox.

But Chicago lost more than the ball game. Earlier in the ninth First Baseman Joe Kuhel was spiked by York and was removed from the game. Manager Jimmy Dykes said he sustained a three-stitch gash on his right foot and would be out of the line-up for at least 10 days.

Great Play Stops Cards

Chicago, April 24.—A sparkling double play that cut off a ninth-inning rally enabled the Chicago Cubs to beat the St. Louis Cardinals, 4 to 3, today.

Terry Moore was on second with the tying run when Enos Slaughter slammed a long fly against the left-field wall. "Peanuts" Lowrey made a spectacular catchc and then winged the ball to Stan Hack, who nailed Moore at third to retire the side and end the game.

Marshall Star As Giants Win Over Braves, 3-1

By International News Service

New York, April 24.—The New York Giants rode to their third victory today on the strength of a two-run homer by Rookie Willard Marshall and effective pitching by Cliff Melton. Boston was the victim, 3 to 1, and the defeat was the seventh in a row for the Braves.

Marshall belted his homer, No. 3 of the season, off Louis Tost in the fourth inning after Manager Mel Ott had singled. Tost, Rookie hurlre from Hollywood of the Pacific Coast League, was removed for a pinch-hitter in the sixth after limiting the Giants to three safeties.

Melton allowed ten hits but kept them well scattered in scoring his second straight win. The Braves tallied in the eighth on singles by Miller and Demaree and an infield out.

Phils Bombard Higbe To Beat Dodgers, 4-2

Litwhiler and Warren Pace 11-Hit Attack On Brooklyn Star; Hoerst Hurls Victory

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 24.—The five-game winning streak of the Brooklyn Dodgers was brought to an abrupt halt today as the Phils carved themselves a 4-to-2 victory on the five-hit hurling of Frank Hoerst and the hitting of Danny Litwhiler and Ben Warren.

The Phils peppered Kirby Higbe, who was a teammate until he won promotion to the Dodgers last year, for 11 safeties and blew the ball game wide open in the eighth inning when Warren singled to center with the bases loaded for the marginal runs.

Litwhiler made four hits, one of them a homer with Al Glossop aboard in the sixth, and he led off the eighth-inning rally with a single. Following this, Augie Galan, relieving Dolph Camilli at first base, fumbled a grounder by Nick Etten and both runners advanced on a fly ball. Bobby Bragan was purposely passed to load the bases and Warren loosened them up.

The Dodgers gave Higbe a one-run working advantage in the first inning when Peewee Reese led off with a triple and came home on an infield out. Johnny Rizzo, another former Phil, hit a home run to lead off the fourth.

McCormick, Goodman Star, Reds Win, 9-5

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, April 24.—Frank McCormick and Ival Goodman gave the Cincinnati Reds a one-two punch which resulted in a 9-5 victory today over the Pittsburgh Pirates and a sweep of the two-game series.

The Pirates approached a record by using 20 players, including five pitchers and Frankie Gustine, second baseman, who was pressed into service as a catcher in the seventh after Eddie Baker, subbing for Al Lopez, injured his hand. Babe Phelps had been used as a pinch hitter. The modern player-used record was set May 6, 1940, when Pittsburgh employed 24 men against Boston in a 12-inning game. Cleveland, in 1921, and Brooklyn, in 1937, each used 23 men in regulation contests.

Phelps was the Bucco hero, doubling with the bases loaded to score three runs in the sixth.

Western Wins In Triangular Track Meet

Big Ed Widmeyer and Arnold Eddleman were the main factors yesterday as Western High, competing in its first triangular track meet of the season on its home track, nosed out G. W. High, of Alexandria, and Calvin Coolidge. The Raiders scored 55½ points to 45 for G. W. and 42½ for Coolidge.

Widmeyer, a converted gridman, handled the weights well enough to take the discus and shot. Eddleman turned in the time of 2:05.3 to win the 880, then leaped 19 feet 10 inches to capture the broad jump, and finally ran a fast leg on the Raiders' winning mile relay team.

Courtney Renshaw took down both the 100 and 220 for G. W., and Calvin Weems sparked Coolidge with firsts in both hurdle events and a third in the high jump.

Rex McDowell Scores an Ace In School Golf

Rex McDowell, 15-year-old golfer of Calvin Coolidge High, scored a hole-in-one on the 194-yard eighth hole at Columbia Country Club yesterday, but still couldn't stave off defeat for his teammates in the D. C. Schoolboy Golf League. The Colts lost a 6-3 decision to Wilson.

The winners remained a close second to Roosevelt, which shut out Western in another match at Woodmont, in the league standings. Another public school clash went to Central, 5-4, over Tech at Indian Spring.

In the private school section, St. Albans featured hostilities with a 5-4 triumph over Blair, the outcome depending on the best ball point in the final foursome. That went to the duo of Baillard and Littlehales after 21 holes. Bethesda shut out St. John's, 9-0, in the other match.

Harder Holds Browns to Four Hits, Tribe Wins

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, April 24.—The St. Louis Browns who made such a blazing start took it on the chin again today—their sixth straight defeat—as they bowed to the Cleveland Indians, 2 to 0, on the four-hit pitching of Mel Harder.

It was a fair pitching battle at that, with Denny Galehouse and Bob Muncrief holding the Indians to seven hits, four of which were grouped in two innings.

With one away in the fifth, Harder reached first on an error by Alan Strange and was knocked around for the first run on successive singles by Roy Weatherly and Oris Hockett. Les Fleming, who singled and stole second in the sixth, scored the other run on a single by Manager Lou Boudreau.

Roy Cullenbine played first base for the Browns in place of George McQuinn, who reported a charley horse.

Survivors include his wife, a stepson, a brother, John, of Indianapolis, and a sister.

Blackburn, himself, was recognized as one of the greatest defensive fighters who ever lived. Oldtimers still speak in awe-struck terms of how he "could stand up in front of another man and pick punches off all night."

"Chappie" compiled one of the most astonishing records of all time, fighting from around 1900 until 1923 and losing only two fights out of 92 in all the stretch. His first defeat was administered by the great Joe Gans in 1904 and his next came at the hands of Roy Pelkey in Los Angeles when he attempted his comeback in 1923.

Blackburn was born Charles Henry Blackburn in Versailles, Ky., in 1883. Standing about 5 feet 10 inches, he fought as a lightweight.

At Hot Springs, Ark., Julian Black, Louis's comanager, said news of Blackburn's death "was a great shock to all of us."

He said he would cut short a vacation trip and return to Chicago immediately. He added he had communicated the news of Blackburn's death to Louis at his Army post.

"We'll miss him greatly," Black said of the veteran trainer. "I don't think we can find another like him. His death was a great shock to us because he was up last night and apparently doing all right. He was planning on going to our next camp with us."

Joe Louis Loses His 'Closest Friend'

Yaphank, N. Y., April 23 (AP).—Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis, informed of the death of his trainer, Jack Blackburn, in Chicago, mourned Blackburn's passing today as the loss of "my closest friend."

"This is the worst shock I ever got in my life," Joe said, visibly overcome and near tears when he was told as he completed a day-long drill on the rifle range at Camp Upton, where he is a buck private.

"Jack started me in the boxing game and followed me all the way through," the Bomber went on. "He made a fighter of me and did more for me than anyone else."

Joe revealed that after he knocked out Abe Simon in New York March 27, he spent his five-day furlough which followed in a trip to Chicago to see Blackburn, who was ill with pneumonia.

Louis applied immediately for a brief leave in order to go to Chicago for Blackburn's funeral.

Maryland Nine Snaps N.C.'s Streak, 8 to 7

By the Associated Press

Maryland's in-and-out baseball team handed North Carolina its first defeat of the season yesterday, edging out the Southern Conference champions, 8 to 7, in a ten-inning game.

The Tarheels had previously won eight straight and last year were beaten only by Maryland and Duke.

The game was a free-hitting affair with Maryland collecting 15 hits to North Carolina's 14. The Old Liners batted around to score five runs in the first, but North Carolina came back with a four-run rally in the third and tied it up in the ninth. The Terps punched over the winning run with one out in the tenth.

Ice Water Noses Out Devalue in Havre de Grace Feature

Mora Gives $7.20 Shot Smart Ride

Jockey Rates Mount Well and Saves 'Kick' For Finish; Pharien Takes Show Spoils

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., April 24.—The Christiana Stables' Ice Water, on the verge of being defeated, made a last-jump lunge at the wire and the move was enough to bring a nose victory in the Fort Meade Purse, featuring today's program. The son of Stimulus took the decision from the Elobee Farm's Devalue, a recent longshot winner. A length and a half farther back came P. M. Burch's Pharien to be third. Four others competed in the test of 1 mile and 70 yards.

Ice Water was given an excellent ride by Jockey Henri Mora. The Latin-American boy took him away from the gate in front, saved all kinds of ground and shared honors with the horse in that final victory push. The crowd of 7500 made Ice Water a light favorite and his backers collected a $7.20 mutuel. The track was fast and the winner stepped the route in 1:45.

Mora nursed every bit of speed out of Ice Water. He held the 4-year-old under steadying restraint while setting the pace. Pharien was lapped on Ice Water with Peter Jr. third and Devalue fourth as the field went along the backstretch.

Dusky Fox was first to make a definite move and was shut off while improving his position on the inside. It was approaching the stretch that Mora put Ice Water to a drive. Pharien was also placed to pressure. At the bend, Devalue went to the inside and saved ground. Ice Water moved out on Pharien but Devalue came with a rush on the inside.

At the eighth pole, Devalue went into a brief lead and it appeared that competition for first money was over. However, it was in the last strides that Ice Water found some hidden speed and came on to be up in the last jump.

A favorite and a longshot produced a $55 daily double. J. L. Collins' Teentee held sway virtually all the way in the first race to pay his backers an $18.20 mutuel. In the second event, Henry H. Hecht's Ask Aunt Ada was the winner and paid an individual mutuel of $5.

Reilly Stresses Vital Need for Inflation Curb

The ultimate control of inflation will determine to a large extent the future destiny of all financial institutions, said John A. Reilly, president of the Second National Bank, and first vice president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, in an address before the Eastern regional conference of the National Association of Bank Auditors and Comptrollers in Philadelphia yesterday afternoon.

MR. REILLY

"It is our duty to defend and maintain for the people of our country the sound purchasing power of the dollar. We control to a large extent the supply of money and credit," he added.

"As the war progresses it is only natural to expect the emphasis to be placed upon the military aspect of the struggle. I wish to assure you, however, that this Nation can ill afford to forget the economic phases of the war. A lack of clear thinking, on the part of bankers, business and professional men at this very hour and in the days to come may prove a stark tragedy that will defeat our very civilization. The thinking cannot stop with the cessation of hostilities. Peace may bring a crisis more complex and more cruel than war itself . . .

"We stand in the threshold of one of the major transformations of history. Whether we like it or not, history is moving in the direction of one single unified world economy. The masses throughout the world are going to have their day in court.

"As America needs young men physically fit to fight on the war fronts of the world, so does she need the older men mentally fit to fight her battles on the economic fronts. . . .

"There is a double challenge facing us today. We can no longer assume that America will continue to provide the standard of living that she has in the past unless we now resolve to hand down our heritage unimpaired to our children who face the tomorrow. We have something greater than ourselves to live for."

Shipyard Workers Put at 550,000

New York, April 24 (AP).—Employment in American shipbuilding and repair yards has reached 550,000 workers and the number is rapidly increasing, H. G. Smith, president of the National Council of American Shipbuilders, reported at the annual meeting.

"Intensive training is continuing to meet the requirements of additional technical and mechanical forces," Smith said, adding that the industry was sparing no effort to meet the Nation's call for eight million deadweight tons of shipping in 1942.

"The tempo of launchings and deliveries of both naval and commercial vessels is continually increasing," Smith said. "The industry now is launching about two merchant vessels a day. Deliveries of vessels of all types are, in general, well ahead of scheduled delivery dates."

Butter, Eggs Set Long-Time Highs

Chicago, April 24 (AP).—Some grades of butter sold at new highs since the summer of 1930 and eggs were at an April peak for the past 22 years in the wholesale market today.

On gains of ¼ to ½ cent a pound, best grade butter sold at 37¾ to 38¾ cents a pound. Centralized carlots and undergrades shared in the upturn.

Butter is currently selling as much as 2¾ cents above the Government support level.

Continued good demand from consuming channels, an improving call for butter for storage purposes and a shortage of under grades were considered responsible for the advance.

Egg receipts were smaller than a week ago and prices rose ¼ to ½ cent a dozen. Fresh graded extra firsts in cars sold at 31¼ cents a dozen.

New York Cotton

New York, April 24 (AP).—Cotton futures declined 15 to 40 cents a bale today after a seesaw price movement most of the session.

Irregular trading reflected scattered evening up in the May position prior to first notice day next week and a tendency for traders to lighten commitments pending detailed announcement of the Administration's anti-inflation program.

Offerings were attributed to New Orleans brokers and local liquidation and some hedging continued against Commodity Credit Corp. purchases.

Otis Steel Co., J. & L. Merger Is Authorized

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, April 24.—In the largest steel industry deal in seven years Otis Steel Co. stockholders voted today to sell the concern to the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp.

A group of some 20 attorneys voted by proxies to transfer Otis' assets in exchange for stock in the Pittsburgh concern.

Requiring only a few minutes the balloting was as follows: Preferred stock for the sale plan, 108,396 shares; against, 4968. Common stock for the plan, 696,894; against, 21,909. A two-thirds vote was required.

Some Opposition

Dissent was voiced by spokesmen for a group of preferred stockholders who contended they were being treated unfairly, and that common stockholders were receiving full book value on their shares at the expense of preferred.

The plan called for merger of the 38-million-dollar Cleveland concern with the Nation's fourth largest producer, expanding by one million net tons the Pittsburgh company's present annual ingot capacity of 3,931,000 net tons.

Otis directors decided upon liquidation several months ago as a result of disadvantages arising from competition with larger concerns, President E. J. Kulas reported.

H. E. Lewis, chairman and president of Jones & Laughlin, said Otis' president would become a director and vice chairman of Jones & Laughlin's executive committee under the merger. Kulas also is president of Midland Steel Products Co.

Details of Sale Plan

The sale plan provided that for each share of Otis' convertible first preferred stockholders receive one quarter share each of Jones & Laughlin 5 per cent cumulative preferred, series A and B, $100 par value; one share of Jones & Laughlin common, no par, and accrued dividends on the Otis preferred which amounted to $6.87½ per share as of last March 4.

Holders of each common share of Otis stock would receive one-quarter share of Jones & Laughlin common and $1 in cash.

Jones & Laughlin, whose capitalization was shown at $258,944,000 in the registration statement, contracted to buy Otis assets with the view of expanding its sheet and strip production and obtaining a great outlet near big steel-using centers.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, April 24 (AP).—Shaking off early weakness after declining up to ⅝ cent, wheat prices today rallied more than 2 cents a bushel from lows to close 1¼ to 1⅝ higher than yesterday.

This recovery, coming after midsession, imparted strength to other grain prices, which had sagged in sympathy with a decline of more than a cent in corn. The yellow cereal sold at lowest quotations since early in the year before rallying with wheat.

Buying attributed to dealers covering previous short sales and to mills, who have been more active this week on each price recession to around lows for the past five months, accounted for strength of wheat.

May wheat closed at 1.21⅝@1.21½; July 81.23¾@1.23¾. Corn fell as much as 1¾ cents, but finished unchanged to ⅛ off compared with yesterday; May, 85¼@85¾; July, 88⅛@88¼. Oats closed ¼ off to ⅝ up; rye, ⅛ to ⅜ higher; soybeans, 1⅞ to 2¼ higher, and lard unchanged at ceilings.

Pit brokers said large Army purchases of flour were reported to have spurred mill activity in wheat. A report that Secretary of Agriculture Wickard may seek a reduction in the limit of 55 million acres for the 1943 crop attracted attention. Wickard was expected to urge farmers to reduce production or be content with lower prices.

Retailers Note Slackening of 'Stockup' Rush

By the Associated Press

New York, April 24.—Retail trade slackened during the past week and there was a marked let-down in advance buying, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

While expanded demand for summer goods was noted, anticipatory buying was lighter. Manufacturing was faced with an increasing complexity of restrictions, the survey found.

Retailers reported sales spotty, blaming in a part a poor assortment of some lines of merchandise because of shortages. Tapering off of advance buying, these reports said, was due to an expected reaction from hoarding, with hesitation in view of impending price ceilings an added factor.

Apparel continued to hold the retail spotlight, warm weather speeding up movement of spring and early summer merchandise. Usual spring cleaning items sold well in some sections. Furniture sales were reported stimulated by advertising, but the volume of most heavy consumer durable goods continued to decline.

On the average, the Nation's retail business was about 4 to 9 per cent ahead of the comparable period of 1941. By regions, gains were: New England, 3 to 7 per cent, East, 2 to 7, South, 3 to 10, Midwest, 5 to 12, Southwest, 3 to 6, Northwest, 4 to 9 and Pacific Coast, 5 to 9.

Wholesalers continued to receive requests for immediate delivery with orders for summer goods, and indications were that retailers were remaining alert to opportunities to buy ahead despite the dropoffs in some lines.

Wholesale markets followed an irregular path for the most part, furniture buyers turning cautious, earthen dinnerware orders declining, and food buying limited to replacements. Cotton goods trading also was slim, with most bookings requiring a priority rating.

Montgomery Ward Elects Three New Board Members

Chicago, April 24 (AP).—George Whitney, president of J. P. Morgan & Co., Inc.; Philip R. Clarke, president of the City National Bank & Trust Co., of Chicago, and William L. Keaty, Chicago, president of the United States Gypsum Co., today were elected to the board of directors of Montgomery Ward & Co.

Sewell L. Avery, chairman and president, told stockholders at the annual meeting that earnings for the three months ended April 30, were estimated at $4,950,000, equal to 88 cents a common share. In the same period last year revised net income was $2,823,000 or 47 cents a common share.

Avery said the company would continue to set aside from earnings substantial reserves for future inventory price declines. Reserve provision for the first quarter will be $2,400,000, which would make the estimated net income $2,550,000 or 42 cents a common share, Avery said.

Stocks Again Retreat on Broad Front On Question of New Economic Controls

New York, April 24.—There was a trace of stock market tension again today over the question of investment and speculative positions under the new economic controls soon to be applied by Washington and share prices dropped fractions to around 2 points over a wide front.

Selling volume was not heavy but in the absence of a good supply of bids it was sufficient to force the average price level to a new low since April 28, 1933.

Although Wall Street still lacked definite information as to the probable provisions of the new tax bill there was a general tendency to discount a sharp lift in corporation levies and from this it was theorized that many companies might find it difficult to maintain dividend rates in effect the last year or so.

Recent unofficial forecasts that the big chemical companies would be hard hit by schedules proposed in the course of Washington tax debates were revived as shares of these concerns registered new sharp declines.

Some stocks worked up a little from their lows in sporadic last hour rallies and several rails edged into plus territory at the end.

New York Shipbuilding displayed independent firmness on the declaration of a $1.50 dividend which also applied to the founders shares in the Curb. Last year the company paid $1 in June and $2 in November.

Among the Stock Exchange leaders reaching new bottoms for a year or longer were U. S. Steel (this came back to show a minor closing gain); American Telephone, Standard Oil (N. J.), Johns-Manville, Eastman Kodak, United Aircraft and Douglas.

Du Pont, Dow Chemical and Allied Chemical each fell 2 or more points. Off fractions to a point or so were Philip Morris, Bethlehem Steel, Westinghouse, Anaconda, J. C. Penney and U. S. Gypsum.

Chicago wheat ended ahead ¼ to ⅝ of a cent a bushel while corn was unchanged to ½ cent off. Hogs were down 15 to 25 cents a hundredweight. Cotton futures declined 15 to 40 cents a bale.

N. Y. Shipbuilding Founders shares, Montgomery Ward "A" Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Gulf Oil and Great Atlantic & Pacific non-voting lost a point or more in the curb. In a few cases the transactions were limited to small odd lots. American Cyanamid and American Gas & Electric improved. Transfers here were approximately 71,560 shares against 68,990 Thursday.

Morris Simon Dies; Rites Set For Tomorrow

Morris Simon, prominent Washington attorney and insurance executive, died yesterday afternoon at his home, 5226 Thirty-ninth Street Northwest. He was 55 years old.

MR. SIMON

Funeral services will be conducted at 11 a. m. tomorrow at his home by Dr. Isadore Breslau, an intimate friend for many years. Burial will be in Washington Hebrew Congregation Cemetery.

Honorary pallbearers representing the District Bar Association will be Henry I. Quinn, Edmund M. Toland, Walter M. Bastian, John E. Laskey, James C. Wilkes, Richard E. Wellford and Sefton Darr.

Mr. Simon, a member of the law firm of Simon, Koenigsberger & Young, was stricken April 15 while making a plea for charity at Woodmont Country Club, of which he was president. He was removed to his home and his condition gradually became worse.

A native of Philadelphia, Pa., Mr. Simon was educated in public schools there and at Banks Business College. He came here in 1905 and was graduated from National University. Soon afterward, he opened law and insurance offices and became associated with Eugene Young. Highly successful in his own fields, Mr. Simon became keenly interested in civic and philanthropic affairs.

Besides being president of the Woodmont Country Club, Mr. Simon was a member of the District Bar Association, a director of the Security Savings & Commercial Bank, Chevy Chase Citizens' Association and a member of Harmony Lodge, No. 17, F. A. A. M.

He was also a member of the Washington Hebrew Congregation; chairman of the United Jewish Appeal, a founder of the Jewish Community Council of Washington; a member of the national board of the Joint Distribution Committee; national director and national vice president of the United Palestine Appeal, and one of the organizers of the Washington Committee for European refugees. He was also an enthusiastic golfer and fisherman.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Natalie Mayer Simon, two daughters, Miss Ruth Simon and Miss Jane Simon, and a son, Louis Simon, now serving abroad in the United States Navy.

Why the sponsors didn't think of calling the series "Penny Serenade," I don't know.

Because it will be all about the annual 1-cent sale which all Rexall Drug Stores throughout the Nation are having, starting tomorrow, April 26, and running through Saturday, May 2.

The Rexalls rather pleasant method of calling your attention to this profitable commercial fact is a group of four radio programs which you'll hear over WJSV at 12:15 tomorrow; at 9:30 a. m. on Tuesday, April 28; at 9:30 a. m. on Thursday, April 30, and at 11:15 a. m. on Saturday, May 2.

But, instead, they're calling it "The Parade of Stars."

The principal ingredients will be Comedian Ken Murray as the master of ceremonies; Judy Canova, as his hillbilly stooge; John Conte, as a singer of popular songs, and Meredith Willson's Orchestra, as Meredith Willson's Orchestra. And, oh yes, there'll be another participant, name of Harlow Wilcox, whose job it will be to say something about the Rexalls' 1-cent sale.

Ken Murray has been around stage, screen and radio—they're always mentioned in that order, for some reason—for many years, and as a result is widely known for his ingratiating wit.

Judy Canova has been around vaudeville and the movies, ditto, and is widely known for her hilarious impersonations of rustic characters.

Conte has been around the radio, also ditto, and is etc., etc., for his very fine singing voice.

The Post Radio Highlights

11:05 a. m., WJSV—Burl Ives and Milton Bacon receive increased broadcast time for their folksongs and stories, God's Country.
1:30, WRC—Salute to Lieut. Commander E. H. O'Hare.
1:45, WJSV—Senator Elbert Thomas talks of his new book, "Thomas Jefferson, World Citizen," with Vesta Eales.
2, WRC—"The Nightingale and the Rose," a one-act opera composed especially for radio, has its premiere with Frank Black conducting, Vivian della Chiesa, Felix Knight, Earl Wrightson and a symphony orchestra.
3:15, WRC—And here's the Penn Relays, Bill Stern announcing.
3:30, WJSV—Washington plays ball with Arch McDonald at the mike.
5, WJSV—Premiere: The Budapest String Quartet begins a spring season from the Library of Congress, programming Mozart's C major Quartet and John Alden Carpenter's Quartet.
7, ALL NETWORKS AND WWDC—"Smith Against the Axis." James Cagney has the lead in tonight's This Is War drama, written by 27-year-old Ranald MacDougall.
8:30, WJSV—Hobby Lobby: Mrs. Wales Latham, founder of "Bundles for Britain" and "Bundles for America," and Ona O'Neill, daughter of Playwright Eugene O'Neill.
8:30, WOL—Newly-titled America Loves a Melody goes to South America for its melodies.
9, WJSV—Hit Parade choice: Dinah Shore.
10:15, WOL—Jarmila Novotna, Czech soprano of the Met, sings on America Preferred.
10:15, WRC—Labor for Victory: C. I. O. night.
11:15, WRC—James Stephens' "Darling"—told by Nelson Olmsted.

Paul, sitting North at a five-diamond contract, doubled by East, made game by developing an unusual strip and end-play on the doubler. Here is how M. D. G. analyzes the play:

"East led the heart king, which was ruffed by declarer. The success of the hand obviously depended on converting the spade queen into a trick. North decided that the jump overcall and subsequent double marked East with the spade king.

"Therefore, after taking one round of trumps, he led a club from the closed hand. East played small and dummy's ten won the trick. Another club to the king was taken by East, who continued with the heart queen. North trumped, cashed the queen of clubs and then led the jack of hearts, on which he discarded a spade from his hand. After taking this trick, East was all through."

If East returned a heart or a club, declarer would ruff on the board and throw off the losing spade from the closed hand. If East shifted to his only other suit, spades, declarer would overtake the king with the ace and then cash the queen, or, if a small spade was led, let it ride around to the queen. He made five diamonds, doubled, losing one club and one heart trick.

"It is probable," our friend continues, "that East should have tried to befog the issue by playing the heart ace on his second lead, but I do not think this would have induced Mr. Paul to change his plan, as West had played the heart deuce on the opening lead, denying the queen.

"To me there is an amusing sidelight to the hand. Had East decided to return a club when in with the club ace, and the declarer decided (which I am sure he would not have) to get 'fancy' on the hand, he would also have made the hand, with very small credit to himself."

If declarer leads a small spade from dummy toward the queen, and when West puts up the nine lets him hold the trick, then he is lucky enough to drop the king with the ace on the next spade lead, M. D. G. points out.

Receivership Sought For Jap Shipping Line

San Francisco, April 24 (AP).—A petition asking that Nippon Yusen Kaisha, Japanese shipping line, be thrown into bankruptcy, was filed in Federal Court by three creditors.

The creditors, Matson Navigation Co., Walter N. Moore Dry Goods Co., and S. L. Jones & Co., charge the company concealed and removed property to the home office in Japan, intending to deprive creditors.

Rise in Cream Price Scheduled Friday

Milk May Also Go Up; Md.-Va. Producers Approve Amendment to Marketing Order

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Washingtonians can look forward to a sharp increase in the price of cream and possibly a 1-cent boost on a quart of milk, beginning Friday.

This was made certain yesterday when the board of directors of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association voted to approve, under protest, a new and revolutionary price schedule for producers and handlers.

The association adopted a resolution explaining that the proposal advocated by Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard is being given "qualified approval only because it believes that to disapprove the amendment and thereafter to request suspension or termination of the order would disrupt the market even while this association was endeavoring to obtain prompt hearing to correct the situation."

To become effective May 1, the revised Federal milk marketing order keeps in effect the present milk price—organized farmers had demanded a cent-a-quart increase—but gives them a 60 per cent increase on that part of their sales which are disposed of in the form of fluid cream, chocolate milk and buttermilk.

Producers in Opposition

This plan, recommended to Secretary Wickard by Roy F. Hendrickson, Agricultural Marketing Administrator, was strenuously opposed not only by the producers' association but also by the Capital's largest dairies. It was supported by organized consumer groups as a means of holding down the retail price of milk.

Approval, even though it was qualified, of the revised Federal order by the Maryland-Virginia association guarantees its adoption. By law, three-fourths of the dairy farmers involved must give assent and the association's membership is more than sufficient to satisfy that requirement.

It is also provided that the revised order shall be signed by at least 50 per cent of the handler companies, but even if they do not comply the amendments can become effective if signed by President Roosevelt.

"If there is no loss of fluid cream sales and if there is no bootlegging (of cream) and if it is possible to maintain the cream price at the high level suggested, then and only then will dairymen receive a real increase in price from the adoption of these amendments," said Bruce B. Derrick, manager of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association.

Willing to Try It

"However, we are willing to try it and if it works we will be the first ones to favor its continuance."

Since retail prices of milk and cream are not regulated in the District, changes to be made under the revised order are still conjectural. It is, as Derrick commented, "up to the milk dealers."

An inkling of what may come was yielded, however, in the formal protest against the disputed amendment which was filled on April 14 by Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase, Washington's largest dairy. That company forecast a 6-cent boost in the price of cream, per half pint, and a 1-cent per quart rise on milk.

At present the delivered price of milk is 15 cents a quart and cream is 16 cents a half-pint.

Under the new Federal order handlers will continue to pay farmers $3.57 a hundredweight for fluid milk, plus premiums which average 32 cents. However, with milk which is to be processed as cream due to be brought into the same class, the same price will have to be paid. The present scale is $2.10, plus premiums.

The producers' association protested that this plan does not "constitute the only practical means of advancing the interests of the producers in the Washington area."

Further, "the amendment is unsound because, based on past experience, it is believed (1) that its operation will result in a decrease in Class II (cream) sales unless dealers shift the loss on cream by increasing the price of fluid milk to consumers and (2) it will induce 'bootlegging' of uninspected products."

N. J. War Plant Closed as 2200 Go on Strike

South Plainfield, N. J., April 24 (AP).—A strike of nearly all 2200 employes of the Cornell-Dubilier Corporation, largest work stoppage in industrial New Jersey since Pearl Harbor, virtually closed down today the plant making communications equipment for the armed forces.

The strike, second at the plant since March, 1941, began yesterday when a three-hour wage conference between company and employe representatves broke down. The War Labor Board in Washington was then asked for advice.

This municipality's six-member police force patrolled outside the plant today, but a crowd of 500 or 600 workers at the gates was orderly and there was no picketing.

P.U.C. Orders Inquiry Into Cab Contracts

Gregory Hankin, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, yesterday ordered an investigation into the contractual agreements between taxicab drivers and operating companies.

The inquiry was ordered as a result of repeated complaints by cab drivers that they have lost a good part of rate increase granted last November through the boosting of cab purchase and rental terms by the companies and associations operating them.

Hankin said the investigation will explore the "terms, conditions, reasonableness and practices" of the agreements made between drivers and companies or associations from January of last year until the end of April of this year.

The probe also will delve into agreements relating to the purchase of gasoline, oil, tires, insurance and accesories, as well as the benefits derived from membership in the taxicab associations.

Costs of the investigation, Hankin said, will be assessed against the companies, associations or others subject to the investigation.

Argument Over Tires Blocks Traffic 1½ Hours

Philadelphia, April 24 (AP).—A five-ton truck lay overturned across a busy trolley line, halting traffic for an hour and 25 minutes today while Driver Samuel Handfinger, 27, argued over the best way to right it to prevent damage to his tires.

Finally, exasperated police arrested Handfinger on a disorderly conduct charge. Repairmen righted the truck and the jam cleared.

Another Event in the Life of Mr. Hunefeld

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

John W. Hunefeld, 76, Washington's most distinguished handshaker, stroked his foot-long white beard yesterday, shook his right leg that's caused him so much trouble, blew some smoke from his nose, looked at the 34 clocks, all ticking, in his room and realized his hour wasn't up, after all.

So he rose from bed, shook his legs vigorously in his long underwear and, surprised that all parts were still undamaged, took stock of what had happened a few minutes before.

First, Hunefeld, who has missed but one New Year visit to the White House since 1925 (though he hasn't been allowed to shake an important hand there since 1932 when the custom was stopped) discovered that the two-story frame dwelling at 225 C Street Northeast, where he has a front room, was on fire, and, worse, the blaze was in the back where he couldn't see how bad it was.

With 34 clocks to keep him constantly mindful, it was his worst hour since the days he sailed in storm-ridden windjammers as a boy since he heard in 1932 that there would be no more New Year White House handshaking, since his small boat broke down, stranding him in knee-deep water down the river in 1936, or since he was knocked in the head and robbed of $60 in November, 1940. The room filled with smoke and Hunefeld got to a window and stuck his head out.

In the adjoining house, Dorothy Sullivan, 19, smelled the smoke and ran over to awaken Mrs. J. E. Allen and her 8-month-old baby, William Carson Allen. Dorothy brought the baby out. Mrs. Allen followed. Firemen put out the blaze and went up to see about Hunefeld.

For several hours thereafter he argued that if people would stop smoking cigarettes (nobody had said a cigarette caused the fire) they would live longer, like himself: that if he hadn't gotten knocked on the head, injuring his nerves, he could have run out the house yesterday and that if he sees another New Year come he'll be back at the White House again, even if he can't shake hands with the President.

Hunefeld, now keeping to bed, is surrounded by head-high piles of old pictures and enough curios to stock a shop. Placed where his eye can see it is a basket, remnant of a present the President sent him last New Year's Day. Somewhere else in the room is the President's autographed photo, sent when the old man, ill, had to break his chain of New Year visits in 1941.
